The consistory of the University of Copenhagen declined to accept the proposal of the National Geographic society that a committee, representing the American body, be present when the north polar records of Dr. Cook are first examined. Rear Admiral W. S. Schley, of the United States navy, who is a recognized authority on arctic exploration, made an interesting statement regarding the action of the National Geographic society in requesting the University of Copenhagen to allow them representation at the examination of Dr. Cook's polar data. "When an opinion is expressed by one who is known to be biased it loses all its weight in a matter of this kind," Rear Admiral Schley said. "The only statements that carry weight are made by persons of an open mind who have not prejudiced the issue in advance of getting all the facts in the case. I do not wish to criticise anything that members of the National Geographic society have done, but I will say this: The Danish experts who will examine the records of Dr. Cook are known to be by far the most competent of any in the world to judge, and what they do not known about polar exploration and examination of polar records no one can presume to tell them."

FARM · ORCHARD AND — GARDEN
BY F.E.TRIGG
REGISTER. ROCKFORD, IA.
CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED

[This matter must not be reprinted without special permission.]

CROSS FERTILIZATION.

More than one gardener has unwittingly set out a bed of imperfect or pistillate strawberry plants and been surprised at picking time that there was nothing but leaves. The blossoms, lacking the fertilizing pollen of the stamens, set no fruit. While not so pronounced, a somewhat similar condition seems to prevail in the case of varieties of pome fruits, which are so called shy bearers, illustrated in the case of the Comice pear and Spitzenburg apple. It has been found that if these varieties are set in solid blocks the blossoms are sparsely fertilized, while if other freer blossomers are alternated with them in rows the amount of fruit set is largely increased. A Rogue river valley ranch owner had an experience some years ago which nicely illustrates this point. In his orchard of Comice pear trees planted about twenty years ago there were scattered a number of seedling pears which blossomed freely, but whose fruit was practically worthless. Having this in mind and not realizing the value of the seedling trees as pollenizers, he had them carefully top grafted. The next season he got little fruit, and from this on his pear trees were an unprofitable proposition, and he could not see why. After several years the fact above referred to was brought to his attention, and Barlett scions were topgrafted into a number of the Comice trees. From that time on the ranch has been a heavy yielder, netting its owner for several years past as high as $1,000 per acre. In the same way Spitzenburg orchards have been made better money makers by planting Jonathans or Ortleys as pollenizers. In setting new orchards or buying those already set at a long price it is well to keep these facts of plant life in mind.

MIGHT LEARN FROM THE SWISS.

A friend who represents one of the large American farm implement houses in Europe, with headquarters at Zurich, Switzerland, and who naturally takes a keen interest in the most improved agricultural methods, cites an interesting fact showing the value which the Swiss farmer places on the homemade fertilizers, which are handled with such wanton waste in America. Our friend asserts that some of these farmers take such precaution in the handling of manure that they will not haul it on windy days for fear that a portion of the nitrogen laden fumes which are generated by decomposition and chemical reaction may be carried away and not absorbed by the soil, as would be the case were no air moving. The average American, who makes small account of allowing barnyard fertilizers to leach in the weather and lose half their strength, will view this Swiss precaution as well nigh ludicrous, yet this example of care and thrift is one he might well begin to emulate.

A BIG SINNER.

A matter which every tiller of the soil ought to take stock of at the close of the present season is whether the crops which he has raised this year have been above or below the average yield for each product for his own state and the whole country. If his potatoes have yielded but eighty bushels per acre, his wheat thirteen, his corn twenty-five, his oats eighteen bushels and his cotton but half a bale per acre, he has reason to assume, as it were, sackcloth and ashes, which emblems he should continue wearing until he has looked into the causes of his agricultural sin and failure and has firmly decided to repent and do better. If his record in crop production has been on the above lines, he has not only cheated himself, robbed the soil and set a bad example to his neighbors, but also quite essentially been a traitor to his country.

PALM READERS AND LOTTERIES.

When the drawing was concluded in the Cheyenne river and Standing Rock Indian land allotments at Aberdeen the latter part of October, it came to light that a resident of New England, pinning his faith to the predictions of a fortune teller, had sold his home and other possessions and gone to the new country, fully expecting to draw one of the best claims, only to be utterly disappointed. It is more than likely that the female who read his hand and pictured such glowing prospects got a good chunk of his hard earned money. Cold facts would seem to suggest that there is ordinarily enough hazarded in the expenditures connected with drawing a claim and developing it, if worth developing, without assuming the additional incubus of getting oneself balled up with a cheap skate soothsayer.

A farmers' bulletin recently issued by the department at Washington calls attention to the value of kale as a green food for hogs, cows and poultry. As a silage material it is also favored, costing but from 17 to 25 cents per ton, while corn costs from 75 cents to $1.50 per ton. Green corn yields but sixteen tons per acre, while kale will produce forty tons.

One of the quickest growing trees for purposes of a shelter belt is the white willow, but it is hardly to be commended unless the shelter is needed badly, as it is a slovenly grower and likely to become a harbor for worms. The cottonwood is a much cleaner tree, if a somewhat slower grower. Where the winter season is not too severe the Lombardy poplar serves the purpose nicely.

New Jersey has been having a splendid development agriculturally along with other sister states west and south. During 1900 the value of her agricultural products was $26,000,000, while in the interval following they have risen to $52,000,000. The secretary of the state board of agriculture attributes this increase largely to the good work which has been done in the promotion of scientific farming by the state institutes at the agricultural college.

As a result of the admission of Cuban and Porto Rican pineapples into the United States duty free the business of those who have been engaged in this line of production in Florida has been quite effectually knocked out. A feature that has made the situation worse than it would otherwise be is the fact that the Florida land on which pineapples have been grown has been largely a "made" soil, a thin white sand that has required $75 worth of fertilizer per acre annually to produce a crop. Moreover, to be on the safe side a good part of the crop has had to be raised under cover to safeguard against possible freezes. The sea island grower has neither of these things to contend with and, besides, has the advantage of water transportation rates and cheap labor.

A dairyman living at Newburg, N. Y., is entitled to a blue ribbon for the prices which he gets for his milk product, as high as 20 cents a quart being paid and the rich folk of New York city being his patrons. The cows are carefully washed and wiped before being milked, while every possible precaution is taken in the later handling of the milk to insure its being as free as possible from dirt and bacteria. To the cow keeper who squirts milk on his hands so that he can rinse the manure off the cows' teats and allows this combination to drizzle into the milk pail the above precautions would seem the height of fussiness, but if there is one thing more than another today that is a drag on the dairy and creamery business of the country it is this same lack of cleanliness.

THE THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS

VOL. XXVI. THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1909 NUMBER 50

INFORMATION IS WANTED

A. J. McGuire Wants to Know What Farmers Have on Hand to Sell.

New Market to Be Established in the City of Duluth for Farmers' Benefit.

A. J. McGuire of the experiment farm at Grand Rapids, Minn., is sending out a circular letter to the farmers of Northern Minnesota, asking what products they now have on hand for which they have no home market.

The letter follows in the trail of the meeting held at the Duluth Commercial club a few days ago, when it was decided to establish a farmers' market in Duluth and it is thought it will be one of the best in the state.

The object just at this time in sending out the printed matter is to let every farmer in the northern part of the state know that there is to be a market in Duluth. The farmers themselves are the most important factor in building up the market, and they seem to be enthusiastically in favor of such a move.

Secretaries of farm clubs and other persons in a position to know their local conditions, and what is grown to best advantage, are requested to write to Mr. McGuire at Grand Rapids, and tell him the kinds of products for sale in their respective communities.

The letter follows:

To the farmers of Northern Minnesota:

"At a joint meeting of the Duluth Commercial club and delegates of the Farmers' Clubs of Northern Minnesota held in Duluth Nov. 26 and 27, it was decided to establish a farmer's market in Duluth. The plan of organization and operation is now being drawn up by a committee and will be submitted at the next meeting of the above mentioned associations.

"A committee was also appointed to determine the products (potatoes and other root crops) the farmers of Northern Minnesota now have on hand and for which they have no home market. When this is determined, steps will be taken to provide sale for the same in Duluth.

"Secretaries of farmers clubs or other persons, in a position to learn conditions, are requested to write to A. J. McGuire, Experimental Farm, Grand Rapids, Minn., stating the amount and kinds of farm products for sale in their respective communities. This report should be made before Jan. 1. "A. J. McGUIRE,
"Grand Rapids, Minn."

Prices of Twine.

The state board of control and Warden Wolfer have fixed the prices for binder twine to be sold to farmers next season, the output will be about 18,000,000 pounds. Prices and grades are as follows: Standard 500 feet to the pound 6¾ cents; sisal, 500 feet to the pound 6¾ cents; standard manila, 550 feet to the pound, 8 cents; pure manila 650 feet to the pound, 9¼ cents: all f. o. b., Stillwater, Minn. These prices range one-fourth cent a pound below last year's prices on the three best grades viz., pure manila, 600 foot manila and standard manila. The prices on standard and sisal are the same as last year, not withstanding the high price of sisal fiber. These low prices have been made possible, because of favorable fiber contracts.

The Gazette Does Not Always Tell the Truth.

Peddlers' Bill Knocked Out.

The supreme court of Minnesota has affirmed the decision of Judge Snow of Winona, declaring the peddlers' license law passed by the last legislat ure un constitutional and peddlers in Minnesota need not pay a license to the state.

The peddlers' license bill defined "hawkers, peddlers and transient merchants," and provided for the payment of fees ranging from $50, in cases where two horses were used by the peddler, to $10 in cases where push carts were used, or the peddler conducted his business by means of a basket. Transient merchants were to pay a fee of $150. The license fees were to be paid directly to the state. The act did not apply to cities of more than 50,000 population.

The supreme court holds the law is unstitutional in that it is a tax measure which does not fall uniformly and evenly on all peddlers, and that it is unconstitutional as police regulation, because class regulation legislation.

Julius Schmal, secretary of state says that a little more than $4,000 has been paid into the state treasury under the peddlers' license law. This money cannot be refunded, however, except by act of the legislature.

Soo Files Survey.

A Survey of the proposed cutoff of the Soo road connecting the Winnipeg with the Duluth-Brooten branch was filed today with Julius A. Schmahl, secretary of state, by the company.

This cutoff will be about 175 miles long and will extend from Moose Lake on the Duluth-Brooten line to Plummer, fourteen miles south of Thief River Falls, on the Winnipeg line. It will parallel the Great Northern from Schley to Bemidji, but otherwise will open new country.

New stations will be Finland, Lawler, McGregor, Palisade, on the Mississippi, Boy River, Bain, Federal Dam, at the foot of Leech lake, and some others.—Minneapolis Journal.

MUST BURN SLASHINGS

Northern Minnesota Lumberman Ordered to Burn Slashings and Other Debris.

Object Is to Prevent the Spread of Forest Fires in the State.

A circular has been issued by Gen. C. C. Andrews, state forestry commissioner, calling the attention of fire wardens and lumber companies to the law passed last winter requiring the piling and burning of slashings where timber is being cut, says the St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Gen. Andrews does not anticipate much trouble in enforcing the law, as some of the larger lumber companies, like the Weyerhaeusers, have notified him that they intend to comply to the letter.

"Persons, who make slashings must pile and burn them as their work progresses and not let them accumulate,"

"In the Minnesota national forest at Cass Lake slashings are successfully piled and burned when the snow is on the ground. They are not to be burned in dry seasons nor in windy weather. It is not expected they will be burned during a rain or snow storm, but under ordinary circumstances there should not be delay of more than a week. It is not expected that every particle of the slashings will be consumed to ashes, but that enough be burned to prevent future danger,

"Wardens should enforce the law without stopping to ask the opinion of the forestry commission. If they have evidence of violation of the law the proper thing to do is to go before some intelligent justice and make complaint. It will be for the public good if courts will impose the maximum penalty".

A circular quotes William O'Niel, superintendent of logging at the Cass Lake national forest, who says in a circular that many of the loggers up there have been burning their brush at the time of cutting, with profit to themselves and at the same time have destroyed a very small percentage of green timber.

The Judge Speaks Up.

At the opening of the term of court last week, Judge Grindeland in his charge to the grand jury called attention to the importance of enforcing the laws that are placed on the statute book for the protection of property, whether from theft, fire or ruination of farms by permitting noxious weeds to go to seed and scatter over our fertile lands, impairing their productiveness.

The judge said in part: "There are road officers, who are negligent of their duties in permitting noxious weeds to go to seed along our public highways and thus they become spread over our lands, destroying otherwise valuable farming lands. I want to call your attention to the chapter of our statute relating to noxious weeds and their destruction, and I call your attention to this law as it is a notorious fact that in a large measure the law is entirely ignored throughout the whole county".

The judge then read the entire statute governing the eradication of noxious weeds. By thus publicly calling attention to the seriousness of all weed problem, the judge shows that he has an eye to the public welfare. Many good farms in this valley have been ruined, temporarily at least, by foul weeds. Let Judge Grindeland's timely warning be heeded in this and all other counties in the state. —Warren Sheaf.

Greeley Carr Sells Out.

Greeley E. Carr has sold his interest in the Hotel Koochiching to his partner, W. W. Gregory, who will continue the business along the same plan of giving the public one of the very best hotels in northern Minnesota.—International Falls Press.

A Big Success.

The masque skating ball given by the Mozark Roller Rink Club, last Friday evening was a big success. There were over 226 persons in attendance all of whom were well pleased with the evenings entertainment. Mr. James Wemple, as the "Big Baby" secured first prize, Miss Violet Rayson as the "Niggah Gal" second, Mr. Ferdie Brown as "The Cowboy" third and "The Spooney Girl" fourth.

Made Good Money.

Believes Twenty Acres Enough.

A Nebraska farmer has 20 acres of land from which he is now caring for his family and saving $1000 a year. Ten years ago he came from Switerland and landed without money. He worked out three years, saved up $275, bought 20 acres of land on which he still resides, and is now worth several thousand dollars, all of which he has made on this little farm. He believes in intense farming, and makes the ground produce two or more crops, where most farmers cannot even raise one good one. He says that to have 320 acres is a misfortune, and to have 640 acres is a calamity. This may be true in a sense. It is not so much the number of acres put in but the size of the yield that counts. One man got 30 bushels from two acres, and another man may get 30 bushels from one acre of the same kind of land by proper fertilization and cultivation. Why should one man have a nice field of grain and his neighbor across the road have a poor crop? It cannot be that the soil is altogether to blame.

The Vaughan store was robbed of between $500 and $1000 in cash and other articles of value taken. There were four customers in the store at the time of the robbery and they were also relieved of what cash they had upon their person. In writing to friends in this city, Mr. Vaughan says that the revolvers of the bandits looked awful big and no resistance was offered upon the part of any of the people of Collins.

The Northfield News prints the following list of political information:

It is worth while these days to keep one's eyes on A. D. Stephens of Crookston. A. D. has powerful friends. He has taken a prominent part in the movement for agricultural and industrial education. Indeed, he has made it a hobby, and much that has been recently done in this state in that direction is due to his effort. He is a shrewd and capable political manager. He is a Swede. He is said to be quietly nursing a senatorial ambition; and why not? Senator Nelson is a Norwegian; and are not the Swedes entitled to share senatorial honors from Minnesota? And Stephens has the backing and the ability; and he may be able to head off John Lind.

FARMERS ARE PROSPEROUS.

Secretary Wilson last week made public his thirteenth annual report concerning the work of the Department of Agriculture and the condition of the industry with which that department deals, throughout the United States, and it contains figures that are almost fabulous.

"Most prosperous of all years is the place to which 1909 is entitled in agriculture," he says. "The yield has been bountiful while most crops and prices have been high. Advantageously situated as he is in most respects, the farmer is less and less generally compelled to dump his crops on the market at the time of harvest. He does not need to work for his board and clothes as he did often in former times, when prices were so low as to be unprofitable.

"The agricultural production of 1909 must add to the prosperity of the farmers. The record is unexampled in wealth produced and tells of abundance in quantity. Year by year the farmer is better and better prepared to provide the capital and make the expenditures needed to improve his agriculture and educate his children for farm life and work."

In those mild phrases Secretary Wilson restrains his enthusiasm over unprecedented conditions of volume and price which have brought the farmers of the United States a revenue of $8,760,000,000 for the current year. It is true, as the secretary says, that the value of farm products is so incomprehensibly large that it has become a row of figures. Ten years ago the total value of all the farm crops produced in the United States was little more than one-half of their value this year. The compensation of the farmers for their labor has more than doubled since James Wilson began to make these reports. This year it is $8,760,000,000. The gain over 1908 is $869,000,000, and during the last eleven years the total has been $70,000,000,000.

No wonder Secretary Wilson says: "It has paid off mortgages; it has established banks; It has helped to make the farmer a citizen of the world; it has provided him with means for improving the soil and making it more productive."

Prices of all kinds of produce from the field, from the pasture, from the garden, from the barnyard and the poultry-house are advancing steadily. The more the farmer produces the higher the price he receives for it, which is a reversal of the ordinary laws that have hitherto governed trade and industry.

No country in the world, no period in the history of mankind, ever saw such a prolonged or remarkable prosperity as the farmers of the United States have enjoyed. They are the only class of the population whose advance in wealth has been without interruption for a period of thirteen years.

The census of the United States for 1900 reports 5,939,657 farms, which have undoubtedly increased 10 per cent in number during the interval of nine years, and today there are probably 6,300,000 productive farms in the country. On this basis the average production was about $1,400 per farm.

Secretary Wilson gives some interesting details. "The most striking facts in the history of the world's agriculture," he says, "is the value of the corn crop of 1909 in this country, which amounts to about $1,720,000,000."

"This corn," he says, "came up from the soil and out of the air in 120 days—$14,000,000 a day for one crop—nearly enough for two dreadnoughts daily, for peace or war. It nearly equals the value of the clothing and adornments of 76,000,000 people, according to the census of 1900. The gold and silver coin and bullion of the United States is not of greater value.

"The value of the corn crop is the highest on record, and it is greater than the average of the five preceding years by 36 per cent, while the farm price per bushel is greater by 32 per cent. The price per bushel on Nov. 1, which was 62.7 cents, has been exceeded only once in the records of the Department of Agriculture, beginning with 1866, and that was in 1881, when it was 63.6 cents.

"In quantity of production this year's corn crop stands second, with 2,767,000,000 bushels, being exceeded by the crop of 1906, but it is greater than the average crop of the five preceding years by 3.5 per cent.

The United States produced 22,000,000 bushels of rice last year, which brought the growers about $18,000,000 at 80 cents a bushel. Inasmuch as the consumer has to buy this at the rate of three pounds for a quarter, it would seem as if the railroads or somebody else were getting a mighty generous rake off.

LOOKING FOR RELATIVES

United States Government Consul Tells the So-Called "Spanish Swindle."

Many Residents of Thief River Falls and Vicinity Have Received Letters.

The Department of State at Washington, has received a report from the American Consul General at Barcelona, Spain, in regard to the band of swindlers operating in various towns and cities in Spain, who make a practice of writing to persons in the United States respecting the imprisonment of a relative and the guardianship of a child. Of late many letters have been written to Thief River Falls parties, but we have not heard of any person being swindled.

The Consul-General states that the alleged prisoner generally describes himself as a political prisoner from Cuba; he is at the point of death and has but one friend—the prison priest—through whose good offices he is enabled to smuggle an occasional letter out of the prison fort.

The prisoner is rich. He has a fortune in cash on deposit in the United States, but the certificate of deposit is concealed in a secret receptacle of his valise, the valise itself has been taken possession of by the court at Carthagena, which tried and convicted him, and will be held until the prisoner or his representative has satisfied the costs of the trial. The prisoner has an only daughter; dying in his prison, his sole thought is of this beloved offspring. He has no friend or relative in Spain to whose care he can commit her. In this emergency his thoughts turn to the distant relative in the United States whom he has never seen and of whom he knows only of hearsay or the family tree. Will the distant relative assume the guardianship of the darling daughter, and the darling daughter's fortune of about $30,000? If the distant relative accepts the trust one-fourth of the prisoner's entire fortune will be the material reward. The good priest will go at once to the United States and take the darling daughter with him. There is but one condition: the ready money, which the prisoner brought with him to Spain has been exhausted: the distant relative is therefore requested to send enough to liberate the valise containing the secret receptacle and the certificate of deposit. This money is to be sent to the good priest at an address indicated, and, having received it, the good priest will at once secure the valise and start for America, the "land of the free and the home of the brave," with the darling daughter.

The above is generally the first letter of the series. It is quickly followed by another in which the prisoner pathetically states that his strength is rapidly failing and the end is near. He beseeches his dear distant relative to assume the the trust and be a loving father to the darling daughter. The third letter is from the good priest himself, who in brief, touching terms, and hopelessly bad English, announces the death of the unhappy prisoner; the good priest adds that the darling daughter is under his care. He is ready to put his promise into execution and start for the United States as soon as he shall have received the necessary funds from the distant relative. The good priest frequently incloses with his letter a bogus newspaper clipping announcing the death in prison at Barcelona of the famous Cuban patriot (sometimes called Augustin Lafiente); the newspaper notice also speaks cunningly of the confiscated valise and the darling daughter.

It is a simple scheme, but presented in such a plausible way that almost any unsuspecting "distant relative" of European extraction would be more or less deceived by the glad prospect of falling heir to the agreable custody of a darling daughter with a big fortune, and a one-fourth interest therein as an additional recompense.

Naturally the first impulse of the distant relative is to ask a lawyer or a judge or some authority what course he ought to pursue in the premises, but as he thinks of doing this his attention is taken by the warning in the prisoner's letter beseeching him not to mention the matter to any living soul lest the secret of the valise and the hidden receptacle be indiscreetly betrayed.

The valise, after all, with its concealed certificate of deposit, is the key to the situation and possession must be taken of it before anything can be done or said. This (so cunningly set forth by the prisoner) is very evident to the distant relative, and so he quite frequently preserves the secret intact, and instead of consulting a lawyer or writing to the American Consul-General at Barcelona he quietly sends a draft for the sum demanded to the good priest and awaits results. Of course he waits in vain, and the poor, dead prisoner and the good priest and the darling daughter in the course of time pass out of his life forever, leaving him only an uncomfortable memory of the money he so cheerfully contributed to the confidence game.

For nearly twenty years these same knaves have been practicing their swindle, and it is needless to suggest that they are very carefully organized; they have confederates not only in the United States, but in most other countries. The confederates in question select a man and find out all they can about him; they get hold of family names, family origin, and family characteristics. The information is transmitted to the rascals in Spain, and letters are at once written to the prospective victim. The scheme is presented and developed in a very plausible way and many of our fellow-countrymen have "bitten" promptly and cheerfully.

Under the Spanish laws a felony must be consummated before the police may act, and a mere attempt to obtain money by false pretenses does not appear to warrant arrest. The money must be actually paid over and the prosecuting witness must be present in propria persona to testify; otherwise prosecution would be useless.

Recently the letters written to the distant relative have varied somewhat from the original; the political prisoner having become a noted Russian banker who absconded, leaving a deficit of some millions of roubles, killed in a quarrel in England another Russian, and finally took refuge in Spain, where he was apprehended and charged with manslaughter.

This change of character, however, is immaterial, and in the future more new characters will probably be introduced by the gang. The scheme is the same, and the public is warned to place no credence in such or similar letters.

Every effort has been made by the Department of state and its representatives in Spain to unmask these scoundrels and bring them to justice, and the Spanish authorities have also been active and several members of the gang have been apprehended and held for trial, but so far no convictions have resulted, owing probably to the peculiarity of the Spanish law referred to in the report of the Consul-General at Barcelona.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Marshall Harlow, a farmhand employed by Herman Weinkauf, ten miles north of Pipestone, went to a cupboard and took a bottle of carbolic acid and drank the contents of the bottle. Then he returned to the room where the members of the family were sitting, and joined them in conversation until the drug caused him to fall from the chair, dying in a short time. No cause is given for his act.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Emperor William opened the German reichstag by personally reading the speech from the throne. The speech dealt largely with domestic legislation and contained the important announcement that the government had prepared a measure extending the sick benefit insurance to the working classes not heretofore protected and creating a system of insurance for the dependent relatives of deceased workers.

Premier Asquith's resolution declaring that the house of lords' rejection of the budget constituted a breach of the constitution and a usurpation of the rights of the house of commons was carried by a vote of 349 to 134. Prior to this action Premier Asquith announced that the government had advised King Edward to dissolve parliament and that his majesty had accepted the invitation.

The house of lords, by a vote of 350 to 75, rejected the budget bill as passed by the house of commons. This action has created a situation unprecedented in English history, at least for 300 years. The matter now will be referred to the country itself for judgment and meantime, in theory at least, it is illegal to collect taxes and carry on the king's government.

Fanatical Moros and Sananos forced a fight upon a detachment of constabulary under Lieutenant Elarts near Mount Malindang, Philippine islands. Six members of the constabulary, four porters and one policeman were killed and one of the constabulary was wounded. The aggressors left twenty of their number dead when they finally scattered.

Supported by patriotic sentiment, which has gripped the very heart of the empire, the Japanese military council, following the successful conclusion of the autumn maneuvers, is preparing the plans for an army increase which will add fifty regiments of infantry to the imperial army.

The shores of the Azores are littered with the wrecks of ships that were destroyed in a storm that swept the coast. Estimates of the dead run as high as 100. The damage on land is as great as at sea and hundreds of houses that dotted the coast were swept away.

An individual, believed to be insane and having an imaginary grievance against the French war department, shot and seriously wounded General Verand on the steps of the Hotel Continental at Paris.

Duke Theodor of Bavaria is dead from kidney trouble. Duke Karl never figured prominently in military or political affairs, but studied medicine and became a famous eye specialist.

At least 200 persons are believed to have been drowned by a hurricane that swept the coast of Great Britain for several days.

Bishop T. A. Hendricks of the diocese of Cebu, Philippine islands, is dead of cholera.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

The hunting season was marked by more fatal accidents than usual, the number of dead reaching eighty-seven and the injured sixty-eight. In the previous year fifty-seven were slain; eighty-two in 1907 and seventy-four in 1906. Wisconsin and Upper Michigan continue to furnish the greatest number of victims.

PROHIBITIONISTS PLAN FIGHT

Result of the Stopping of the Sale of Liquor in Stockholm Leads Them to Start an Agitation in Favor of a General Prohibition—Petitions Will Be Circulated In All Parts of Sweden, Giving the People an Opportunity to Express Views.

SWEDEN.

Reports from Stockholm state that the result of the prohibition of the sale of liquor during the recent strike were so satisfactory that the temperance people are now going to start an agitation in favor of general prohibition. How well they will succeed time alone can tell. Yet the leading temperance associations have mapped out a plan of campaign which is very comprehensive in its scope. In the first place they plan to circulate petitions in all parts of the country, and efforts will be made to give every person a chance to sign these petitions. One these petitions persons will also receive the privilege of affixing their "yes" or "noes," in order to give the opposite party a chance also. Those who are in favor of the liquor trade are already squirming under this arrangement. They foresee that those who vote "yes" under those conditions will be in the majority. They explain that those who are in favor of prohibition will come out in the open and yell "yes" to a man, while a large majority of those who are opposed to prohibition will not care to pose before the public as the champions of the saloons. A Swedish daily newspaper states in a recent issue: "This campaign will arouse great opposition, for it is intended to mislead public opinion, and the figures which will be based on the result of the canvass will not tell the truth.'"

There was a learned audience which gathered in London on the evening of Nov. 5 at the annual Huxley memorial meeting, which was held under the auspices of the Royal Anthropological Institute of England. The lecturer of the evening was Professor Retzius of Stockholm, who addressed the learned audience on the subject entitled: "The North European Race." He touched in detail on the anthropological researches which had been conducted in Sweden and said that facts could be produced to show that the Swedish race was the least mixed race on earth. After the lecture he was awarded the Huxley medal.

Major Hjalmar Fogelmark, engineer in chief of the Swedish State Railways, and G. Samuelison, L. Loven, O. Kjellstrom, assistant engineers, will make a tour in America and Canada for the purpose of studying American and Canadian railway and bridge construction. They will start some time in January and will visit all the leading cities in the United States and Canada. They will be absent from Sweden at least six months.

Lektor P. P. Waldenstrom, who attended the big church meeting, introduced the following resolutions: 1. That church shall be separated from state; 2. That parents may under certain conditions have their children excused from religious instructions at the schools, and 3. To exclude the words "God the Father" and the "Holy Ghost" from the "blessing." All three resolutions were promptly voted down by the conference.

Dr. Sven Hedin, on his birthday, Nov. 9, was by King Edward awarded the Commander's cross of the Imperial Order of India. It will be difficult for Dr. Hedin to keep track of all the "stars" and "crosses" that have been issued in his honor by kings and emperors, and scientific societies in all parts of the globe. Mr. Hedin remains as democratic as ever and he does not permit his head to swell in the least.

A writer in a Stockholm daily says: "Sweden's egg export to England is rapidly increasing, and the same is the case with butter. But the Englishmen are not always satisfied with our eggs as they do not always reach them in a fresh condition. Why not export the rotten eggs to China, where they demand a higher price the older they get?"

The temperance people have won another victory at Sundsvall in the granting of their request that there shall be no sale of liquor in the place on Saturday. The restriction was asked for one time when there was a reorganization of the regulation in reference to the liquor traffic in the community.

Swedish Lutherans in Melbourne, Australia, are planning the erection of a $9,000 brick church to be built in Gothic style and with a seating capacity for 300 persons. A considerable part of the building fund was contributed in Sweden.

The Bishop of Salisbury, England, lately made a visit to Sweden. He sojourned for a time at the Mission Society school in Lidingon, and conferred with Dr. Waldenstrom about the free church movement in Sweden.

The Sunday school is constantly receiving more attention in the State Church of Sweden. In various places the clergy of the State Church are acting as Sunday school teachers.

Prince Bernadotte has insured his children, the Count and Countess of Viborg, in the National Life Insurance company, Norden, for a sum of 150,000 crowns.

NORWAY.

Charles B. Cheney, who is writing a series of articles for the Minneapolis Journal on affairs in Sweden and Norway, gives the following resume of the recent election in Norway: "The election has been full of surprises. The one emphatic note in the result is reaction. The vote is a mandate from the people calling for a halt in radical legislation and robuking socialist agitation. The growth of manufacturing centers in Norway has made new nursing grounds for socialism, and it was fully expected that the socialists would increase their ten seats to fifteen or twenty at this election. Instead, they have only nine up to date, with a probability of winning two others. One factor in the reaction has been the alliance of the "venstre" leaders with socialists in many districts. In Norway, as in France, the first poll is not decisive unless one candidate obtains a majority over all. So less than half the seats were filled by the general election, Oct. 11, and second votes are being taken to decide between the highest candidates. In districts where the issue is between a conservative and a socialist the radical leaders have been openly throwing their influence for the socialist. This has given new color to the charge that the ministry is socialistic. One of the floor leaders of the radical party, Konnow of Hedenmarken, has rebelled and has made an independent declaration urging radicals to support conservatives in preference to socialist candidates. This situation, coupled with the certainty that the "right" probably will control the next Storthing, will probably result in the still further gains for reaction in the last elections, but a few seats more or less will make little difference now. The Knudsen ministry, appears to be on its last legs and January will see a change of government in the kingdom of Norway."

During the recent election in Norway it is shown that women very generally exercised their right of suffrage. In Christiania the total vote was swelled from 41,000 in 1906 to 78,000 in 1909. It is, therefore, practically certain that at least one woman will occupy a seat in the Storthing. The three women candidates for Storthing seats were all defeated, but Miss Anna Rogstad, a teacher in the public schools in Christiania, was elected as alternate to J. K. M. Bratlie, a conservative, General Bratlie, as he is commonly known, will undoubtedly be given a place in the new ministry. He will thus have to vacate his seat in the Storthing and Miss Rogstad will enjoy the honor of being the first Norwegian woman to have a place in the parliament of the nation. She is said to be a woman of much force and character, and already is a member of the city council in Christiania.

Mrs. Hjort's home for the feeble minded at Christiana, recently received a donation of 1,000 crowns from the estate of the late Caroline Bauer, a benevolent women, who is very wealthy. She has on previous occasions donated large sums of money to Christiania institutions of charity.

The Lutheran university of Christiania, Norway, will celebrate its centenary in 1911. King Haakon has given 10,000 crowns toward the erection of a large hall for the exercises, and Norwegians in this country promise to raise 50,000 crowns additional.

DENMARK.

Prime Minister Zahle, of Denmark, who violated all court traditions by going to a royal reception wearing a black slouch hat, and his wife, who retains her place as stenographer in the Danish parliament, are subjects of many jokes in European papers. The current number of Ulk has a cartoon showing Herr Zahle making an address in parliament. His wife, rising from the reporters' table, says: "Hubby, dear, just wait a moment; make a little pause; Europe must have patience, the point of my pencil has broken off."

Astronomer Stromgren, who with Dr. Pichule will examine Dr. Cook's papers, suggests that polar explorers and other scientists should join the committee of examination, as it does not want to accept the responsibility of alone deciding whether or not Dr. Cook reached the pole. The university is willing to comply with the suggestion, although it is now thought to be impossible to obtain satisfactory results before Dr. Cook's original papers arrive from Utah. His papers from America are expected within a few days.

The miserable Alberti affair is still in progress and occupying the attention of the public in no little degree. It was hoped that by the first of this month that the whole thing could be settled, but there are plenty of indications that "new things are in sight." Alberti himself is reported to be in no little degree cocked up over the fact that he has been able to cause so much trouble in the world of finance and politics.

Knud Rasmussen, who recently returned from an extended expedition in Greenland, brought with him a little polar bear, which he presented to the Danish king a short time ago. He seems to thrive excellently in the zoo, but does not reside as some people would suppose at the royal palace. The king prefers to pay a visit to the bear at the zoo instead. Anyway King Fredrik is very fond of going there.

Bishop Rordan, of the Sjaelland diocese, Denmark, died recently at the age of seventy-seven years. He had been one of the most influential men of the Gulivg tendency and is the author of a number of theological works.

ATTEMPT TO BURN BUILDING

Incendiaries Set Fire to a Block at Anoka.

During a severe storm of wind and snow firebugs made a determined effort to burn a brick block in the center of the business district of Anoka.

The block, a two-story brick, is owned by Mrs. Ida Whitton, and the first floor is leased by A. G. Cronkhite, proprietor of a cafe, and the upper floor by the Twentieth Century and Commercial clubs.

The fire was discovered when the wind was blowing a gale, and was not under control until four hours later. The city hall, Jackson hotel and other buildings, some of them the best and most substantial in the city, were in the path of the flames and might have been destroyed but for the good work of the firemen.

The Whitton building and its contents were damaged more by water than by flames, and the block will soon be repaired and occupied again. The total loss has not been estimated, but it is well covered by insurance.

An investigation was made after the fire and it was found that corn cobs saturated with kerosene and other inflammable substances had been scattered in the basement. There are no clues to the incendiaries.

ARMOUR PREPARES TO BUILD

Files Deed for Land Acquired at New Brighton.

The intentions of the Armour company to establish an immense packing plant, costing millions of dollars and covering several hundred acres of ground at New Brighton, a few miles from Minneapolis, was indicated when attorneys for the company filed a deed for the strip of land with the register of deeds of Hennepin county.

It is believed that the Armour company awaited an opportune time for filing the deed and for quieting all agitation against the building of the plant at New Brighton.

Filed at the same time with the deed was a mortgage for the $50,000,000 issue of bonds put out by the Armour company for the purpose of "furthering and acomplishing the corporate objects and purposes of the company." Notice of this bond issue was given some time ago.

MINNESOTA MINER KILLED

Shot to Death by Three Intoxicated Men.

A miner named J. Parr, in the employ of the Sellers mine at Hibbing, was killed by a volley of revolver shots which were fired by three drunken men.

He was walking from Hibbing to Chisholm and when about half way to his destination encountered three men, evidently intoxicated, who were firing revolvers in all directions. One of the bullets struck Parr in the abdomen, and he fell to the ground. The three men paid no attention to him and went their way toward Hibbing.

Parr was found later and taken to a hospital in Hibbing, where he died a few hours later. A number of suspects have been arrested. Parr was single.

MAY ASSESS LARGE DAMAGES

St. Paul Patent Suit Involves More Than a Million.

The sum of $1,350,000 is the amount of damages which, it is said, may be assessed by order of the courts against the White Enamel Refrigerator company of St. Paul and the American Car and Foundry company of New Jersey in favor of the Seeger Refrigerator company, also of St. Paul, as the result of the decision of the circuit court of appeals in New Jersey, just handed down.

This decision is the culmination of three years of litigation in the federal court, which began in October, 1906, when the Seeger company sued the two other companies for infringement of a patent right.

KETHMAN IS FOUND GUILTY

Court Sentences Slayer of Dr. Egge to a Life Term.

The jury in the case of Frank Kethman, on trial at Moorhead charged with the murder of Dr. Egge on Sept. 6, brought in a verdict of guilty of murder in the second degree. Judge Taylor then sentenced Kethman to imprisonment for life.

Charged With Infanticide.

Lena Rooen of Gary, Wis., has been placed in the Polk county jail at Crookston charged with the murder of her infant child. The body of the infant was found in the Red Lake river some time ago, the evidence being that it had been strangled before being thrown into the water. The young woman was arrested at Grand Forks. Since her arrest she has made a complete confession.

REGARDING TIMBER LANDS

Important Recommendation of Commissioner Dennett.

Washington, Dec. 6.—Important recommendations of general interest in public lands states and some of them of special interest in the Northwest are contained in the annual report of Fred Dennett of North Dakota, commissioner of the general land office. Commissioner Dennett urges the passage of a law under which Chippewa Indian lands in Minnesota on which sufficient in quantity to render it sale- sufficient in quantity to render it salable, shall be entered under the provisions of the homestead law, with the requirements that the claimant pay the appraised value of the land.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

SALES HELD TO BE ILLEGAL

Government Will Restore Lands to White Earth Indians.

Prompt action will be taken by the department of justice at Washington in restoring to full blood Indians on the White Earth reservation in Minnesota titles to timber lands there roughly estimated to be worth $5,000,000 that are now asserted to be illegally in the possession of certain lumbermen and lumber companie in the state. A prominent government official is authority for the statement that under no circumstances will the cases be compromised. Those persons or companies that have acquired timber lands from full bloods that in law cannot be transferred without the sanction of the secretary of the interior will be required to relinquish their claims.

According to reports received at the Indian office there are full blooded Indians at White Earth who have, contrary to law, disposed, not only of their own allotments, both original and additional, but what are known as dead claims. In some cases as many as seven or eight such claims were sold by one full blood heir. It is said that fully 1,000 claims have been illegally disposed of and that the value of the land and timber is about $5,000,000. In addition the lands of 172 minors were disposed of without authority.

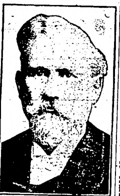
While the mixed bloods are allowed to sell their lands the full bloods, with the assistance of certain persons, under the guise of being mixed bloods, are alleged to have sold their lands, which have in many instances been denuded of their valuable timber.

It is said that 90 per cent of the lands allotted to full bloods have either been sold or mortgaged and that 80 per cent of the acreage of the reservation has passed into the hands of private owners.

SANBORN FOR HIGH COURT

Minnesota Delegation Endorses St. Paul Jurist.

It has become known at Washington that the congressional delegation from Minnesota has filed with President Taft its endorsement of Judge Walter H. Sanborn of the Eighth circuit to succeed the late Justice Peckham on the supreme bench.



JUDGE WALTER H. SANBORN.

LOUISE ARBOGAST IS FREE

Indictment Against St. Paul Girl Is Nolled.

A motion to nolle the indictment against Louise Arbogast was made before Judge Orr in the district court at St. Paul by R. D. O'Brien, county attorney, and the motion was granted.

Louise Arbogast was charged with complicity in the killing of her father, Louis Arbogast, for whose murder Mrs. Mina Arbogast, the girl's mother, was tried and acquitted a month ago.

The county attorney informed the court that there was no more evidence against Louise than was introduced at the trial of Mrs. Arbogast, intimating that inasmuch as the mother was not convicted the same evidence would not prove strong enough to convict the daughter.

Merchant Freezes to Death.

David Kanges, a well-to-do merchant of Ely, was found frozen to death sixteen miles south of that place. He had disappeared several days previous. Kanges shot a deer and after conveying it across Eagles' Nest lake on a raft lost his way in the woods when it became dark. He leaves a wife and child, who live abroad.

Whirled to Death by Shaft.

Ed Reinhardt, a grain dealer and one of Bird Island's leading business men, was instantly killed while he was working in the basement of his elevator. His clothing caught in the shafting. He was whirled around several times before the clothing tore and dropped him.

SOME TUBERCULOSIS STATISTICS

Probably no state in the Union has made a more determined or more successful warfare on bovine tuberculosis than Wisconsin, and some figures which have been lately published relative to this campaign are interesting and should also be profitable to dairymen in other sections. The educational campaign has been conducted by means of addresses, printed bulletins and postmortem demonstrations given in co-operation with the state live stock sanitary board. Since the tuberculin test was first applied, in 1892, 72,638 animals have been tested, over 66,000 of this number coming within the past three years. The state has paid the owners two-thirds of the appraised value of reacting animals, receiving in return whatever was paid for the carcasses of those animals passed by the federal inspectors. There has been a decrease in the per cent of reacting animals from 17.7 per cent in 1906 to 5.6 per cent in 1908. In 1906 almost half the herds which were tested were found infected, while in 1908 less than one-fourth had the disease. In 1906 12 per cent of the animals tested were found to be infected, and in 1908 less than 4 per cent. The data which the station officials have gathered shows that the most common method of herd infection is through the purchase of diseased animals, 263 out of 363 herds found infected in 1908 being infected through purchase. A law requiring a clean bill of health with each animal sold is strongly urged, as is also legislation requiring the pasteurization of factory byproducts.

THE FOLLY OF TEMPORIZING.

Pity it is that there are not more farm papers of the type of a few which might be named which have looked the situation touching bovine tuberculosis through to the end and have uncompromisingly in season and out of season advocated a thorough testing of affected herds and the eradication of all animals found diseased. One of these papers is Hoard's Dairyman, printed at Fort Atkinson, Wis., and the service which it has performed for the dairy interests of that and adjoining states can hardly be estimated. Those papers which have followed a temporizing policy—opposed the testing of dairy herds because the immediate loss to the owners seemed heavy—have caused dairymen who have followed this advice tremendous loss in the long run, as laws which prevent the sale of milk from diseased cows have been passed in many states, while the job of ridding a herd of diseased animals and building it up again on a new basis is one that requires much time and attention. The rest of the agricultural papers should move over to the other side of the house in this vital matter.

PRACTICAL CO-OPERATION.

A number of farmers living near Rogers, in Hennepin county, Minn., have, according to a farm paper published at the Twin Cities, put into practice this year a most commendable type of co-operation. It has consisted simply in getting their heads together and agreeing to plant a single variety of potatoes for their field crop, with the thought in view that with a large quantity of potatoes raised buyers would come and offer a good price for the crop. They exercised a good deal of pains in the growing and care of their spud crop, and their hopes have been fully realized. The tubers yielded on the average 175 bushels per acre, were of one variety and of uniform size and quality. The buyers came and paid the growers 46 cents per bushel at the cars, nearly 10 cents more than growers in many other sections received. This idea of co-operation in vegetable and fruit production is very practical and profitable, and its benefits can hardly be too strongly urged.

THE ROUTINE PALLS.

Many a lad leaves the farm for city occupation because of the dull monotonous routine of its work, in the doing of which little effort is made by the farm owner to adopt new or up to date methods which recognize the place of intelligence as well as sheer muscular effort as an important factor in getting work out of the way. There is absolutely no field of endeavor where the application of brains will yield a larger net return than in agriculture, and it's about time a whole lot of fellows who have been content to make a clodhopper occupation of it were rubbing their eyes and awaking to the fact. It can only be viewed as a tribute to agriculture as an occupation that so many who have been engaged in it have been able to make a living and something besides, following as they have such slovenly and indifferent methods and applying so small an amount of gray matter to the work they had in hand.

There are mighty few men who have the capacity to handle an automobile agency and run a farm or ranch as they ought to be run at the same time. Where this combination is attempted the real estate usually runs downhill.

The man who plants a tree whose shade he may not live to enjoy and of whose fruit he may not partake is a good citizen, for he has faith and is essentially unselfish. The country needs more patriots of this type and among the younger generation as well as the old.

A freak in grafting is reported by two brothers, miners, who have a garden near Delta, Colo. They grafted a scion from a four-year-old apple tree on to a service berry tree body, and in due time the inserted limb blossomed and bore two fine yellow apples. The union is a rather violent one and the results achieved quite unique.

In his book "Swine In America" Secretary Coburn of Kansas cites the case of a Colorado swine raiser who had excellent success with Hubbard squashes as a fattening ration for his pigs, securing a given result in one-half the time that he could with corn. He cut the squashes in pieces and fed them raw, the hogs eating them up clean, shell and all.

The wonderberry war goes merrily on and promises to equal in interest and partisan feeling the Cook-Peary polar scrap. Some folks are found who pronounce the wonderberry a vulgar weed perpetrated on the public at a long price, while as many others are equally warm is singing its praises. It seems to be a case where a fellow must hear the evidence presented and then be his own judge.

Considerably better heating results may be had with the deep fire box of the average steel range if the fire is checked quite a bit shortly after being started, especially if the draft is strong. This causes the flames to rise more directly to the griddles above and not scoot up the chimney unused. The air draft below the fire and the check draft in the pipe may be regulated to secure the above result.

A thought that should be consoling to the large class who have not become seriously inoculated with the money getting microbe is that its possession can add no essential element of content or happiness to lives and homes already provided with the necessities and comforts of life. Happiness is the result of an atmosphere and spirit developed in the heart and home and is not dependent upon the owning of large estates on fat bank accounts.

In selecting a material for the banking of the house it is well to use that which when packed down with a covering of snow will be the nearest air and wind proof. On this account earth from the garden can hardly be excelled. Straw or stable manure is good, but the odor from the latter may bother, while the ammonia gases likely to come from it may discolor the paint on the lower clapboards. A strip of tar paper extending from the ground to above the point where the banking will reach will obviate this latter difficulty.

THE TREATY MADE IN 1855

The Description of the "Indian Country as Provided for in the Treaty.

Prohibits Sale of Liquor in Most of the Northern Minnesota Cities and Villages.

As the liquor question is one of considerable interest just at present we give the provisions of the treaty of 1855 which has been frequently referred to by the officials where liquor cannot be introduced, and which is as follows:

"Beginning at a point where the east branch of the Snake River crosses the southern boundary-line of the Chippewa country east of the Mississipi river, as established by the treaty of July twenty-ninth, one thousand eight hundred thirty-seven, running thence up the said branch, to its source, thence nearly north in a straight line, to the mouth of East Savanah river; thence up the St. Louis river to the mouth of East Swan river; thence up said river to its source; thence, a straight line to the the most westwardly bend of the Vermillion river; thence northwestwardly in a straight line, to the first and most considerable bend in the Big Fork river; thence, down said river to its mouth, thence, down Rainy Lake river to the mouth of Black river; thence, up that river to its source; thence, in a straight line, to the northern extremity of Turtle Lake; thence, in a straight line to the mouth of the Wild Rice River; thence, up the Red River of the North to the mouth of the Buffalo river; thence, in a straight line to the southwestern extremity of Otter-Tail Lake; thence through said lake, to the source of Leaf river; thence, down said river, to its junction with the Crow Wing river; thence, down the Crow Wing river to its junction with the Mississippi river; thence to the commencement on said river of the southern boundary-line of the Chippewa country, as established by the treaty of July twenty-ninth, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-seven; thence, along said line to the place of beginning".

The laws, which have been or may be enacted by congress, regulating trade and intercourse with the Indian tribes, to continue and be in force within the several reservations provided for herein; and those portions of said laws, which prohibit the introduction, manufacture, use of, and traffic in, ardent spirits, wines or other liquors in the Indian country, shall continue and be in force within the entire boundaries of the country herein ceded to the United States until otherwise provided by congress.

Marketing Farm Products.

Proper marketing of farm products has quite as much to do with the profits of the farm as has the proper growing of crops and live stock. During the past year, most farm products have been very good, but the fact remains, nevertheless, that many have taken less for their products than they rightly should, considering the prices paid for them by the consumer. It is true also that some large farmers are getting more for their products than the average. It is to make plain some of the reasons for this that this article is written.

A farmer in the Red River Valley, who raises several hundred acres of potatoes each year has been able to develope a market for them largely for seed purposes, and he consequently gets a better price. He does not raise a superior quality of potatoes, but he has a great many carloads of the same variety. Any group of small farmers, who will get together and agree on some one, or at most, two or three varieties of potatoes to grow, and then leave it to some one man to sell the whole product so that carloads of one variety may be sold, can get as good prices for their potatoes as does this large farmer. If it costs 25c per bushel to grow potatoes, and they are selling at 30c per bushel, there is a net profit of 5c per bushel, if small lots of mixed potatoes are selling at 30c, car lots of a straight and standard variety will easily bring 35c. This will double the net profit, and the second 5c profit is much more easily earned than the first. There are large possibilities for increased profit on our farms by paying closer attention to the business side.

Any business man can afford to and will make a closer figure on a large deal than on a small one, whether buying supplies or selling some product. The man, who comes to the business man with a large deal gets a better price than he could afford to make on a smaller amount. Farmers may get the benefit of doing business on a large scale by clubbing together in buying and selling. We do not mean the organization of a large farmers' trust to arbitrarily regulate prices, but simply the co-operation of a few farmers in a neighborhood so that products may be sold and supplies purchased in a businesslike way.

The most excellent results obtained with the co-operative creamery should be duplicated in many other branches of the farming industry. That means that several farmers will get together and so operate their farms and market their products as to be able to offer for sale a large and constant supply of a uniformly good product.

Injuries Caused Death.

Dr. Charles Lindberg of Fairdale, N. D., died at Adams last Wednesday from injuries received Tuesday, when he was thrown under the wheels of a Soo passenger train.

Lindberg ran to catch a train, and managed to reach the rail of the second coach, which he grabbed on the icy platform. He was thrown under the wheels and nearly every rib was broken, while his jugular vein was cut in some manner He lived from Tuesday noon until the following morning at 1 o'clock. Dr. Lindburg was 35 years old, and had resided at Fairdale three years.

A MINISTER IS FROZEN

Rev. Ole O. Fugleskjel, Well Known in This Section, Frozen to Death.

Worked as a Missionary in the Lumber Camps Up in the Rainy River Conntry.

The body of Rev. Ole O. Fugleskjel, a Scandinavian Lutheran missionary who is known to many residents of Thief River Falls, was found last week up near Beaudette by a searching party which had been hunting for him since Sunday.

Rev. Mr. Fugleskjel left Silver Creek Sunday afternoon to go to Clementson, three miles distant, to hold services. He did not arrive at the church, and a search was begun. His trail was followed for two miles through swamps, and places were found where he had sunk waist deep into the water.

His trail and the place where the body was found showed that he had gone in a wrong direction.

The missionary worked among the Scandinavian "lumberjacks" on both sides of the border, and his labors demanded that he make many miles through uninhabited forests and swamps.

Rev. Fugleskjel was born in Freeborn county, Minn. in 1868. He attended the University of Minnesota, and also graduated from the United Norwegian Lutheran church seminary. Prior to entering the ministry he served as a sergeant in the regular army, being stationed at Fort Snelling.

Disillusioned Job Seeker.

They tell a story at the capitol, writes a St. Paul correspondent, that is worth repeating. A friend of the governor, shortly after his accession to office, after turning the matter over in his mind, reached the conclusion that it would be a good time for him to look for a job in the public service. With this in mind he hied him to the capitol and made application to the governor for a subordinate position on the railroad and warehouse commission or something "just as good". The governor spoke him fair, and after they had some talk turned him over to Secretary Wheelock. Secretary Wheelock was patronizing and sauve, and after going over the situation gave the applicant the names of a number of Minneapolis gentlemen, included among whom was Senator Smith, with the intimation that it might help some if he were to interest them in his candidacy. The applicant went to Minneapolis and hunted up some of his personal friends there with a view of getting them to introduce him to the influential politicians.

One after another were seen, but as it happened they did not feel well enough acquainted to make the required presentation. Finally he met a friend more candid than the rest, who, while admitting he had a casual acquaintance with Senator Smith and saying that he was willing to present the gentleman to him, told him plainly that he wasn't quite sure that such an introduction would do any good. "Don't you think", said he, "that those people in St. Paul have handed you a lemon in sending you off on a wild goose chase for Minneapolis support for an office for a Southern Minnesota man". "I'm perfectly willing", he added, "to go with you to see Senator Smith, but I'm frank to say, I'm not very hopeful as to the outcome". At this a light seemed to break in on the mind of the governor's friend. "No", he said, "You needn't mind. I catch your point. I'm not going any further in the matter; but I tell you what I will do. I'll go straight home and raise h—l". Possibly he is still engaged in that interesting occupation.

Died Last Week.

Mrs. Ingeborg Froslie, mother of Mrs F. A. Fossum, died last Friday at the advanced age of 80 years. The deceased had been a resident of this city for but two years, coming here from Iowa with her daughter. The body was taken to Waukee, Iowa, the first of the week, for burial.

Minnesota Apples Are Best.

At the meeting of the Minnesota State Horticultural association at Minneapolis Wednesday, Professor C. B. Waldron of the North Dakota Agricultural college said:

"No region is so favored that care and skill are indispensible." "A neglected orchard in the west looks as bad as a neglected orchard in the east, and some times worse.

"Although western apples are praise for their size and redness, those who are initiated into apple production know that the Minnesota apple has the advantage of taste and flavor. Minnesota has the sunshine and high latitude that give the advantage."

A Whist Tournament.

At the smoke social held at the Antlers Club rooms last Thursday evening it was decided to organize a Norwegian whist tournament. E. Dryfos and F. C. Niclai were chosen as captains of the opposing teams, and will attend to all of the details of the contest.

Charge a Most Serious One.

Warren Register: H. M. Clark, of Thief Lake, is in jail here charged with the crime of incest, his daughter, a young woman eighteen or twenty years of age, being the complaining witness. According to her story the crime was committed about a year ago, and as a result of it a child was born several months ago, which child is now dead. More than a year ago she threatened her father's arrest on the charge of assault with intent to commit incest, but decided to drop the matter and leave home instead and go to live with her aunt. The aunt, however, departed without her, and the commission of the crime took place shortly thereafter. Soon after the birth of the child the young woman was married, her father, who was a justice of the peace, performing the ceremony.

When he was arrested, Clark strenuously protested his innocence, and for a time he stuck to it that he was not guilty of the crime charged against him. He later broke down and admitted his guilt, and offered to plead guilty and receive his sentence without being subjected to the publicity of a trial.

Christmas Stamps.

Postmaster Kratka wishes to state that the following notice has been received from the office of the Second Assistant Postmaster General:

The following named countries refuse to admit to their mails articles bearing non-postage "Christmas" stamps or other adhesive charity stamps or labels: Great Britian, Orange River Colony, Rhodesia of the South, Transval. Germany admits articles bearing such stamps if affixed to the back, but not when attached to the face.

Articles liable to be refused admittance to any of the fore going countries on account of bearing charity stamps will be returned to the sender if known; or if sender be not known, such articles will be sent to the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, Division of Dead Letters.

All articles bearing "Christmas" stamps for transmission in the International Mails should bear upon the covers the full address of the sender.

Now that the Holiday rush will soon be on I wish to state to the public that it will be a great convenience to the Postal employees if they will use stamps of larger denominations, have their packages securely wrapped and tied with a strong cord, with the address plainly written and also the name and address of the sender written on the package.

To those sending registered matter I wish to state that registered mail does not in all cases travel as fast as ordinary mail. In all cases have your packages weighed and stamps affixed before you deposit them in the post office, then you will be sure that they will not lay in the post office until the addressee sends the necessary postage for mailing.

Yours Resp.,
F. H. KRATKA,
Postmaster.

School Notes.

By resolution of the board of education adopted at the last regular meeting, the schools will close for the Christmas holidays on Thursday, December 23, and re-open on Tuesday January 4.

Chief of Police Lang was appointed truant officer for the schools, his duties as such beginning this week.

The rollar skating rink has been secured by the high school faculty and students for athletic purposes for the months of January, February and March. The hours will be from 4 to 6 and a member of the faculty will always be present during this period. The boys will likely devote the major portion of time to basket ball, while the girls will have a formal course of physical culture with Miss Schwalbe, who is expecially well prepared to give instruction in this work. The purpose of the three months course is not to devotes the time and energy of the students to the building up of a team of five or ten athletes, but it is to grant all an opportunity for proper physical exercise under intelligent direction, something the student body of the local high school completely lacks, and at the same time, greatly needs.

The Seniors, chaperoned by the Misses Godward and Schwalbe, enjoyed a sleigh ride about the city last Friday evening. This was followed by a luncheon served on the installment plan; one portion at the domestic science room and the other at Borry's studio. The uninvited and persistent attentions of the Junior added not a little to the gayety of the occasion.

The first of the literary programs to be rendered during the winter was presented last Friday afternoon in the assembly room by the senior class. It was as follows: Address by Ward Sharabach, president of the class; piano duet, Lillian Eussey and Genn Granum; reading, original, Lena Lonson, cornet solo, George Hicks; original poem, Edwin Karwand; bass solo, George Jacobson; debate-Resolved that small high schools are preferred to large ones; affirmative, won by Lillian Mussey, negative, Earl Weeks; chorus, six boys and six girls, critic, J. H. Hay.

THE NEWS

BY JOHN W. EASTMAN

ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

Senator Cummins of Iowa last week introduced two measures, which will call forth considerable debate and which will likely receive the support of the progressive Republicans. One is a railroad rate bill, carrying amendments to the interstate commerce law, and the other is a resolution calling for a statement of the prosecutions had under the Sherman anti-trust law, the trusts, which are subject to the law, the corporations, which are not, and the corporations, which have violated the law, but have not been prosecuted. It is the opinion of Senator Cummins that the law should be amended. He believes that certain large corporations should be brought under it, corporations, which are now beyond its reach, and that other large corporations, which come within the control of the law should be removed.

COSTLY PROTECTION.

It takes $10,000,000 to build and equip a Super-Dreadnought like the North Dakotan, and $1,000,000 per year to maintain it. Its life is about ten years. The interest on this total of $20,000,000 at 3 per cent interest. amounts to another $4,5000,000. It takes from productive labor 900 men for a period of ten years, or 9,000 men for one year. Many of these men are skilled in the mechanical arts. Six hundred dollars per year would represent a very low figure as their earning value to society. This adds in earnings lost to the productive world nearly $5,500,000 more, or we have as the totol economic cost of a modern battleship not less than $30,000,000. With thirty such ships in our first line of defense the battle fleet of the United States, making no account whatever of cruisers, torpedo boats, and other auxiliaries, nor of the cost of maintenance of the land establishment of the navy, will cost not far from $1,000,000,000 per decade—a curious commentary on a nation that is supposed to derive its ethical code from the teachings of the Prince of Peace.—Farm Stock and Home.

RIVERS AS MARKET WAGONS.

The "Mississippi River System" includes the Missouri, Illinois, Arkansas, White, Yazoo, Ouachita and Red rivers. Glance at the map and see where it spreads—fourteen thousand miles. On this system the total movement of freight by water, excluding rafts and harbor traffic, was only nineteen million tons in the last year for which a full account was made up, and three-quarters of the total was coal, stone and sand. But little over two million tons was carried on steamers, the remainder being towed in unrigged crafts. On all state and private canals in the country the total traffic is only seven million tons, less than half as much as in 1880, while freight carried by rail has about trebled since 1890. Even during the severe freight congestion of three years ago the "Mississippi River System" got very little traffic.

The Central West is now pretty fully aware that there is a vast natural resource that needs conserving. Uncle Joe and the elder statesman, of course, are much exercised over the probable cost. But they would be exercised even if it cost nothing, because the development of this great waterway involves a radical change, and that idea is painful to them under any guise.

Water traffic on the Great Lakes has increased very much in twenty years; but even here the increase is mostly in iron ore and grain that is carried eastward. The total westward movement is under nineteen million tons, and seventeen millions of that is coal.—Saturday Evening Post.

J. J. HILL TELLS HOW TO INCREASE YIELD OF SOIL.

Cultivate only as much land as can be tilled so thoroughly that it will produce to its highest capacity.

Study first the conservation of the soil. Aim, even before trying to secure a big crop return, to leave the ground each season better fitted for production than it was before. This can be done by a proper rotation of crops, by fertilization, where land has been partially exhausted, and, best of all, by keeping some livestock on every tract, no matter how small, and restoring every particle of manure to the soil.

Adapt both the crop to be raised and the method of cultivation to the nature of the soil. This is just as important as it is that a corporation should not try to make high-grade steel out of ores containing an excess of phosphorus. An agricultural chemist can give directions and should always be consulted. There is at least one in every state whose services are at the command of the people through the agricultural schools. A sick soil may present as critical a case as a sick man.

Select all seed with the utmost care. The difference between using the best quality of grain for seed and planting an inferior sort may be, and usually is, the difference between getting a first-class yield and one barley worth harvesting. In farming, the law of heredity is inflexible. Cattle for breeding and grain for planting should be chosen as intelligently as an investment into which a man's whole fortune is put.

Finally, every crop must be treated like what it is—a living thing, sensitive to comfort and to hardship, and returning to the cultivator a yield measured by the kind and quantity of care bestowed upon it, from the time of planting to the day of harvesting.

A seven room well built house, two lots and barn 16x22 will be sold cheap for cash or traded for cattle or horses. House is located on East Side and must be disposed of at once. If you are interested inquire at News office for full information.

The Name "Pepys."

How should "Pepys" be pronounced? Percy Lubbock, who wrote a biography of Samuel Pepys, declares "Peeps." But there are many people living and talking who call themselves "Peppis." In 1679 was published a volume called "Lucida Intervalla," by James Carcasse, who was a clerk in the office of Pepys. He did not like Pepys and would have been glad to spell it "Peeps." But he didn't. He wrote:

Get thee behind me, then; dumb devil begone:
The Lord hath Ephthatha said to my tongue.
Him I must praise who opened hath my lips.
Sent me from navy to the ark by Pepys.

From this the London Chronicle concludes that to his contemporary Pepys was "Pips."

Joe Miller Was Not a Joker.

Joe Miller, who is generally believed to have been the soul of wit, never made a single joke in his life. He was an actor and so grave in manner as to become the butt of other people's hilarity. When any witticism went the round Miller was accused of its authorship, and he would never deny it. He lived an exemplary life and died universally respected. But no sooner was he dead than appeared "Joe Miller's Jests; or, The Wits' Vade Mecum," compiled by "Elijah Jenkins, Esq."—that is to say, forged by John Mottley, the Jacobite, just as years before Hobson's "Polly Peachum" and Ben Johnson's "Jests" had been forged.

The Masculine Wig.

Civilization has to thank the French revolution and the subsequent wars for masculine emancipation from the wig. It was partly the scarcity of flour and the war tax on hair powder that banished the powdered wig, but partly also the leveling influence of Jacobinism. "I do not know the present generation by sight," wrote Walpole in 1791, complaining that the young men "in their dirty shirts and shaggy hair have leveled nobility as much as the nobility in France have."

Unfair.

Hazel, aged seven, while feeding the cat at the dinner table was reproved by her father, who told her that the cat must wait until later, whereupon the small girl wept and said:

"I think it is a shame just because she is a poor dumb animal to treat her like a hired girl."—Harper's Magazine.

Often water that is the most sparkling and pleasant to the taste is the most unhealthful, because of germ life which it contains. Distilled water—that condensed from steam—is chemically and medically pure, yet very flat tasting stuff for the average palate.

All the grade rooms will present brief Christmas programs the last day of school.

Nearly all the complaints against teachers are based on misunderstanding or misconception of the school work. All stories have two sides and pupils who have been corrected for offences of omission or of commission in schools are prejudiced reporters of school conditions, What a world of annoyance and doubt and ill feeling would be avoided did parents visit the schools, at least once a week, a task which is at once a duty and a privilege,

This Is Worth Remembering

It is none too early to begin making plans to attend the institutes and agricultural short courses which may be scheduled for the coming winter season. A fellow should attend with the idea of learning something and at the same time of communicating to others any helpful plan or method which he may have found worth while. The idea of mutual helpfulness should prevail in the largest measure possible.

The subscriber of an eastern agricultural paper writes the editor asking if there is truth in the report that certain well known smoking tobacco by analysis contains 63 per cent of alfalfa. The editor replies that he is afraid it is not true, but wished it might be. If the smoking mixture burned in pipe or cigarette contained nothing but nutritious alfalfa hay and like stuff the cigarette problem would be much less formidable than it is today.

In the famous Hood river valley the older trees in exposed locations have a decided lean to the east as a result of the vigorous winds which blow up the Columbia river during the greater part of the growing season. But, however disagreeable this breeze may be in some ways, it is this same fine air from the ocean, coupled with many days of genial sunshine, that imparts to the apples grown in the valley their world renowned spice and color.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of gasoline in a cup of milk given sheep for three successive days is recommended as effective in ridding them of the stomach worm. The mixture should be put in a long necked bottle and poured down the sheep's throat while standing. The animals treated should be kept off feed during the night and until 10 o'clock of the following forenoon. A preventive of the stomach worm trouble is to give the flock frequent change of pasture.

The Sage milk commission of New York city has undertaken a worthy campaign, which has in view bringing some relief to the dairymen who supply residents of the city with milk and to the consumer, who in the past has been paying outrageous prices for it. The commission purposes to pay the farmer 4 instead of 2 cents a quart for his milk and retail it for 6 cents at depots at different points in the city to those who will go after it. The middleman has been the extortioner in this case, and it is he whom the new plan is designed to hit.

The directors of the Wisconsin experiment station are giving phosphate free to farmers of the state who will use it in co-operative tests. The phosphate is to be scattered on the manure in the stalls, and enough is furnished to make a test on one-half acre of ground. The best showing with these fertilizing tests the past season were made in Richland and Door counties, where one farmer increased his hay crop 2,000 pounds and another his barley yield fifteen bushels per acre. The cost of the fertilizer in these cases was $2.50, while the increase in crop yield varied from $9 to $12.

It goes without saying that in sections where top notch prices have been received for pear and apple crops the present year the method has not prevailed of shaking or knocking the fruit out of the trees with sticks, dumping it into wagons without springs, scooping it out with shovels and throwing it indiscriminately into barrels or aboard the cars. On the contrary, in those sections where all the way from $1 to $2.25 per box is netted for such fruit each pear or apple is handled from tree to package as gently as if it were an egg, reducing the minimum bruises which are the prime cause of decay. It is owing to this fine chiefly that the western fruit grower excels his fellows in other parts of the country.

The reader of an eastern agricultural paper sends the editor a complaint about an unsatisfactory order received from a foreign catalogue cloak house and asks what can be done to get satisfaction. It seems that protest was made direct to the house about the "horrible fit" and "shoddy material," the suit being sent back, but, instead of righting matters, the house sent the suit back again without alteration, which meant the levying of another express charge and still kept the money. A lawsuit in such a case would be of doubtful efficacy, making the suit a pretty expensive one before the promised "fit and satisfaction" were secured. A better way would have been to buy this garment from the home dealer, with whom a kick would have amounted to something.

BY F. E. TRIGG
REGISTER, ROCKFORD, IA.
CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED

RAILROADS AND FARMING.

One of the hopeful aspects of the general agricultural situation of the country over is the interest which leading railroad officials are taking in the preaching of the gospel of a better type of agriculture. Very naturally this interest is traceable to the fact that with agriculture on a better footing and making an increased contribution to the wealth of the country business will be better in general and the transportation business in particular. But this interest is none the less commendable because it is partly selfish, for the benefits accruing will be first to agriculture and secondarily to transportation companies. President James J. Hill of the Great Northern has this year offered substantial prizes to those ranchmen in territory adjacent to his lines for the best exhibits of agricultural products, and these inducements have had a very beneficial effect in arousing interest in better crops. A few weeks ago in an address before the Railway Business association in New York city President W. C. Brown of the New York Central railroad stated his intention of recommending to the roads with which he was connected the purchase of farms to be operated as experimental tracts according to the most advanced methods of seed selection, fertilization and cultivation at the expense of the road, but under the direction of the agricultural college in the state in which the farm is located. It was his hope that this idea might be adopted by a majority of the roads of the country. Such farms would serve as object lessons in better farming and would tend to greatly increase the productivity of land and in so far increase its capacity to sustain and feed a growing population. This railroad president is on the right track, and it is to be hoped that his suggestions may be carried out in full. Better farming—the getting of more products from a given area without soil depletion—is the greatest single economic problem before the American people today, and too much thought can hardly be devoted to its solution.

FUEL ECONOMY AND FRESH AIR.

In latitudes where the severity of the winter months makes the heating of the house one of the chief problems there is quite a temptation to sacrifice fresh air in the attempt to reduce fuel cost to a minimum. But this is shortsighted economy, in which doctors' bills, a low physical tone and a general feeling of dumpiness more than offset the fuel saved by shutting out a reasonable amount of fresh air. In the sleeping rooms especially should the windows be arranged so that there will be an abundance of pure and fresh air. If there is fear of catching cold from direct drafts an excellent plan is to tack a piece of cheesecloth to the window frame above the lower edge as it hangs down to the top of the window sash. With this arrangement when the upper sash is lowered the curtain is drawn tight and will shut out direct drafts, but will allow the fresh air to percolate through. Fresh air is absolutely necessary if the physical system is to be kept in proper condition, but especially should it be provided in abundance for growing children. In addition to the ventilation of sleeping rooms, as referred to, it is well at frequent intervals when the weather is not too cold to give the house a thorough airing from cellar to garret. Fresh air is to be had for nothing, and it should be utilized more than it is for its health giving properties.

A FINE HOG PASTURE PLAN.

A very successful Minnesota hog raiser has a plan in the care of his hogs which has given him excellent results and should contain a hint for hog raisers elsewhere. He believes in feeding the young pigs largely on rape and clover, finishing with corn afterward. He has never lost a pig from disease, and he attributes this largely to his hog pasture plan. He aims to have the area devoted to this twice as large as is needed at one time. He puts a fence through the middle and has one half in rape and clover and the other half in corn. The following season he reverses this and puts clover and rape where the corn was and corn where the hogs and clover were. The latter part of June he sows clover in the growing corn and follows with a light cultivation. He picks the corn in the fall and leaves the stalks standing. After the ground is well settled in the spring he turns in his hogs and sows three pounds of rape per acre. The hogs tramp the seed into the soil, and in a short time it is nicely started and makes feed by the time the clover is out of commission. If the rape gets too tall and tough he mows it off, which starts a luxuriant growth of succulent shoots. At the same time he has corn growing on the other side of the fence and sows clover the latter part of June, in this way repeating the process.

FOREIGN NEWS.

All estimates of the dead in the storm that swept the English channel and the North sea recently were increased when a restoration of telegraph communication revealed the fact that the casualties were far greater than at first feared. It is now believed there were 400 drownings along the British and continental coast and on the high seas.

Dispatches from Fez, Morocco, say that scores of soldiers were killed in an unprovoked fight between two regiments of hostile soldiers, which were on parade before the sultan. The regiments had been recruited from tribes that have long been at war with each other and their fanatical zeal overcame the army restraint and a pitched battle ensued.

The explosion of two gas tanks at Hamburg, Germany, was followed by an extensive fire and the loss of more than a score of lives. The explosion was due to a leak in a new gasometer. Escaping gas entered the retort house, where it came in contact with the fires, causing a terrific explosion.

In a statement in defense of his attitude President Zelaya of Nicaragua declares that he proposed that Secretary of State Knox submit the matters in dispute between the two countries to investigation of a committee of his own choosing and that the proposition was ignored.

Fifty members of the various colonies of the Central American republics met at a private residence in the City of Mexico and adopted resolutions denouncing President Taft, Secretary Knox and the action of the United States toward Nicaragua.

M. Fernandez, the aviator, was instantly killed at Nice, France, following the explosion of the motor when his aeroplane was being maneuvered at an estimated height of 1,650 feet. The machine crumbled and, with its pilot, dropped to earth.

Captain Englehardt, a pupil of the Wright brothers in aviation, flying in a Wright machine, was very seriously injured at Johannistal, Germany, when his aeroplane collapsed in the air. The machine was completely wrecked.

M. Bleriot, the French aeroplanist whose flight across the English channel was one of the most remarkable achievements of the year, met with a serious accident at Constantinople while giving an exhibition flight.

Fifteen lives and $500,000 in property lost on land and sea is the toll taken by the storm which swept Newfoundland and its waters a few days ago.

King Leopold of Belgium is critically ill.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

Opposition to the proposed immediate congressional investigation of the sugar import scandals in the New York custom house and likewise to any further revision of the tariff at present; absence of any specific recommendation regarding the crisis in Nicaragua and actual recommendation of legislation to forbid the issuance of judicial injunctions without notice in labor controversies and for the establishment of a system of postal savings banks may be considered the most striking features of the first annual message of President Taft. The Nicaraguan question, conservation of the nation's natural resources, needed amendments to the anti-trust and interstate commerce acts and the contemplated revision of the federal statutes governing the organization of the armed forces of the nation in time of war are all reserved for possible treatment later in special messages.

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

A big Christmas gift, totaling $16,266.25 was sent out when State Auditor Iverson distributed among the various counties of the state 2,225 warrants, their face value ranging from $5 to $20. This money goes to 2,225 individuals. The distribution is under an old law and is known as the annual tree bounty. The prairie sections alone are benefited. Each year $20,000 is set aside for this purpose and is distributed on the basis of trees planted by the farmers. As usual Redwood county realizes the heaviest, its portion being $1,838.12. Murray county comes next.

A surprising growth in the number of the state banks of Minnesota is shown in a statement by Bank Examiner John B. Galarneault, the figures given being in answer to the usual call sent out on Nov. 16. In one year, according to the comparisons made, the number of banks has grown from 616 to 646 and the resources and liabilities from over $97,000,000 to over $103,000,000. A year ago there were five private banks, now there are none. A comparison with 1907 shows even greater growth.

Chief of Police Herman A. Schmidt has revived the curfew law, which has been upon Winona's statutes for nearly ten years, but a dead letter most of that time. He announces that persons under seventeen years of age must not be on the public streets after 9 o'clock at night unless accompanied by parents, guardian or some older person.

Gifford Pinchot has written to Governor Eberhart commending him for taking the initiative in summoning a state conservation congress for Minnesota. In his letter Mr. Pinchot places himself at the service of the Minnesota commission and he will undoubtedly be called upon for an address before the congress.

Bids for four state ditching projects, involving the moving of 2,100,000 cubic yards of earth, will be received by the state drainage commission on Jan. 6. The estimated cost of the four ditches is $160,000, of which the state will pay about $45,000 for its proportion of lands benefited. All of the land helped is prairie land.

The name of former Governor W. R. Merriam of Minnesota is mentioned in connection with a place on the board of commissioners, the governing body of the District of Columbia. It is understood the president has, or will, tender the appointment to Mr. Merriam.

Governor Eberhart has announced that the conference on conservation to be held in St. Paul next spring under the auspices of the state government has been fixed for March 8, 9 and 10.

Minnesota won the sweepstake's award on oats in a contest open to the world and she has also won the $1,500 silver trophy offered by Professor Olin of Colorado at Omaha.

Frank Balet, aged sixteen, residing near Spring Valley, was accidentally shot and instantly killed. He slipped and fell and the charge of shot entered his left side.

The state supreme court has decided in a case from Fergus Falls that local option cannot be extended to cities, but only to townships and villages.

Arthur P. Toupin of Crookston has been nominated by the president to be register of the land office at that place.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Gertrude Stark, the three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ott Stark, residing on a farm near Rollingstone, Winona county, was so severely burned as the result of her clothes catching fire when she had been left alone in the house, and was playing with matches, that she died an hour later. Her father and mother, who were nearby in the yard, heard her screams for help and ran to her assistance, but too late to prevent the fatal burns.

Pete Peterson, formerly of Hastings, this state, fell from a bridge at Donal, Mont., a small station on the line of the Chicago, Milwaukee and Puget Sound railway, and sustained injuries that resulted in his death two days later.

Fire at Renville destroyed the Farmers' elevator. The water supply was short and the effort to save the William Hoffman elevator on the east was unavailing. The entire town was endangered.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

KING GUSTAF IN A NEW ROLE

Disguised as a Stevedore He Labors at Carrying Sacks of Coal from a Lighter in Order to Learn the Condition of the Workingmen and Ascertain Their Wishes and Opinions—Intends to Mix with all Classes in His Search for Knowledge.

SWEDEN.

King Gustaf has lately appeared in a new role, which has caused much favorable comment in all labor circles and which will surely bring him close to the hearts of the laboring men in his country. Not long ago he appeared disguised as a stevedore, carrying sacks of coal from a lighter. In an interview after it was all over the king said that this was only the beginning. He intended to mix with all classes of laborers, so that he might ascertain their opinions and wishes.

KING GUSTAF.

Already, he added, he had obtained many valuable hints from the men with whom he worked. The determination of King Gustaf to learn of the condition of the workingmen by mingling with them and taking part in their labors has resulted from the recent great tieup of the business life of the country by a general strike. King Gustaf intervened last August in an endeavor to secure a compromise, but without avail. The strike continued for months and involved thousands of men and has not been settled to this very day.

That repressive legislation directed at the labor unions may be expected of the riksdag this winter is the opinion of Valfrid Spongberg, editor of the Svenska Folkets, the semi-weekly radical newspaper, which stood almost alone in Sweden as a supporter of the strikers' cause. Mr. Spongberg, while not a socialist, is regarded by the workers as one of the leading champions, and the typographers' unions have voted an appropriation of 50,000 crowns to help him turn his paper into a daily. Mr. Spongberg said to a newspaper representative recently in regard to the recent strike and the outlook at present: "Of course labor has not gained anything this time. It is impossible for the men to secure better conditions for a while and there will be less work this winter, so it may be difficult indeed to find employment. Many have emigrated and many will do so later. The unions, which had much money in their treasuries before the strike, have little or nothing now. The trouble now is not without its benefits to the workers. It will be found in the future that the manufacturers will not make use of great lockouts to force the men to do their way. The most important purpose the workers had in the strike was to stop the manufacturers from using the lockout. Though the workers have not been able to force the manufacturers to agree that lockouts will cease, just the same in the future they will not be seen. In the past many contracts have conceded employers the right to lockout and the men the right to strike. The men have not liked this, but could not help it. Now one lockout experience has been very costly for the employers and they will not soon repeat it."

Knut Sigfrid Flodin, a well known Stockholm publisher, died Nov. 11, aged eighty-three years. He has for many years been regarded as one of the foremost book publishers in Stockholm and he made his fortune in the business. Few men have been so well known and respected as Sigfrid Flodin and the books that have been published at his plant run up into the hundreds and thousands. He was a very generous hearted man and was always willing to do something for the poor.

It costs in the neighborhood of 300,000 crowns to keep Stockholm clean during the course of a year. That sum represents the expenditure for cleanliness for the year 1909.

Employes in state officers formed an organization not long ago to be known as the State Employes' association.

During the month of October there were 3,712,786 passengers on the street railways of Stockholm.

The Swedes residing at Duisburg, Westphalen, have organized a hunting club.

NORWAY.

Says Charles B. Cheney in a recent letter from Christiania to the Minneapolis Journal: "The prohibition movement has grown in Norway until it as enlisted the support of not less than 110,000 voters, but as a separate political organization the teetolers have not cut much of a figure. The one-idea parties have almost been lost sight of this year. Norway is a long ways from prohibition, though one of the leading countries of the world on the temperance question. Sentiment is overwhelmingly for temperance, but against prohibition as impractical. Norwegians point proudly to their high place in the statistics of temperance. Based on per capita consumption of pure alcohol Finland leads all countries, with one and nine-tenths liters a year for each person, and Norway comes next with two and four-tenths liters. The Norwegian record is good, but prohibitionists deplore the fact that it has not been reduced in recent years. If Norway is to make further progress, they say, it must be by a policy of total prohibition. No further gains seem possible under high license and local option. Drinking places are confined almost entirely to cities and villages, as few country parishes now license the sale of liquor. but in the villages liquor is accessible to all."

"The fight is for or against socialism," said former Premier Michelsen in commenting on the results of the recent elections in Norway and on future political campaigns. He gave out the following interview: "In our political life of late there has been a movement towards 'Hoire.' As for me, I believe that this movement will continue and that in a short time we will see a similar movement towards 'Venstre,' that is to say, the now existing consolidated 'Venstre' will be compelled to split into two factions, one joining the existing parties and the other going over to the socialists. This is the natural development in every country. It must happen in this country in spite of all opposition, in spite of all theoretical ideas advanced against it. It is coming and must come. That fact is shown already by the recent elections.".

American dispatches received in Christiania lately state that Dean Owrie of the geological faculty of the University of Minnesota is planning a walking trip through Iceland in the near future for the purpose of securing original documents containing the sagas of prehistoric bards, geological and anatomical specimens as trophies for private collections for the Minnesota university's museum. Norwegian scientists are much interested in Dean Owrie's venture and predict that he is bound to find much of interest in Iceland, but that Norway's explorers have already traversed the field and left but comparatively little to discover along these lines.

George Brandes, the celebrated Danish critic, arrived in Christiania Nov. 25 and delivered a lecture at the Christiania university the following evening to a large and select audience.

The Kjerulf and Ryberg Pulp mills have been sold to a syndicate for the sum of 800,000 crowns. About two hundred men are employed at present at these mills.

DENMARK.

A Copenhagen paper states that orders have been issued from St. Petersburg for the immediate erection throughout Finland of Russian barracks to accommodate the horde of Cossacks that have poured over the border to insure the subjugation of Finland. The Finns have resigned themselves to a period of heavy oppression, but throughout the entire country there apparently is a determination to make a fight against the Cossacks to the bitter end. Thousands of Cossacks have been sent from various garrisons in Russia and the situation in Finland is becoming very serious indeed. In Copenhagen the Finnish situation is viewed with intense interest and the sympathy of Danes in general are with the Finns, although the Danish royal house bears such relations to the imperial house in St. Petersburg. Many people in Copenhagen are openly expressing the wish that the Finns would be able to master the situation, and as for Sweden, had she no labor troubles on her hands at present it might have been possible that there would have been hundreds of Swedes who would have enlisted incognito in the Finnish ranks and help the Finns to hold their own against the fierce Russian Cossacks.

Rector Torp of the University of Copenhagen, Chancellor Salomonsen and Professor Ellis Stromgren have been delegated to receive the north polar records of Dr. Frederick A. Cook on behalf of the university. These records have been brought to Copenhagen by Dr. Cook's secretary. As soon as the papers are in the possession of these men a consistory will be held at which a committee of examination will be appointed. The president of this committee will be Professor Stromgren. The other members will be made up of scientists and explorers, such as Commander Hovgaard.

There are 120 Young Peoples' societies in Denmark, with a total membership of about 10,000 members. At a recent convention, held in Olgnd, 150 delegates were present from different parts of the country. They are church societies in which the clergy are members. Rev. Christian Hasley is a member of the executive committee.

RECORD YEAR ON THE RANGE

Roads Haul More Iron Ore Than Ever Before.

The season of 1909 was the greatest in the history of the two range railroads and all records for the ports of Duluth and Two Harbors were broken.

The greatest year in the history of the roads, up to the present time, was 1907, when the high water mark for ore shipments was reached. During that year the Duluth, Missabe and Northern road shipped 13,445,977 tons of ore from the port of Duluth. Last year showed a great falling off, only 8,808,168 tons being shipped, but the road came back this year and broke the 1907 record by a scant 25,000 tons. The total shipments for 1909 were 13,470,503 tons.

The Duluth and Iron Range railroad showed an even greater increase over its former record. In 1907 the road shipped from Two Harbors 8,205,998 tons. Last year it fell off to 5,708,645 tons, but this year it came back with close to 10,000,000 tons.

TWO MEN COMMIT SUICIDE

One Takes Cyanide of Potasium and the Other Carbolic Acid.

Two men commited suicide in Minneapolis within twelve hours. One had been married for two months; the other is unidentified, probably a tramp.

Peter Alden, twenty-seven years old, was found writhing in agony by his young wife at their home, 2796 Twenty-fifth street east. He had swallowed potasium cyanide, one of the strongest poisons known, and died a few moments later. The wife is prostrated and under the care of a physician.

An unidentified man walked into the saloon of Jackson & Nylander and without formalities swallowed the contents of a bottle of carbolic acid. Physicians were called and the man was hurried to the city hospital in a patrol wagon. He died just before the hospital was reached.

MINISTER DIES OF EXPOSURE

Body Found by Searchers in Northern Minnesota.

Rev. Ole O. Fugleskyle of the United Lutheran church was found in the northern woods by a posse, who were out searching, dead from exposure.

Rev. Fugleskyle was doing missionary work among the Scandinavian settlers and lumberjacks on the American and Canadian sides from the Lake of the Woods to International Falls. His work required him to travel long distances through the uninhabited swamps and forests.

He was well known among the northern people. He was born in Freeborn county, Minn., in 1868, attended the University of Minnesota and graduated from the United Norwegian Lutheran seminary. Prior to entering the ministry he served as a sergeant in the regular army at Fort Snelling.

SERIOUS FIRE AT EVELETH

Property Valued at Thirty Thousand Dollars Destroyed.

One of the most disastrous fires on the Mesaba range this year occurred when the engine house, warehouse, electrical shops and carpenter shop a the No. 2 Adams Spruce mine at Eveleth were destroyed, involving a loss of about $30,000.

There was no loss of life, although two men rooming over the warehouse had narrow escapes. Lack of water prevented prompt extinguishing of the fire. The fire originated in the warehouse, presumably from defective electrical wiring.

DEED OF HALF WITTED SON

Kills Father and Seriously Wounds Brother.

A tragedy occurred in a farmhouse in Urness township, Douglas county, in which a half witted son, Oscar Helmquist, twenty-five years of age, shot and killed his father, August Helmquist, and seriously wounded an older brother, Claus V. The three lived together and alone, the mother having died some time ago.

Swallows Pills and Dies.

James Palmer of Winona died suddenly following the taking of pills for the relief of neuralgia. Coroner Samuel Schafer was summoned to make an investigation into the case. He found that the pills had been prescribed by a local physician some time back for Mr. Palmer's neuralgia and that unless taken in a very large overdose could not have had a fatal effect.

ONE MAN DEAD, TWO INJURED

Explosion Wrecks Freight Car at Minnesota Transfer.

Klaus J. Larson was killed and Andrew Anderson and Charles Stitch were dangerously injured in an explosion of mysterious origin, which occurred while the men, all of whom are experienced freight handlers, were loading a Northern Pacific car with powder and dynamite in the yards of the Minnesota Transfer.

Larson was head stower for the Transfer company and Anderson and Stitch are stowers with years of experience. The men were engaged in loading a car with explosives and, according to the story told by Stitch at Cobb hospital, they had placed in the car thirty cans of black powder and twenty boxes of dynamite and Larson was busy nailing cleats to hold the boxes secure when suddenly there occurred a tremendous explosion.

The three men were knocked senseless, the car was almost blown to pieces and was set on fire, while fragments were scattered over the yards.

WILDCAT ATTACKS WOMAN

Husband Saves Her From the Vicious Animal.

Word has been received from Akeley of a terrific struggle between a big wildcat and Mrs. Denton Patten in a deserted logging camp in the woods northwest of there.

Mr. and Mrs. Denton Patten were out for rest and recreation. Mr. Patten is city marshal at Akeley. At night they heard unusual sounds near the larder and in the morning they found that some beast had been at the meat. Marshal Patten set a figure 4 trap with a washtub and retired to rest, hoping to trap the intruder.

Early next morning Mrs. Patten, more out of curiosity than anything else, went to the trap and lifted the washtub.

Immediately there was a tremendous scream.

A big wild tomcat had sprung upon Mrs. Patten's back and began to tear and lacerate her flesh. Her loud screams and the accompanying scuffle brought the men folks to the scene.

Patten had to use much skill to kill the beast without injuring his wife.

CLEARS WAY FOR CHARITY

Highest Court Denies Last Application of Wilder Heirs.

The supreme court of the United States has denied the application for a writ of certiorari in the litigation by which half a dozen California nieces and nephews of the late Mrs. Fannie S. Wilder of St. Paul hoped to divert her estate from the hands of the charity corporation to which she left it into their own.

This makes available for St. Paul charities about $1,600,000 worth of property, consisting mostly of real estate scattered widely throughout the Northwest. Probably fifty pieces of real estate, many of them improved, are located in St. Paul. The rest is farm land in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Montana, Iowa, Illinois and other states. This property comprised the estates left to charity by the late Mrs. Fannie S. Wilder and by her daughter, Mrs. Cornelia Day Wilder Appleby. The mother's estate is valued at about $1,200,000. The fortune was amassed by the late Amherst H. Wilder, who also left $400,000 to charity.

The Russian moujik, or peasant laborer, receives 84 cents a day for his spring work and 41 cents a day during haying and harvest and boards himself.

The man who is looking for a new location agriculturally can hardly go astray if he picks out a piece of land in a section where either clover or alfalfa will grow, and this holds whether the district is under ditch or has its moisture supplied in the shape of snow and rain.

It is about a standoff as between the dweller in the warmer southwestern climes, who has to put up with fleas and dust, and the resident in the northern states east of the Rockies, who has his pancake batter freeze under the hard coal stove on crisp midwinter nights.

The value of alfalfa as a forage and hay crop is well attested by the plump and sleek appearance of horses, cattle and hogs which have access to it and are not furnished with any grain ration. All kinds of stock are fond of the legume and seem to know instinctively that it is good for them.

The railroads seem to have survived the anti-railroad agitation and legislation of the past three or four years to the tune of an increase in net earnings for the year ending June 30, 1909, of $90,718,357 over the earnings of the preceding year. The total gross earnings of the last fiscal year were $2,437,385,841. These figures would seem to indicate that transportation companies have been more scared than hurt.

A section of northern Vermont has established a reputation with the agricultural department at Washington of producing a type of seed potato which is virtually free from disease and largely blight resistant. For this reason the seed is in great demand in the southern states, where the blight due to excessive moisture during the growing season is both prevalent and very destructive to the potato crop.

The Mongolian pheasant brought from China to this country several years ago and turned loose in the chaparral covered sections of Oregon and Washington seems to have found its new home a congenial one and is said to be multiplying rapidly under the complete protection which is being given it under the laws recently passed. Ranch owners frequently see the beautiful birds in their orchards but a few rods from the house.

Judging from the recent election results in New York state affecting the primary, it appears that the grangers of the Empire State are interested intelligently in new political methods as well as the latest improvements in agriculture and dairying. They have looked into this system of direct primary nominations and have given it their approval, notwithstanding the adverse report of the legislative committee which was selected to give it a black eye.

A lesson that many a corn grower seems slow to learn is that it is the freezing of corn while the kernels contain moisture which is fatal to the germ. Dried thoroughly, seed corn will stand almost any low temperatures. On this account every effort should be put forth to dry the ears before a freeze strikes them and to store them for the winter where they will not gather moisture. As a rule, seed corn is done for and worthless by February.

With the condition of the fellow who is more or less dependent upon his employer's whim and economic circumstance for the holding of his job becoming more and more uncertain an ever increasing number of level headed people, including both men and women, are quietly investing their surplus earning in parcels of land which will not only appreciate in value, but will give them a living and a competence in later years. The person who owns fertile land that is capable of producing the foodstuffs that the earth's ever increasing millions will want is going to be independent in the years to come.

The proper time for the transplanting of shrubs, fruit or shade trees depends largely upon the time of the rainy season. In the large territory east of longitude 100 degrees, where abundant moisture may be counted on from March to July, the early part of this period is the best season for transplanting, depending a bit upon the latitude. On the Pacific slope and south of central Oregon from November till the latter part of February is considered the best time for this work, as the ground does not freeze to prevent plowing, while the interval named is the wet season, which insures the transplanted things sufficient moisture for their proper growth.

Dentists who keep abreast of the times incline to the view that in these days of prepared—premasticated and predigested—foods folks do not have chewing enough to do to give their teeth the necessary exercise, it being their contention that foods of a rougher and harder type should form a larger part of the bill of fare. Pressure on the teeth in the process of mastication causes a circulation of blood in the little ducts near the roots, this making possible a ready nourishment of the nerve and dental tissues. This argument would seem to have common sense at the bottom of it and ought to be kept in mind. It is likely due to this very fact, the mastication of rough and coarse foods, that the remarkable durability of the teeth of wild and domestic animals is due.

FIGHTING CENTRALIZER

Creameries Lock Horns In Controversary Before Railroad Warehouse Commission.

To the Interest of Farmers to Have Butter Manufactured at Home.

The cooperative and other local creameries have locked horns with the centralizers before the railroad and warehouse commission. The centralizers want a lower rate on cream and milk, especially for long hauls. The county creameries resist the demand, seeing in it only the evidences of a design on the part of the centralizers to attack the sources of their supplies. Ordinarily it would appear to the advantage of producers to have as low a rate as possible on their products. This can hardly be said to be the case, however, where shipments of milk and cream are concerned. There seems to be no doubt that, speaking of the dairy interests as a whole, their advantage lies in local control of the manufacture of dairy products. If through a low rate on milk and cream competition is set up which deprives the local creameries of the supplies needed to do a profitable business and it is compelled to suspend operations, thus making dairying men dependent absolutely on the centralizers for a market, all experience indicates that the sacrifice of their independence will prove a losing game in the long run.

Much damage has already been done to the dairy interests of Minnesota through the competition of the centralizer plants. Gilt edge butter can only be made from pure milk and cream. It is well known that centralizers do not insist that the milk and cream shipped to them shall be in perfect condition. Country creameries which have to meet this competition are, therefore compelled to lower their standards. They are not in a position to insist that dairymen take the necessary precautions to keep their milk pure and free from taint where patrons can otherwise dispose of tainted milk. The result is the inevitable acceptance by local creameries of inferior milk or cream; to do that a consequence sacrifice in the quality of butter must be made. When this is the case to any large extent the reputation of Minnesota buter is sure to suffer. The effect is to lower the price which Minnesota butter can command merely by reason of a Minnesota brand.

Butter from Minnesota should be as staple as butter from Denmark. In the European markets all that need be known of butter is that it is Danish. That means that it is the best the market affords. Minnesota butter will never have that reputation until the dairymen control its manufacture. They can never hope to control it so long as they are willing to sacrifice the interest of the local creamery to the centralizer. The industry is the one growing agricultural industry of this State. It will continue in proportion as the farmers keep it within their control and refuse to prevent its monopolization by centralizer combinations.

In the hearing before the railroad and warehouse commission the dairymen and co operative creameries are represented by E. T. Young. The State dairy department is interesting itself on their behalf. So are the dairymen and creamerymen's associations. The organizations, which represent the dairying and buttermaking interests are all opposed to the lower rates asked for by the centralizers. They have studied the situation. They know the effect of centralizer competition is to lower the grade of milk and cream produced on the farms and that it spells disaster to the co-operative and independent creamery. It is their conviction that for a temporary advantage in price the farmers cannot afford to sacrifice the control of an industry upon which their welfare so largely depends. They have studied this question in all its phases, and that they should be unanimous in the decision they have reached indicates clearly that in the long run it will not pay to sacrifice a local industry, which has already done so much for the State and on which in the future the prosperity of the farmers will largely depend. The welfare of the dairying industry depends largely on the protection farmers and those, who represent farmers can throw around the co operative and the independent local creamery.

Not Threshed as yet.

Walter McAndrees was down from Highlanding the first of the week. Mr. McAndrees says that he harvested the best crop this year that he has ever raised, but has been unable to get his threshing done as yet. He has twenty large stacks of wheat, flax and oats, and it will be worth money when it is sold. Very few of Mr. McAndrees' neighbors have threshed, but there is a machine working in that neighborhood now and it will only be a short time before all will have threshed.

ERICKSON IS MISSING

Farmer Residing Near Hazel, This County, Can't Be Found.

Feared That He Has Met Foul Play Somewhere Up In Canada.

Andrew P. Erickson, a farmer living near Hazel, Red Lake county, is missing and relatives fear that he has met with foul play. This summer, as had been his custom for a number of years past, he went to Milestone, Sask., where he worked during haying and harvest for Olaus Omoth, a farmer, who formerly resided in the town of Wyandotte, this county. On the 13th of November he finished work and was paid $215 by Omoth. He went to Regina to attend to some land business on the 15th returned to Milestone and started for his home here. That is the last that has been seen or heard of him.

He is described as being a man 43 years of age, 5 foot 7 inches tall and weighs about 160 pounds. He had black hair and gray eyes, the left eye being bloodshot, and a sandy mustache. It had always been his custom to going and coming from Canada to travel by way of Kenmare.

He has a wife and five children, who live near Hazel and they are very anixous to receive some information regarding him. His home relations were always very pleasant and they do not believe that he has deserted the family, but are confident that he has met foul play.

Any person, who can furnish any information is requested to notify County Attorney Michelet.

Fire at Red Lake Falls.

Anderson & Wanders furniture store at Red Lake Falls, was burned to the ground last Saturday morning at an early hour. The second floor of this building was used as an opera house. The insurance on the building was $5,000 and we have not learned how much was carried upon the stock.

Thinks Well of This Section.

Mr. Carter, of Iowa, mentioned last week as being here with Samuel E. Meagher, of St. Cloud, looking over land propositions, went home very favorably impressed with the country and stated his intention of coming back in the spring and investing in some eastern Marshall county real estate. He was astonished at the samples of grasses and grains shown him here and took with him a sample of Mr. Clark's corn and made an extensive memorandum of dimensions of the grass and grain straw exhibits as well as the per acre yield reported to him. He admits that even in Iowa, where the land is worth from $100 to $150 per acre, they can not raise such grasses and grain straw as he saw here. This is only one instance of many wherein men are getting their eyes opened to the splendid possibilities of Marshall county and it is only a question of a little time until the new eastern portion of the county will be thickly settled with prosperous farmers and be the garden spot of the state.—Middle River Pioneer.

The Power of Dope.

The Times of Idaho Falls, Idaho, puts it this way: Here are a few testimonials for patent medicine men: "I have been unable to walk without crutches for many years, but after using your liniment I ran for office". "I lost my eyesight four years ago. I used your eye wash and I saw wood". I have been dumb ever since I was married, but the other day, after taking your remedy, I had a speaking likeness taken at the photographers". "Some time ago I lost the use of both arms. Shortly after buying a bottle of your nerve tonic I struck a man for ten dollars". "I had been deaf for many years, but after using your ointment I heard my aunt had died and left me $10,000.

"The Quality School"

extends to you its best wishes for a happy Christmas and a still happier New Year. It invites you into its school family after the Holiday festivities are over. Its faculty and its students will welcome you with open arms, will make you feel right at home from the first day to the last, will exert themselves to make your stay the most pleasant time of your life, will endeavor to help you whenever you need assistance, and best of all, train your brain in all the good and useful things. To make sure of a happy year come to the Commercial=Normal, January 3rd, 1910.

Prof. O. A. Naplin, President of the Commercial-Normal, is well known in this county and in fact all over the state. He has been a resident of Red Lake County since 1882 and is somewhat of a pioneer.

Mr. Naplin has spent many years in study; first at Crookston, then at Bethany College, Lindsborg, Kansas, and Gustavus Adolphus College from which he was graduated with honors in 1905. Since his graduation Mr. Naplin has spent most of his time teaching. He was Principal of the Harris High School one year and held a similar position at Scanlon three years ago. As Professor of Mathematics and the Physical Sciences at The Lutheran Ladies' Seminary at Red Wing he made a signal success.

Prof. Naplin is now completing his Law Studies at the U of N. D. and will receive his Bachelor of Law degree in the spring. He will then be in a position to devote all his time to the upbuilding of the Commercial-Normal School.

To Whom It May Concern:—

I am a student at the Commercial Normal School. I find a faculty of competent, practical teachers;

Courses designed to develop skillful bookkeepers and stenographers; but also—WHAT'S WORTH MUCH MORE—to stimulate quick, correct, independent thinking power.

This school does not make its students MACHINES; it aims to put a THINKING CAP on every student's head.

There are schools and schools, but if you want the best—well, need I say the rest?

Yours for Success,
Julius C. Olson.
Thief River Falls.

To Whom It May Concern:—

I am glad to have the opportunity to say a good word for the Commercial Normal School which I have attended for a couple of months.

The "Actual Business" method used in the Bookkeeping Department of this College is certainly one of the best adoptions by a business institution for the progress of the students and this institution needs no modernizing in any respect.

The instructors are competent and indefatigable and leave nothing undone to make you competent in whatever course you may pursue. "Good teachers make a good school," and I do not know that there can be a faculty of more competent instructors than that of this School.

I am confident in saying that anyone contemplating taking a business course makes no mistake in entering this institution.

With the best wishes for the future success of the Commercial Normal, I am,

Yours truly,
Theo. Sollom.

During the winter months this school will offer a course in advanced bookkeeping for those who already are somewhat versed in ordinary bookkeeping.

The course will be given evenings and will include higher modern mercantile and corporation accounting. A course in Commercial Law is included as these subjects are very closely allied.

This will be a feature and every young man who desires to better himself mentally and financially can not afford to miss it.

Tuition for 3 months is $18.

Mr. G. T. Almen, Principal of the Commercial Normal has been engaged in educational and commercial work since his graduation from Gustavus Adolphus College several years ago.

In the fall of 1904 he was elected assistant principal of the school of Commerce, the Commercial department of Gustavus Adolphus College, easily the highest grade school of its kind in this state. Leaving there, he went to the Mesaba Range to take charge of the books in the Supply Department of the Oliver Iron Mining Company. As foreman there, he had charge of six assistant bookkeepers, a score of yard men and business often figuring up to $200,000 a month.

Last year Mr. Almen was principal of a Commercial School in Grand Forks, N. D.

Mr. Almen is not only well versed in business knowledge, but is a scholar at home in the Languages and Literatures of England, Germany, France, Spain and Scandinavia as well as in Mathematics and Sciences.

Does Education Pay?

There are many people even in our enlightened age who believe that expending money in securing an education is a very poor investment. Various reasons are given, none of which seem to have the slighest foundation on fact. You hear some good father say that he will not educate his boy, because all that these educated fellows do, is to use their knowledge in cheating a living out of the hard working and ignorant class. Others say that all rascals are educated. Many more equally ridiculous contentions could be enumerated. The trouble with the persons that speak in this way is that they themselves are lacking the broadening influence of a good education. They look at the world from one side. Their vision of human activities is confined to extremely narrow limits, due to their lack of knowledge of things beyond the confines of their own activities. Education has much to do with the moral standard of a nation, but none but a bigot or extreme pessimist would say that education lowers the standard. The foundation of a nation's morals is the home. It is the parents' teaching which after all has most to do with the question whether a boy or girl is going to lead an upright and model life.

Look but at the other side and see what a glorious tribute history pays to the lives of educated men. Even its printed pages are testimony to the work of an educated man who thot out the characters by which it is now possible for every one to secure reading matter in abundance. A thing should never be condemned because it is not perfect. It is our duty to point out the imperfections and remedy them if possible. No one would say that the church should be abolished because it has failed to make all men honest. It would be equally ridiculous to expect the educational product to be perfect in every instance. We must look at the result as a whole. In every struggle for the advancement of the human race we find educated men in the lead. It was a Professor at Wittenberg who sounded the death knell to religious despotism. The Greek philosophers first announced the doctrine of equal right and educated Americans have now brought the doctrine to its closest fulfillment since man was created. The leaders in every walk of life are men with some learning. We can form no just estimate of their influence on the development of our present complex and high state of civilsation. That it is great no one disputes, even if not reducible to a money value.

It is difficult for a large class of people to see the good of any undertaking unless the result can be reckoned in dollars and cents. How fortunate for the world's progress that these are not in the majority; for then churches, schools, hospitals, asylums, poorhouses, in fact all charitable institutions were an impossibility. It is just these institutions that mark the difference between us and the lower classes of civilized people. We can, therefore, not expect to reduce every activity to a money value. We are not machines that our value should be reckoned in the Wall Street yardstick of dollars. That would be an extremely low estimate of life. There is something higher and nobler which also must be cultivated.

As far as a practical education is concerned it can safely stand the dollar test of the sordid materialist. Statistics secured thru extended investigation conclusively prove educated men's superiority. Of the great captains of industry who have been asked to give their opinion, nine out of ten are in favor of the educated man. Facts show that the average educated man gets a salary of $1200 per year. He works forty years, making a total of $48,000 in a life time. The average day laborer gets $1.75 per day, 300 days in the year or $525. He works forty years and earns $22,000. The difference, or $26,000 equals the value of an education. To acquire this earning capacity requires twelve years at school of 180 days each, or 2160 days in all. Divide $26,000, the value of an education, by 2160, number of days required in getting it, we find that each day in school is worth a little more than $12 to the pupil.

Parents and guardians should bear this in mind when taking children out of school because they can earn a few paltry cents at some employment. Think of what you are robbing your boy or girl by not giving him or her an education. A few dollars invested in securing them a little training while they are young will repay itself twelve times even in dollars, besides the inestimable value of the indirect benefits received. If you give your boy an education you have provided him with the means by which his future is secure. It is far better than leaving him a few thousand dollars when you die. He may not know how to use the money. It may even cause his destruction. The world is demanding more and more that we know how to do things. Education is the watchword of our day. Be abreast of the times and not a laggard behind.

Fakes.

Have you seen the advertisements of Business Colleges offering:

Free books,
Free diploma,
Free position (guaranteed,)
Free room,
Free board,
Free railroad fare (?)

What do you think of such a school? It must be conducted by charitable persons, or it must be a FAKE.

Exactly.

Put this above your door where you can see it. Where a person who has no interest in you offers you something valuable for nothing, then Beware.

No one runs a business to lose by it. A Business College is supported by the students it has. Reliable schools offer nothing free. They tell you their rates and expect you to pay them. The Commercial Normal gives you nothing for nothing, but it gives you better instruction for less money than any other reliable Commercial School in the State. For a comparison of costs at the Commercial Normal and at other schools read the table given elsewhere on this page.

Prof. P. O. Myhrum who is at the head of the Bookkeeping Department is especially well fitted for his responsible work. Prof. Myhrum, after finishing High School, graduated from the North Dakota University and afterwards took an advanced course in a first class Commercial and Technical School. He has had much experience in teaching and also in actual business work.

To Whom It May Concern:—

Whatever a young man's or a young woman's aim in life may be, a good business education is absolutely necessary.

I have attended the Commercial-Normal School during the fall and I am so well pleased with it that I feel it my duty to tell everybody about it.

Before coming here I carefully compared expenses and courses of all the well-known schools in this part of the country, and I found the Commercial-Normal the STRONGEST in courses and the LOWEST in price. I found that by coming to the Commercial-Normal I would save more than $50 during the year besides getting better instruction.

Very truly,

Thief River Falls, Minn.

Dear Sir:—

I am very much gratified to note the success which you and Mr. Naplin are making in your school, and hope it will grow in pace with the enterprising town in which it was established. You are certainly deserving of the highest degree of success in your undertaking, and if at any time I can be of any service to you I hope you will feel free to call upon me.

Very truly yours,
A. O. Eberhart,
Governor.

To Whom It May Concern:—

Being a student of the Commercial Normal of Thief River Falls, I wish to state my views concerning it. I cannot too greatly recommend it as a place of instruction in practical Business, for young women and men.

I am much pleased with the instructors and their method of teaching.

Rose-Marie Beaudry.

To Whom it May Concern;—

Having been a student of the Commercial Normal School of Thief River Falls for several months I am pleased to say that it is strong, thorough and practical. The teachers are conscientious and painstaking, the equipments are of first quality and the expenses are from $50 to $75 less a year than at other schools. I would advise any one contemplating a business course to come to the Commercial Normal.

Very truly

To All Fellow New-Comers:

I want to tell all you young men and women who have just come over from the old country that if you want to learn to read and write English this school is the place for you to come to.

I came here a little over two months ago and could not read or write a word in English and I could not speak many words either. And now what do you think? I can read nearly everything and I have written this letter with my own hand.

I should like to see anyone going faster in such a short time.

This is a good school and it has good teachers. The teachers work all the time with the students, so you have to learn if you want to or do not want to.

Yours truly,
Julius Loberg

BY JOHN W. EASTMAN
DOLLAR PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.
Published Every Thursday.

According to the Bagley Independent, Oscar Barness, cashier of the Clearwater State Bank, is to be candidate for the office of state treasurer. Clearwater county has a candidate in the person of Al Kaiser, and it would be "crowding the mourners" to have two candidates for one state office from such a small county.

A special to the Minneapolis Journal from Maynard says that W. C. Thompson is to be a candidate for secretary of state against Julius Schmal. His recomendation is that he owns six or seven farms in Chippewa county, and if land is worth anything down there we would advise him to keep the farms. Julius Schmal is going to succeed himself.

"In case Governor Eberhardt should refuse to accept the Republican nomination," the Oberg Journal has another candidate for this position. We do not have it from the governor straight, but we feel confident in saying that he will not refuse the nomination. Neither would W. E. Lee, R. B. Brower, "Bob" Dunn and some more we might mention.

Should Hon. A. L. Hanson, the Ada statesman make any attempt to be re-elected we have a letter of his written about this bridge proposition up here last winter, which we shall publish, just to let the farmers see the difference in Senator Hanson, when he wants their votes, and when he thought he had a lot of pork out of the state pork barrel and was in St. Paul.—Sunbeam.

We are not informed whether or not Mr. Hanson will again be a candidate, but we believe that nearly every voter, who supported him four years ago would be glad of the chance to do so again. Mr. Hanson is made of the "right stuff" and he does not make any promises that he does not fulfil. During his term in the senate he did not vote for any bill that was not in the interest of the people, and, much as we would like to see a bridge across the Red Lake river in the town of Highlanding, we do not want to see our representative in the legislature sell his vote to the interests in order to secure it.

THE TEST OF REPUBLICANISM

It is a singular thing that a bare majority of ninety in the American Senate should override the will of a party with millions of voters and then characterize as "insurgents" those who were with the millions instead of the majorty of ninety. I do not concede the right of a majority of ninety men to lay down for me the test of loyalty to Republican party. I find that test in that expression made by the party in its last national convention.

It is still very singular that a handful, a mere majority of ninety men, should characterize as Progressive those who represent the millions of voters. If we were according to their characterization, to be Progressives, then by their own declaration they are the Reactionaries.

Now, a great deal today is said about partly solidarity. Well, my friends, solidarity is a splendid thing provided it is coupled with vitality. You go tonight to the banks of the Nile and you will find there the ruins of cities and temples, huge rocks piled in chaotic mass, and every rock the very personification of solidarity.

If solidarity shall be a factor in accomplishment and acheivement it must be coupled with vitality; and if a political party, coupling vitality with solidarity expects to maintain its permanent hold upon the confidence of an intelligent people, there must be one other element, and that must be the element of Integrity. So we agree with the reactionaries as to the importance of solidarity, but we differ with them because they do not attach importance to either vitality or integrity.—From Senator Clapp's speech in Milwaukee.

WHAT A MAN CAN EARN.

Farm Stock and Home: A young man recently went into a real estate office in the northwest and listed his farm for sale, remarking to the land agent that he was "not making money enough." After he was gone the agent did some thinking and a little figuring with this result. When the young man came to his claim eight years ago, he had his hands and perhaps a few hundred dollars. He did not have enough money to carry his business. He had to go slow, save every cent and wait for better times before he could have things to his liking. So it is fair to say that he started at the bottom. He is a good workman and could earn going farm wages and no more. He has no trade and no education to speak of—not enough to put him into the money making end of any business unless he had the capital to back him.

Now, after eight years, he owns a section of land. It is all paid for—it is his. It is a good prairie loam in a good part of the northwest. There is a comfortable little house on it. Year by year the crops have come and have done well. And the other day when he listed his land with the real estate man he set the price at $8,000. In other words he has made, above his living $1,000 a year, and now is anxious to get out of the country into some paradise on earth where he, an uneducated workman with his hands for tools, can make more money?

This man (or rather society for him) is gathering under his name more money per year than the average business or professional man succeeds in saving and still he is unsatisfied. Because he can clear only a paltry $1,000 per year he is anxious to quit and move farther on. Situated where that farm is within the next twenty-five years it will easily go to $100 per acre; or if he just holds onto the land without any more than making a living, he will continue to save down to old age his paltry $1,000 a year, and at sixty can retire with a fortune such as many a banker or merchant or attorney would look upon as a splendid net return for his life's work.

It is no use to try and reach this man. He is dissatisfied, and go he will, if he has to drop some of his present profits in order to get free. But there are other men in the northwest, who are situated much the same, to whom the same temptation to sell out and move farther west or north may come. There are some facts, it does not pay to gloss over, and the fact of your earning power is one of them. If fortune has placed you where society is adding to your wealth at a fair rate, give the credit to society—to the general increase in values—but do not forget that your next move may not be so fortunate. So long as things are on a general upward trend stay by the farm; and the trend of farm values is upward, must be upward for many years to come.

In sections of heavy snow it is not so often the intense cold as the fact that their food supplies are covered up that is responsible for the death of quail. If, therefore, they seek shelter in the vicinity of the feed lots or sheds they should be given a kindly welcome by the farm or ranch owner, as they are universally recognized as among his very best bird friends.

Much can be said about the proper handling of the farm animals during the winter months. Very much can also be boiled down to the statement that the several kinds of stock should be provided dry and comfortable sleeping quarters, an abundance of fresh air and a food ration which will best enable them to do the work or serve the purpose which they are supposed to serve.

The preliminary crop report issued by the agricultural department at Washington places the average yield of potatoes the past season at 106.5 bushels per acre as against a yield of 85.7 bushels for 1908 and 80.6 bushels as the ten year average. The total production this year is placed at 367,473,000 bushels as compared with 278,965,000 bushels in 1908. The above figures are very encouraging and seem to show that the growers of the Irish potato are waking up.

An effort is being made by the agricultural department at Washington to introduce into the United States the South African calabash, or gourd, the use of which as a pipe bowl was discovered by the Boers. They tried to establish a monopoly in the growth of the gourd and prevent the exportation of the seed, but some were brought over for experimental purposes. Pipes made from this gourd are said to be graceful and distinctive in shape, color like meerchaum and when imported are said to cost from $8 to $12.

FOREIGN NEWS.

King Leopold of Belgium is dead, his aged and wasted body being unable to stand the strain put upon it. The collapse occurred suddenly and at a time when the doctors seemingly had the greatest hopes for his recovery. Leopold was seventy-four years of age and had been ruler of Belgium since 1865. There being no direct hereditary heir the crown passes to Prince Albert, the only son of Leopold's brother, the late Phillippe, count of Flanders.

Jose Santos Zelaya has resigned from the presidency of Nicaragua. He has placed his resignation in the hands of congress. Apparently there was no other course for him to take. The people were at last aroused, the guns of the revolutionists threatened and the warships of the United States lay in Nicaraguan ports.

Business in New South Wales has been so demoralized by the coal strike that the legislature took the drastic step of passing a bill rendering both strike leaders and employers who instigate or aid a strike or lockout liable to a year's imprisonment.

Governor General Zyn of Finland has returned to Helsingfors from St. Petersburg armed with a warrant from the czar to revive immediately the most oppressive Finnish regulations, which amount to the enslavement of Finland.

COST OF LIVING IS VERY HIGH

Crown in Sweden No Longer Represents the Buying Power of a Dollar in America as It Used To—Foodstuffs Are Largely Imported, Rents Have Gone Up Enormously—Many Workingmen and Families Live in One Room and Kitchen.

SWEDEN.

Swedes who have been away from their native land fifteen or more years are accustomed to think that a crown in Sweden represents as much in buying power as a dollar in America. That is no longer true. It was true when agricultural was the main reliance of the country. Farming used to engage four-fifths of the people of the population, but now less than half of the people of Sweden make their living from the land. Foodstuffs are largely imported and pay customs duties besides. Workingmen have obtained increases, and roughly speaking, they estimate that wages have been doubled in fifteen years, but that the cost of living has increased in about the same scale. Since the big industrial growth, there has been a real estate boom in Stockholm and other cities, and rents have gone up enormously. Now in Stockholm the great mass of workingmen with families live in one room and a kitchen. For this they pay at the least 300 crowns, or $81 a year. Most of them have to pay 324 crowns and in parts of Stockholm nothing can be had for less than 400 crowns. Many families pay more than one-fourth of their income for two rooms without heat or any modern convenience. The cost of bread is one of the main complaints in Stockholm and indeed it has gone so far that it became the subject of a special investigation by the Stockholm city government recently. The cost for the present year has been an average of 6 cents a pound for plain white bread of the cheaper sort and there is of course a general complaint that this is too high.

Says Charles B. Cheney, the Minneapolis Journal's Honolulu correspondent: "One of the lessons of the great strike last summer was that the people of Sweden can get along without strong liquor. The success of partial prohibition during the labor troubles, which were devoid of riots and scenes of disorder, has given a big impetus to the temperance cause. The prohibitionists are asking the nation this question: 'If it was good for Sweden to give up liquor for a month why would it not be better to give it up for all time?' Taking advantage of the temperance wave that is on, the prohibitionists have started a big enterprise. They call it a 'plebiscite' on the liquor question. It is what American politicians would call a straw vote, and like all such votes, is being taken by partisans. All who are engaged in the work are friends of temperance and of ultimate prohibition. Many engaged in it are not eager to try prohibition at once, but are ready to help agitation and progress along that line. The work has been organized by a joint committee of all temperance bodies, aided by numerous citizens outside. Volunteers are working in every parish and ward, and in the next month will see every person in Sweden over the age of eighteen. The prohibitionists hope that the majority will express themselves for prohibition. Even if they fail, the agitators will have lost nothing. They have been taunted with representing a mere handful of people, and they expect to show by this vote that they are backed by the sentiment of millions."

Selma Lagerlof has by the Nobel committee been awarded the literary prize, which amounts to about $40,000. Miss Lagerlof is at present regarded as Sweden's greatest living woman writer. Her books have been extensively read in foreign countries, and have been translated into not less than six different languages. "Jerusalem," which brought her into the limelight of fame, has been read outside of the Scandinavian countries, very extensively in Germany and England. Signor Marconi and Professor Karl Braun of Strassburg university in Germany, have been awarded the prize for physics which will be divided between them. The honor has come to Signor Marconi, who is equally well known on both sides of the Atlantic, in recognition of his achievements with wireless telegraphy. Professor Braun will share the honor, it is said, because of his invention of various improvements in the Marconi system of wireless telegraphy. The Nobel prizes as is known number five, of the average value of $40,000 each, and are given annually to those who have done the most useful work of the year in literature, physical science, chemistry, physiology or medicine and for the propaganda of peace.
ocean monsters has been added to its navy at a cost of 13,700,000 crowns.

NORWAY.

A publishing house has issued in four volumes a complete collection of the posthumous writings of Henrik Ibsen. The volumes contain a great deal of verse, biographical material, and sketches of plots and morals of Ibsen's plays, as well as the text of the plays as first completed, the last showing the great importance Ibsen attributed to careful planning of his plays in advance, and the thorough revision of them. The collection is naturally counted among the rarest in modern literature and will be translated into five different languages.

Business conditions all over the country are rather dull at present, and from many sections comes much complaint. There are hundreds of men out of employment in Christiania and while they have not had any large industrial strike as in Sweden, there is nevertheless, a characteristic unrest in all labor circles. There has only been an average crop, and the fact that so many people are emigrating only goes to show there is something radically wrong with industrial and business affairs generally in Norway at present.

There were recently great festivities in Bergen, in connection with the formal dedication of the Bergen railway. A Sunday dinner was given at the Bergen theater and among others who were present was King Haakon. The Bergens Tidende was, however, very much wrought up over the whole affair and claims that instead of serving dinner for only about 100 invited guests from out of town, there should have been a "folkefest" in which all the people of the town and surrounding community could have participated.

A gentleman who was eating oysters the other day at one of the leading hotels in Christiania, found not less than ten pearls in one of the oysters set before him. One of them at least is regarded as being very valuable and one can readily imagine his joy when he found so valuable a thing while eating. In other words he was making money at that very time.

The Christiana police have forbidden wrestling matches at Tivoli. During the past few months there have been not less than twenty sensational wrestling matches and the people of Christiania thought it was too much of a good thing so that they put a stop to it.

An important real estate deal took place in Christiania the other day, when A. Beck Hansen and John Torgenson purchased Holmen's Gade No. 6, for a consideration of 125,000 crowns. It was one of the largest real estate deals on record this season.

Bjorn and Enlar Bjornson and Sigurd Ibsen, were suddenly called to Paris the other day, owing to the illness of Bjornstjerne Bjornson. Bjornson's wife and daughter, Mrs. Sigurd Ibsen are continually at the bed side of the dying author.

The mines in Meraker have been temporarily closed and about 300 men were thus thrown out of employment. About three million crowns have been expended on these mines, but recently it is learned that they have been operated at a loss.

The committee having charge of the Nansen Fund will contribute 20,000 crowns from the aforementioned fund for Roald Amundsen's oceanographic researches on the Atlantic.

As early as Nov. 1 there was excellent sleighing in Kristianssand and vicinity. In Christiania it has been different, but there has been zero weather for a number of days.

The "Norwegian Club" in London held its annual dinner at Hotel Cecil, Nov. 24. Sir Henry Seton, president of the club, acted as toastmaster for the evening.

"Grand Hotel," a popular tourist hostelry at Otta, was destroyed by fire during the latter part of last month.

The tariff on Norwegian salt-peter has in Sweden been increased to fifteen per cent.

DENMARK.

One thing is absolutely certain and that is that Dr. Cook has some very staunch supporters in Copenhagen. They apparently propose to stick up for him until it has been absolutely proven that he is an out and out faker. A recent dispatch says: "Professor Elias Stromgren, professor of astronomy in the University of Copenhagen, who will be president of the committee that is to investigate the data of Dr. Frederick A. Cook's polar expedition, came out Dec. 10 unequivocally in expressing his skepticism of the affidavits made by Captain Loose and George W. Dunkle, who say they faked the records Dr. Cook is to present to the commission. Professor Stromgren intimated that the charges in the affidavits fall of their own weight when they assert that Dr. Cook showed his ignorance of astronomical observations. He said that before Dr. Cook sailed from Copenhagen for America, the explorer talked with numerous Scandinavian scientists about the very things concerning which his accusers charge him with being grossly ignorant, and thoroughly satisfied the scientists of his complete competency. Stromgren says Dr. Cook revealed full knowledge of the facts that Loose and Dunkle say they supplied him." The Politiken, Dec. 10, says: "An unnamed Greenlander, who is known to Rasmussen, has received several letters urging him to denounce Cook. Rasmussen, who is half Dane and half Eskimo, is himself an arctic explorer and a warm supporter of Dr. Cook." The Politiken hints that a handsome financial reward was held out to this Greenlander if he would denounce Dr. Cook. It is pointed out here that many of those upon whom Dr. Cook had a right to rely for substantial proof of his claims, both as to the north pole and to Mount McKinley, have been tampered with, and the opinion is expressed that a fortune has already been spent in "manufacturing" evidence against Cook.

MINNEAPOLIS MAN NAMED

Lauritz Swenson Appointed Minister to Switzerland.

Lauritz Swenson of Minneapolis, former United States minister to Denmark, is to be United States minister to Switzerland. His name has been sent to the senate by President Taft.

Mr. Swenson is vice president of the Union State bank and has been prominent in Minnesota politics for years. He was born in Minnesota and has lived in Minneapolis for four and a half years.

In 1897 Mr. Swenson, who was a banker in Albert Lea, was appointed minister to Denmark by President McKinley. He served eight years, and during the latter part of his term was dean of the diplomatic corps at Copenhagen. In 1905 Mr. Swenson resigned and came to Minneapolis. He has been prominent in state politics, although he has never been a candidate for office. He is treasurer of the Republican state central committee and a member of the executive committee.

DEATH RECORD IS UNUSUAL

Four Men Killed in Accidents in Minneapolis.

An unusual series of deaths and accidents to workmen occurred in Minneapolis within twenty-four hours. Four deaths, a broken leg and two men in a hospital, one of whom is in a serious condition, is the list. Every man was either a workman or was doing manual labor. Of the seven cases, five are connected with the railroads. The dead are:

Donald Ising, a Great Western strikebreaker, hit by a Burlington passenger train, thrown against a freight car and killed instantly.

An unknown workman, found dead and mangled beside the Milwaukee tracks, two miles west of Cedar lake.

Albert Ossen, dead after falling into a vat of boiling dye at the Co-operative Barrel company's plant.

Otto Woxland, dead from injuries received when caught in machinery at the plant of the Northwestern Consolidated Milling company.

ANTI-BLACKLIST LAW VALID

St. Paul Police Judge Fines Hill Railroad Lines.

Judge Finehout, in the police court at St. Paul, upheld the validity of the so called "anti-blacklist law" in the cases brought by Thomas Van Lear in the name of the state against the Great Northern and Northern Pacific railways.

The judge held both companies guilty of violating the law and imposed a fine of $50 against each, which was paid under protest for the purpose of taking appeals to the supreme court.

The law prohibits any person from requiring a personal record for a period longer than one year from any applicant for employment. It was testified that the defendants asked such a record for a period of ten years.

COUNTY TREASURER GUILTY

Kremer Convicted of Appropriating Funds for His Own Use.

The jury in the case of A. A. Kremer, former county treasurer, on trial at Grand Rapids, brought in a verdict of guilty of grand larceny for appropriating county funds for his own use. The jury had been out twenty-four hours and it is understood that the members spent the greater part of the time debating the question of the sanity of the accused. The defense had not admitted that the late treasurer had taken any funds of the county, but its principal contention was that the accused was suffering from morphine insanity. Kremer was sentenced to five years in state prison.

NEW RECORD PRICE FOR FLAX

Touches $2 a Bushel on the Minneapolis Market.

Flax went to $2 a bushel at Minneapolis, a record never before attained.

According to the government's estimate Minnesota and the Dakotas raised 25,000,000 bushels of this grain this year.

December wheat went to $1.14 a bushel and May to $1.13¾.

West Duluth Boy Killed.

Freddie Krebs of West Duluth, the six-year-old son of Emil Krebs, school janitor, was killed by a runaway team. The boy climbed on a slab wood wagon which was delivering wood at his home. The horses became frightened and ran. The boy hung on the side of the wagon, but was thrown under the vehicle and was instantly killed.

Minnesota State Timber Sold.

State Auditor S. G. Iverson has sold at public auction at Duluth mixed timber in St. Louis county to the amount of $30,000. Birch brought $2, pine $8, tamarack and cedar ties 10 cents, cedar poles 10 to 50 cents and spruce $1 to $1.50 per cord. It was the first county sale under the new state law governing the sale of state timber.

Whirled to Death by Shaft.

Ed Reinhardt, a grain dealer and one of Bird Island's leading business men, was instantly killed while he was working in the basement of his elevator. His clothing caught in the shafting. He was whirled around several times before the clothing tore and dropped him.

No Mercy for Mashers.

Steinar Henson and Claus Erickson of Duluth were fined $25 each for accosting women on the streets of that city. Judge Windom admonished the police department to go after mashers and fetch them in as fast as possible.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

TWO ST. PAUL MEN KILLED

Fatal Wreck on the Omaha Railroad at Blakely.

Two St. Paul men were killed and a dozen other persons sustained injuries in a collision between the westbound flyer on the Belle Plaine division of the Omaha railroad and an incoming freight train at Blakely. The dead are:

Joe Zinnell, twenty-seven years old, fireman of the passenger train, who lived with his wife and three-year-old boy at 716 Tuscarora avenue.

Thorwald Torgenson, railway mail clerk, about thirty years old, who lived with his wife and baby on Logan street near Seventh.

Officials of the Omaha road say that Brakeman Herman of the freight train was responsible for the wreck, declaring he by mistake locked the switch while it was still thrown for the sidetrack.

WINNIPEG FLYER WRECKED

Broken Rail Cause of Fatal Disaster Near Monticello.

The Great Northern's Winnipeg flyer, northbound, drawn by two engines, about an hour overdue and going forty-five miles an hour, bowled off a broken rail near Monticello. The first engine passed over the broken rail in safety. The second engine and five cars went into the ditch.

George A. Hobrough of St. Paul, fireman on the second engine, was instantly killed by being crushed between the tender and boiler. The escape of L. Robertson of St. Paul, engineer of the second engine, was miraculous. The passengers received only a bad shaking up.

Some time following the derailment engine coals, fanned by the high wind, set fire to the express car, which rapidly burned, setting fire in turn to a day coach, which was half consumed.

SYRUP COMPANY BURNS OUT

Fire Causes Heavy Loss to Property at St. Paul.

The plant of the Towle Syrup company of St. Paul, located on the West Side, was destroyed by fire causing a loss of $100,000, covered by insurance. The plant was in a three-story brick building built eight years ago. The principal product was syrup, but candies and other sweets were also manufactured. One hundred people are out of employment as a result of the fire.

E. A. Towle, one of the owners, stated that an effort would be made to supply customers and that as soon as possible the plant would be rebuilt.

MINNESOTA'S WHEAT CROP

Production This Year Will Be Nearly 100,000,000 Bushels.

According to advance crop reports received at St. Paul from Washington the wheat production of this state this year will come close to the 100,000,000 bushel mark. This establishes a new wheat record for this state, being 26,405,000 bushels above last year's product.

Of barley, a crop much in evidence in the southern part of the state and which is being extended because of its usefulness in renewing soil, the Washington estimate is over 31,000,000 bushels. The oat estimate is over 89,000,000 bushels.

HIRED MAN FOUND GUILTY

One Conviction in Ledbeter Murder Case.

Frank Smith, the first of the quartette indicted on the charge of murdering H. J. Ledbeter to be tried, was found guilty by the jury at Mankato of murder in the first degree, as charged in the indictment.

The trial of Mrs. Grace Ledbeter, another of the four indicted, has now begun. Although the state had not expected to commence it until Dec. 27 the defense insisted on an immediate trial and the court granted it.

ONE BOY DIES IN FLAMES

Fire at Funeral Starts a Panic Among the Mourners.

A candle set fire to the funeral hangings in the home of Joseph Prefontaine at Ely, where the body of his mother was laid out. A large number of guests who were present escaped panic stricken and in the confusion a seven-year-old boy, who was asleep up stairs, was burned to death. George Prefontaine, the son of Joseph, was seriously and perhaps fatally burned while trying to save the body from cremation.

Farm School Dean Elected.

The regents of the state university have elected A. F. Woods of Washington, D. C., as dean of the state agricultural college to succeed Dean John W. Olsen, resigned. His salary was fixed at $4,000. This probably will end the complicated controversy which has lasted since Dean E. W. Randall resigned, a little more than a year ago.

THE COMING BANDCONCERT

Great Preparations Are Being Made For Concert to Be Given As Soon As Auditorium Is Completed.

Band Is Making Splendid Progress Under the Able Direction of Mr. Maxwell.

The Thief River Falls Concert Band is preparing for a grand concert to be given in the new opera house, which is fast nearing completion. The programme which follows will be rendered. It is a high class one, and it is with a feeling of pride that we announce that our band is able to play a programme of music such as is attempted only by the very best bands in the large towns and cities.

The band has a membership of 28, and it is safe to say that Thief River has now one of the very best amateur bands in the state. This is a matter of gratification to everyone in this city, as, not only is good music a delightful entertainment and diversion, but it also has an educational and ethical value that cannot be overestimated.

We are glad to state that music is being made an important factor in the progress and development of our fast growing city. Of all the fine arts, music, with its refining and elevating influence, is nearest to the mass of the people. It should be liberally supported in some form, and should be considered in part with the material advancement of every wisely directed community.

The kind of music that reaches the greatest number of people is beyond doubt that of the present day concert bands, and there can be no better evidence of the real spirit of progress—and of the fact that we cultivate the better things of life in our midst—than a well organized, well equipped, and well drilled band that is capable of furnishing really fine music for concerts, or any public occasion.

We certainly have a fine band now, and it is the desire of every citizen who really has the welfare of Thief River Falls at heart to see this fine organization well supported, and maintained in the highest state of musical efficiency.

The Modest Girl.

"Nick" Tarrant, observer and keen judge of girls, brought the following to the News office this week with the request that it be published. It may be original and then again it may be "faked" article from the Fox Lake (Wis.) Representative. At all events here it is:

Some one was telling of a Crookston girl who was so bashful she blushes every time she sees a sleeping car, of the Warren girl who faints at the sight of undressed lumber, the St. Hilaire girl who locks herself in her room and pulls down the blinds every time she wants to change her mind, of the Plummer girl who is so shy she will not wear undressed kids, the Middle River girl who never thinks of retiring with a copy of the Christian Observer in her room, and the Thief River Falls girl who is modest she will not use improper fractions.

But these really pass into insignificance by the side of the Red Lake Falls girl who shies at the bare truth or the naked fact and who has eliminated from her vocabulary garden hose and bureau drawers and runs when she sees a salad dressing. This same girl has positively refused to stay in the Gazette office while the forms were being made up.

Moeller Has "Lit".

Dr. Thor Moeller, the former Thief River Falls resident, who was convicted of murder in the second degree and who took an appeal to the supreme court, has gone to Mexico, according to accounts from Minot, without telling his friends and bondsmen at the Ward county capital. The court concluded that a $50,000 bond was more suited to the case than the $10,000 bond on which he was released. One of his bondsmen went to California to bring him back and turn him over to the court or have him secure the increased bond. When the bondsman arrived in California he found that the doctor had gone south, leaving an order to have his mail forwarded to Hermocillo, Sonora, Mexico.

OPPORTUNITY OF LIFETIME

Middle River Editor Tells of the Opportunities in Eastern Marshall County.

Two Hundred Sections of Land Now Open for Settlement to Be Drained.

The following taken from R. D. V. Carr's paper, the Middle River Pioneer, tells of the great opportunities offered in this section of the state:

"There are few places, where rich, level land can be had, under the homestead laws, for $1.25 per acre. There are few places, where the land is thoroly drained and roads built ready for the occupant, at 5 per cent on twenty years time. This is exactly what can be found in the Mud Lake country, more than 200 sections of which lands are still vacant and can be filed on under the homestead laws. Over 1,000 miles of great ditches and their laterals are being laid out by the engineers, and the viewers are now at work making the assessments for benefits. The whole proposition will be so far completed as to let the contracts for dredging before the spring break-up.

Perhaps no where in the West are such opportunities offered a man in moderate circumstances to settle on good land so cheaply as right here in eastern Marshall county. The swamps to be drained are practically all of clay bottom, with two or three feet of vegetable mold on top, with a southwesterly incline of 2 to 5 feet to the mile. The little groves are mostly taken up, but there is an abundance of fuel to be found in the tamarack swamps to last for years, and the whole covered with a luxuriant growth of wild grasses.

Clover, Alfalfa and corn are grown successfully on land high enough to dry out quickly after heavy rains and, after the ditches are in, will undoubtly be as sure a crop as in any part of the state. It has come to pass that there are no more new lands to be opened up by Uncle Sam, and land values are rising very fast. A man, who has a quarter of good land laid by for a home for his children, or for old age, will be fortunate, for most of our people will become of necessity, either renters or laborers. At any rate, this is the last chance to get good land, on homestead, in Minnesota".

And, in addition to the above outlined opportunities for homesteaders, there are equally as desirable opportunities offered in deeded lands. There are many quarters of unimproved land on the market here at prices ranging from $10 to $25 per acre, that are as good soil and more productive than lands farther south that are bringing from $100 to $150 per acre. Farms lying right along side of these wild lands have this year produced from 20 to 25 bushels of wheat, from 15 to 20 bushels of flax and correspondingly large crops of barley, oats, rye, potatoes, clover timothy or any thing else that is raised in Minnesota. With the complete drainage of the country so that the sun's heat will not be so largely absorbed in evaporating the water, three big crops are assured here every year. Hence, the country is bound to grow and develop rapidly in the next few years, which means a rapid raise in land values so that the opportunities now offered of getting hold of cheap land will not last. Get into the game and secure yourself a home now before the rise comes!

Turkeys for Employes.

Following a precedent established a number of years ago, the Thief River Falls Lumber company on Christmas day presented all of the married men in the employ of the company with a turkey. There is quite a small army of men in the employ of the company and it was found necessary to send to a St. Paul packing house for part of the supplies as the local butchers and farmers of this vicinity were unable to fill the order. Superintendent Crowe says that it is possible that in the distribution some of the employes were forgotten, and if they will kindly "speak up" the lumber company will see to it that they are remembered on New Year's.

Down around Crookston and Grand Forks it is reported that many prairie chickens and other wild game birds are dying for lack of food, occasioned by the recent rain and sleet, making it impossible for these birds to get food. Arrangements have been made down there to compensate the farmers for feeding these birds, until they are able to secure food in other ways.

MUCH POVERTY IN STOCKHOLM

Thousands of Families Are Without Food and Proper Clothing and Are Walking Aimlessly About the Streets in the Suburbs of the Capital City—All Members of Other Families Are Reported Down with Typhoid Fever—Conditions Peculiarly Distressing.

SWEDEN.

While it is true that there are many generous hearted men and women of means who have and are about to donate large sums of money to charity institutions and the poor generally, there is much poverty at present in Stockholm, and not there alone, judging from rather dark reports that come from the suburbs where there are so many people living, rather merely existing and who will soon be threatened with starvation if something is not done to them speedily. Thousands of families are without food and proper clothing and are walking aimlessly about the streets in these suburbs. In Hagalund, where there are at least 8,000 people, the conditions are described as being particularly distressing and whole families are down with typhoid fever, and have nothing to eat. The charity societies are doing everything in their power, but the supplies do not begin to reach. A nurse, Miss Agnes Ahlberg, who has been conducting a rigid investigation for one of the charity societies, claims that most of the disease originates from hunger and that there are actually hundreds of families who are at present on the point of starving to death. Such is the situation even now in the month of December. A Stockholm writer asks: "If such is the condition already in the month of December, what will it not be when the cold whether sets in in earnest in January and February?"

Experiments of considerable importance to American farmers have been conducted recently in Sweden, and are also to be taken up in Denmark. The experiments concern the dairy industry. The Scandinavian dairies use large quantities of oil cake as feed and this important export trade from the states has been threatened by the soya bean, a Manchurian product, now being raised extensively in England and going into other countries. This bean, which resembles the common pea, yields only about ten per cent of oil and its main product is the cake left after the oil is extracted. It is found to be very cheap feed, but experiments made by Dr. Rosengren of the Swedish government experiment station at Malmoe, have shown that when fed to dairy cattle the soya cake gives the butter a disagreeable "by taste" or flavor. Even when fed in small quantities, as one pound a day the taste is found. The taste has not been noticed in milk. The commercial danger from the soya bean has attracted attention in Washington and Julien S. Brode, a special agent of the department of commerce and labor, has been in Europe making inquiries. He has been in all the leading Scandinavian cities and as soon as he heard of the Rosengren experiments, he hurried to Gothenburg and Malmoe, to see and judge for himself.

There is a generous heart in the person of Grosshanlandlare E. Cederlund, who, when he drew up his will the other day, donated over a quarter million crowns to various charitable purposes. To the Swedish Anti-Tuberculosis society he donated 50,000 crowns, to the Stockholm Commercial college he gave 50,000 crowns and to the Sofia hospital he gave 20,000 crowns. The Charity society in Stockholm received 20,000 crowns and the King Oscar and Queen Sofia Wedding Anniversary Fund, received 20,000 crowns, the National Museum received 15,000. Thus it is that the charity and educational institutions of Sweden are placed in the vanguard, owing to the many charity minded men and women who are from time to time providing these institutions with money.

To show how desperate some men become who are out of work is the pitiable scene that was presented to a number of spectators the other day near the Bromsten's station. A man apparently about forty years old, suddenly threw himself in front of a slowly moving passenger train, aiming to be cut in two at once. His left leg was cut off, but the train stopped at once and he was dragged out alive. He shouted: "Let me die for I have no work." He was taken to a hospital where he died two days later. The poor man prior to his death related that he could secure neither bread nor work and that he tried to end it all by throwing himself in front of the locomotive. He succeeded.

John Swanberg, the great Swedish runner, will not return to America as was announced some time ago. He has located in Stockholm, where he will at all times defend the Swedish championship, and it is believed that he would like another go with Alfred Schrubb.

Suicides are many and desperate in character in these days in Stockholm. Lack of work and lack of food, accompanied by despair, is what is driving many a workingman to take his own life. It is a dark period in the history of this beautiful city.

There will be a deficit in the government treasury amounting to more than 12,000,000 crowns, if recent reports to that effect are true.

NORWAY.

Says an enthusiastic writer on "Christmas in Norway": "On Christmas Eve the hurry and bustle ceases, and a peculiar, solemn repose falls over the city. At 5 o'clock all the church bells begin to ring, ushering in the great festival of peace and joy, calling upon the rich and poor alike to forget the cares of this life, the bickerings and heartaches, and accept the the great gifts of Christmas, the soothing balm for weary hearts. For no heart is so sad and darkened, no hovel is so cheerless but what a ray of sunshine may fall into it at Christmas time. Ski running is the greatest winter sport in Norway, and on Christmas Day afternoon the people of Christiania, thousands upon thousands, assemble on Voxenkollen, two high hills to the west of the city, to witness or to take part in the most exhilarating sport of ski-running. Not only the young men and women; but even the old men bravely pilot their skis, as they rush down the steep incline towards the city. No wonder the Norwegian newcomers to America have sound, clean, healthy bodies, with rosy cheeks and sparkling eyes. They come from a country of clean and healthy living, of pure and bracing air, of plenty of outdoor work and sport. Besides the ski-running, tobogganing is a popular form of amusement. In the dark winter evenings the toboggans go flying down the long hills by the light of pine torches and to the music of happy voices. In majestic silence the fir trees stand on either side of the road, the needles powdered with snow flakes and their branches bending under the weight of snow. Skating, too, is a common sport, and the glassy surface of the lakes and fjords offer abundant opportunity for the glorious pastime. Thus is Christmas celebrated in and out of doors in Norway. To appreciate the peculiar joy and sanctity of "Yule" in Norway one must spent a Christmas there. The snow covers valleys and hills, the dark, mysterious forests, the piercing mountain tops, the glittering abandonment of the people to the joys of the holy season—all promise to make Norway the land of the ideal Christmas.

It is predicted by many that Premier Gunnar Knudsen will resign in the near future and that his successor will be either Ex-Premier Michelsen or Justuce Arctander. There are many who feel certain that it will be Michelsen, who is by all odds the strongest man in public life today, irrespective of to fac that be himself persists hat he will not re-enter politics again. Michelsen somehow has the confidence of the Norwegian people and his acceptance of the premiership would undoubtedly be a most pleasant and favorable announcement to the Norwegian people.

Willie Burmeister, the famous violinist impressario, fell on the street in Christiania the other day and smashed a "Stradivarius" valued at 100,000 crowns. It is reported that Burmeister's artistics temperature has been in a rage ever since.

DENMARK.

A great many people are speculating upon the probable duration of the Zahle ministry, which was formed a few weeks ago from the ranks of the radical party. "It is an accepted fact," says a correspondent from Copenhagen, "that the new government is only a makeshift, and that the crisis which overthrew Count Holstein-Ledreborg does not mean any real change in the national policy. In that sense it does not carry any special significance for the outside world and the whole thing appears almost too inconsistent for ordinary comprehension. It is evident that the political issue at present in Denmark is the question of national defense. The conservatives, so called, are the particular champions of the world-power idea. The Danish aristocracy, supported by a part of the business element, believe that Denmark should prepare to assert her position and guard against the possible attacks of other countries. The radicals, and of course the socialists also, have opposed the whole proposition and have maintained that Denmark's integrity will be guarded by other powers. They denounce expenditures on national defense as pure folly for so feeble a nation.

Former United States Senator W. A. Harris of Kansas died suddenly at the home of a relative in Chicago. Heart disease was given as the cause of death.

Frederic Remington, the artist, died at his home at Ridgefield, Conn., from heart failure and shock superinduced by an operation for appendicitis.

The states of Minnesota, North and South Dakota raised this year 645,000,000 bushels of grain, a total never before attained. Eight principal crops produced in the three states are worth $442,799,000 on the farms.

More than $2,000,000 will be distributed by the United States Steel corporation as a bonus to officers and employes. Of this amount 60 per cent will be in cash and the balance in stock.

Trade between South America and the United States in 1909 will exceed all previous records, with a total of nearly $260,000,000, against $223,000,000 in 1907 and $129,000,000 in 1899.

Nearly one-half of the exports from the United States goes to British territory and nearly one-third of its imports is drawn from British territory.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

That a number of suits for timber trespass will follow the patenting to the state of 185,000 acres of swamp land that was claimed by the Indians as a part of their reservation is the belief of State Auditor Iverson. He said that title to these tracts of land had been in controversy so long that no one has taken care of the timber and he believes that many of the smaller saw mill owners have helped themselves to timber on the land that were in dispute.

Joseph Tetlie, twenty-one years old, who was graduated from St. Olaf college in 1909, won the Cecil Rhodes scholarship at Oxford university, Cambridge, Eng., from representatives of every college and university in the state. Presidents of the higher educational institutions met with President Cyrus Northrop of the university and after consulting the examination papers written last fall gave the scholarship to Mr. Tetlie.

Minnesota is remarkably free from smallpox, according to the reports of the state board of health. Since October 177 cases have been reported to Dr. H. M. Bracken, secretary of the board, and none has proved fatal. Nearly half of these cases have appeared in Luverne, in the southwestern corner of the state. Outside of that point the only other smallbox reports are from scattered points.

Insurance aggregating $500,000 has been issued through the Northwestern National Life Insurance company of Minneapolis on the life of John H. MacMillan, vice president and manager of the Cargill Elevator company. The elevator company is named as beneficiary, the insurance being of the kind known as business insurance.

F. W. Hermann, the Omaha road brakeman who was charged with responsibility for the wreck at Blakely, has been released by Scott county officials. The company made no complaint against Hermann and no warrant was issued for his arrest.

The state supreme court has issued an order directing Ernest S. Cary, a Minneapolis attorney, to appear before the court on Jan. 3 and show cause why he should not be disbarred from practice for willful misconduct as an attorney.

John C. Greenway, superintendent of mines for the United States Steel corporation in the Sanisteo district, Western Mesaba range, has resigned and is succeeded by M. H. Godfrey, a man of long experience on the range.

The state board of control has announced that it will receive bids up to Feb. 7 for the new prison at Stillwater. The bids will include the buildings for almost the entire new plant, the estimated cost being $2,000,000.

The board of visitors to state institutions has elected James C. Matchitt of St. Paul secretary of the board. The salary was fixed at $1,500.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Kash Fitzgerald, a switchman employed in the railroad yards at South St. Paul, was crushed to death when he tried to crawl between two box cars while they were moving. Fitzgerald was an old switchman. When the strike was called he went out, but three days later returned to work.

Ingelbright Jellum was instantly killed by falling down stairs at his home in Minneapolis. His neck was broken by the fall. Jellum was walking from one bedroom to another and had to pass a stairs. No lights were in the house and he slipped and was hurled to the bottom.

John Johnson of Fertile, sixteen years old, while out rabbit hunting near that place with two companions, started to climb a tree, pulling his shotgun, muzzle up, after him. The hammer caught on a limb, discharging the gun and blowing his head almost completely off.

Mrs. Jacob Wunderlich of Fountain City, aged fifty-eight years, met a peculiar death. She was at the home of her mother, Mrs. Schollmeier, helping her pile some wood, when she slipped in the yard and fell and broke her neck, death being almost instantaneous.

While waving his hat in front of his horses in order to make them back into a barn with a load of hay Michael Newell, residing near Belle Plaine, was struck by a hoof of one of the horses, which, frightened, reared and bit at him. He died from the injury.

Benjamin Brody, forty-six years old, drank carbolic acid at his home in Minneapolis and though a physician was summoned Brody died shortly after. Brody had been in ill health several months and was melancholy.

W. E. Kelly of Fargo, known in pugilistic circles as the "Fargo Kid," is dead at Asbury hospital, Minneapolis, as the result of injuries received Dec. 12, when he was struck by a street car in the Mill City.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Mrs. B. O. Coble, colored, expired on the steps of Zion Presbyterian church at St. Paul. Dr. A. E. Nichols, deputy coroner, was called and decided that death was due to natural causes.

Patrick Costello, a resident of Sauk Center for forty years, dropped dead on the street of heart failure. He was sixty-six years of age.

J. B. Flagg, aged ninety years, is dead on his farm near Pipestone. In his earlier life he was a well known railroad man.

FORTY HURT IN TRAIN WRECK

Spreading Rails Cause Passenger to Go Into Ditch.

St. Paul passenger train No. 43, northbound, running thirty-five miles an hour, spread the rails half a mile east of Good Thunder and plunged over a twenty-foot embankment, injuring forty passengers, none of them fatally.

The injured were carried on a relief train, ordered out from Mankato, back to that city and placed in the hospitals there.

The train at the time of the accident was traveling behind time and had just whistled for the crossing in passing over which the accident occurred. The rails spread, but the engine remained on the tracks.

The engine was in charge of Engineer Thomas Clancy of St. Paul. He said he felt the train leave the rails and applied the emergency brakes. He stuck to the throttle until the train was brought to a standstill. The fireman, John Anderson of St. Paul, jumped from the train and sustained severe injuries. The engineer was uninjured.

The mail car plunged over the twenty-foot embankment and rolled over it until it reached the bottom. The acetylene lights in the car ignited the coach timbers and the wrecked mass was soon blazing. The mail clerks were rescued by the uninjured passengers, and barely escaped from the flames.

BAGGAGE ROOM IS WRECKED

Runaway Freight Crashes Into the Union Depot at St. Paul.

A Great Northern engine and freight train of thirty-two cars plowed into the back of the Union depot at St. Paul, badly wrecking that portion of the building.

The huge engine, going at a high rate of speed, plowed into the baggage room side of the building, wrecking the walls and going into the structure almost to the front entrance. Luckily there was no one in that section of the building at the time.

The train got away from Engineer Le Claire about four miles from the depot. All the switchmen jumped off and left Le Claire alone with the runaway train.

Le Claire jumped as the sheds were reached and struck an iron girder. He is badly hurt and was taken to St. Joseph's hospital.

The damage done by the train to the depot is estimated at $50,000.

The train, it is estimated, was going sixty-five miles an hour when it struck the depot. The failure of an angle cock, controlling the airbrakes, to work is said to have caused the runaway.

INVASION OF STATE RIGHTS

Governor Eberhart May Attack Federal Corporation Tax.

Governor Eberhart may take the initiative in a test of the federal corporation tax.

Acting on the belief that it is not only double taxation, but an invasion of state rights, he may ask Attorney General Simpson to take some action looking to a settlement of the question of constitutionality. He is confident that the tax inflicts an injustice.

"I have been giving the matter some consideration," said Governor Eberhart, "and I am sure the tax is not right. Why a partnership concern should escape, as against any set of men agreeing to conform with the laws of the state in respect to corporations, is beyond me, but such seems to be the case. It is not fair."

SHOT DEAD DURING FIGHT

Victim Said to Have Threatened to Kill Members of Family.

A family tragedy occurred near Alexandria, in which George Troy, twenty-six years old, was shot and killed by two brothers-in-law, who had, it is said, first been attacked by Troy.

Troy lived on a farm a short distance from his wife's old home. His wife a day or two before had taken their only child, three years old, and had gone to her mother's place to spend the holidays.

Troy appeared at the home of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Olson, threatening to kill his wife and child, and afterwards the other members of the family. He was ejected from the house, but returned armed with an axe and the shooting followed.

Perished in Storm.

The body of Frank Dobberstine, who started for his home fifteen miles west of Fergus Falls in a severe storm some days ago, was found partly buried in snow about a mile from Foxhome. He lost his way on the prairie and froze to death.

Watchman Dies in Fire.

John Sullivan, watchman at the dryhouse of the Gilbert mine near Gilbert, was burned with the building. It is not known whether he died trying to save the property or was dozing at the time of the fire. He was sixty years old.

BY F. E. TRIGG
REGISTER, ROCKFORD, IA.
CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED

(This matter must not be reprinted without special permission.)

HOW HE HANDLED THEM.

During the last week in October R. D. Brawner, a regular farmer and feeder of cattle and hogs, who lives at Delavan, Ill., sold a carload of two-year-old branded Montana bred Angus steers on the Chicago market at $9, the highest price ever paid for branded range fed cattle on the regular market. The steers averaged 1,501 pounds in weight and brought the owner a trifle over $135 apiece. Cattle feeders will be interested in Mr. Brawner's history of the care of this bunch of profitable beeves. He says:

"These cattle were bought on the Chicago market one year ago yesterday as yearlings, averaging 730 pounds, at $4 per 100 pounds. They were bred and raised on a ranch near Livingston, Mont. I took them home and roughed them through last winter in the stalk fields and with a little clover hay until April 1, then fed them in a dry lot for about six weeks, when I placed them on blue grass pasture, with a light ear corn ration fed each evening until Sept. 1. I then began giving them a full ration of crushed corn and oats, with dry fodder on pasture, until shortly before shipment, when they were again placed in dry lot. No patent stock foods were used. I think the dry fodder was a great help to their finish, as they always ate it with great relish. As a general proposition I strongly recommend feeding shock corn complete to cattle after Sept. 1. I do not approve of a standing ration of corn either in self feeder or troughs, but in fattening cattle I feed once per day regularly just enough grain to be eaten up clean. This lot of cattle was fattened with the least corn of any I ever fed, and I have fed cattle practically all my life."

One or two further points of interest in connection with Mr. Brawner's methods are that he makes a great point of careful and gentle treatment of his feeding animals; that he uses a manure spreader on his farm all the time, having in mind the necessity of maintaining soil fertility by selling beef and pork rather than raw grain products. He also places a high estimate on the well bred range fed steer as uniform, growthy and free from disease.

SOME REASONS FOR IT.

While it is a matter of real concern that thousands of small towns are having their very lifeblood sapped out by the large increase in catalogue house business, there are some features in the cause of this increase that it would be well if merchants and residents of these same small towns would take into account. One is the practice of the merchant in charging more than a reasonable profit on some lines of goods offered for sale. This begets the mail order habit, which doesn't, as a rule, stop with the articles on which unreasonable prices have been charged. Another reason for the mail order business is that the home merchant so seldom in his advertising announcement—if, indeed, he has one in the home paper—names a definite and specific price for his goods, a thing that is invariably done in the mail order catalogue. Another feature that is raising bob with more than one town is that staples offered for sale in its stores cost more than the same goods in adjoining towns, while the prices paid for live stock and produce are from 10 to 30 cents per hundred less. In helping the small town out of the dilemma which many of them are getting into there is much that can be done by those whose interests are most vitally involved

CHINESE CORN.

In 1908 the department of agriculture at Washington received a small lot of shelled corn from China, and a test was given it the same season. It showed qualities which may make it valuable in the breeding of a type of corn which will be adapted to the hot and semiarid conditions of the southwest. The plant raised in the test averaged less than six feet in height, with an average of a dozen green leaves at the time of tasseling. The ears averaged five and one-half inches in length and four and one-half inches in greatest circumference, with sixteen to eighteen rows of small grains. A peculiarity of this variety is that on the upper part of the stalk the leaves are all on one side instead of being arranged on both, as in the native corn. The upper leaves stand erect, their tips extending beyond the tassel. The silks of the ear are produced at the point where the leaf blade is joined to the leaf sheath, and they appear before there is any sign of an ear beyond a slight swelling. This latter characteristic would seem to be an aid in preventing a drying out of the silks before pollination. It is thought by the department officials that by crossbreeding some of these desirable qualities may be transmitted to a larger type of corn.

If corn fodder properly secured is worth 60 per cent of good hay, ton for ton, it is well nigh impossible to estimate the annual loss that American farmers sustain by allowing it to bleach and blow to tatters in the field.

It is pretty rough on the rats, but a farmer who has tried it recommends putting concentrated lye in the holes and runways of rats. They first get it on their feet, which begin to burn. They try to lick it off their feet, get it in their mouths, and this does the business.

We read of a farmer the other day who was bewailing the fact that his fine quack grass pasture was showing signs of debility and was likely to die out. We know of other fellows who would be mighty glad to have this fellow come and dig up carefully the scattering roots on their places.

The best season in which to do pruning work in the orchard is that just prior to the time when the trees will make the most rapid growth and thus heal over the scars made in cutting. It is for this reason that fall pruning should be discouraged beyond that involved in the removal of dead or diseased portions of the trees.

If it is hard to get the horse in good flesh and much of the grain fed passes through the animal whole it is fair to assume that the teeth are not doing their work properly, due to the fact that some of them project so far as to prevent proper mastication. This defect can be remedied by having the teeth filed off by some competent veterinarian. In case the teeth are in bad shape in other respects the feed should be ground.

A rather odd appeal has been made to the French colonial office by the province of Uganda. It is that the lions be protected from hunters, as they alone are able to rid the country of the herbivorous animals that destroy their crops, including elephants, rhinoceroses and deer. Much the same situation has existed in some portions of the west, where the killing of the coyotes has been followed by an alarming increase in the number of rabbit pests.

That American corn is rapidly getting a foothold in foreign countries is nicely shown in the marked increase in the recent exports of the cereal. Corn exports for the week ending Oct. 28 were 510,448 bushels against 395,592 for the week preceding and 196,514 bushels in 1908. For the seventeen weeks prior to Oct. 28, 1909, the exports of corn amounted to 2,700,685 bushels, while for the corresponding period last year they were but 1,186,118 bushels.

Through the liberality and enterprise of the publisher of a well known Iowa dairy paper the dairymen of Wisconsin will be given an opportunity to take part in a contest in which prizes ranging from $50 to $500 will be offered the owners of single cows and herds of ten which make the best showing in butter fat production during a stated period. Any dairyman of the state wishing to participate in the contest may secure full particulars by addressing Professor F. W. Woll, Madison, Wis.

A first hand inspection of a good many newly set fruit ranches in several famous valleys of the west leads the writer to believe that a whole lot of fellows do not seem to have got on to the fact that to sell an orchard tract to the best advantage just as scrupulous care should be given it in the matter of pruning and cultivation as if the owner were going to keep it for himself. We have seen tracts that were not managed with this thought in mind whose prospects for future productiveness were not worth a continental per acre.

The sugar crop of the world for the year just closing is placed by statisticians at 14,710,000 tons, which is an increase over that of 1908 of 244,590 tons, or 1.7 per cent. The figures show that there has been an increase in the world's cane sugar crop of 4.9 per cent, or 370,000 tons. A few years ago the cane sugar output was less than that from beets, but last year the cane product exceeded the beet by 663,000 tons, while this year it will surpass it by 1,100,000 tons. There was a decrease in the European beet sugar output of 2.7 per cent as between last year and this, while the output of beet sugar in America shows an increase of 13.2 per cent for the same period.

In sections where rodents—rabbits and mice—abound and are likely to damage the young fruit trees by gnawing during the winter months it is none too early to be safeguarding them against such attacks. This may be done cheaply by wrapping the young trees at least two feet up from the ground with several ply of old newspapers. Tar paper and strips of wood veneer are used, but the newspaper properly fastened will answer the purpose nicely. In localities where the snow is likely to be deep and drift into the branches such wrapping as described will not furnish protection except to portions of the trunk covered; hence an effective warfare by means of shotgun, ferret, traps and poison should be waged continuously against these orchard enemies. To discourage the mice, shocks of corn and other litter in which they may nest should be removed from the orchard.

Freedom from excitement, coupled with gentle handling, means more butter fat from the dairy cow and more meat on the back of the steer in the feed lot. It is a simple case of cause and effect.

It was an astonished little housekeeper who took two cupfuls of rice to boil for two and found when it overflowed the kettle in which it was cooking that she had food for a family of sixteen.

The Mexican turkey raiser cooks much of the food for his flock and always adds a moderate amount of chili pepper, which, he contends, keeps them in good condition and enables them to ward off disease.

There are said to be close to 8,000,000 dairy cows in the United States that are not paying for their keep. It is calculated to make a fellow groan to think of the job of milking this enormous bovine aggregation, and all for nothing—only the privilege of having them around.

There are many feeders who will carry good sized flocks of lambs in their feed lots this winter instead of so many steers, as in former years. With wool prices where they are and mutton kept up in sympathy with beef and pork prices the sheep feeder ought to do well in his feeding operations.

Folks who live in a latitude where the thermometer goes to 20 below zero have possibly a bit of excuse for following the example of the methodical old elder who during the cold weather was in the habit of having his evening prayer on a placard at the foot of his bed and was wont as he hopped in to look at it and say, "Them is my sentiments too."

Unlike some other fruits and vegetables, apples are not ruined by freezing, though there is little question that their texture and possibly their quality are impaired as a result. Such damage is reduced to the smallest if the fruit is kept frozen until used or allowed to thaw out very slowly. Often in going through the orchard in midwinter one will find apples covered by the leaves and grass and a layer of snow which seem to have lost little of their original quality.

A friend who this year tiled a low place on his farm that for years past has been well nigh unproductive told us the other day that the best corn he raised this season came from this low tile tract and yielded close to seventy bushels, the return being sufficient in one season to pay for the cost of the tiling. This is an instance which may be verified in the experience of almost any farm owner who has made a serious and intelligent attempt to tile wet land. Low land is usually rich land and uniformly productive if relieved of its surplus moisture.

In the anxiety which so many folks are showing these days along the line of getting hold of cheap land the merits of the cutover pine lands in northern Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota ought not to be overlooked. It is true that the stumps will have to be removed from this land, but if reports are true that much of it can be got at from $5 to $10 per acre it would not be high priced land with the cost of clearing added. The soil is fertile, suitable to the growing of grasses, oats and barley, flint corn, clover, potatoes and other root crops. The conditions are favorable for stock raising and dairying, and altogether the opening would seem to be excellent for settlers of intelligence and energy. Were we in search of cheap undeveloped lands we would investigate carefully these cutover pine lands.

Like some other much maligned things, the Ben Davis apple has its good points in spite of all the abuse which has been heaped upon it. Loaded with the obloquy of having been the variety which caused the fall of our first father in the garden of Eden, of having the rosy, smiling cheek, but the punk inside, the Ben Davis, notwithstanding this, has a good many friends. It is a hardy tree, a very prolific and regular bearer, the fruit stands up and takes a shine months after other choicer varieties have withered away, while many orchardists are coming to feel that, in spite of the lower price received for it, it will bring in almost as many dollars during a period of years as will the shy bearing Spitzenburg, which is generally accepted as the standard of apple quality. The Ben Davis would therefore seem to fill a mission like some other homely things.

A northern Minnesota farmer had an unusual exhibit of alfalfa at his home state fair this year, and inquiry into the case has brought out the fact that he got four cuttings this season from his two acre patch, the first yielding four tons to the acre, the second three, the third two and a half tons, and of the fourth no record was kept, as it was saved for the hogs and chickens and was not weighed. If the last cutting averaged a ton per acre it would make the yield per acre for the season ten and a half tons. The land on which this alfalfa was grown has a foot of sandy loam surface soil with clay beneath. The ground was prepared in the fall and the seed sown without a nurse crop in the spring at the rate of three pounds per acre. The field was mowed the 1st of July and again the 1st of September to dispose of the weeds. Another favorable condition was that the patch had a southerly exposure, which made it warm and insured excellent drainage.

One of the most wholesome as well as effective laxative foods is apples. Not only are they pleasant to the taste, but they have a definite food value. Old and young should eat them in generous quantities.

The use of iron sulphate may be effective when sprayed on young weeds, but a method of eradication, which is better, is to adopt a system of crop rotation which will prevent the weeds from going to seed, and this is not a difficult matter if care is exercised.

One who has suffered severely from bee stings calls attention to the fact that the effect of the sting may be greatly lessened if the stinger is scraped off with a knife instead of being pulled out, as the pressure exerted by the fingers tends to force the poison into the wound from a little sac which is situated near its base.

Alfalfa does not do well in a soil which is not properly drained nor where the subsoil is coarse gravel and the roots are likely to encounter small air spaces. It is for these reasons that the legume does especially well on deep, well drained alluvial soils or on the deep volcanic ash deposits which are found so frequently in mountain and Pacific coast states.

"Irrigation of Alfalfa" is the title of farmers' bulletin No. 373, which has just been issued by the department at Washington and aims to tell what soils are best adapted to the growing of alfalfa and how the crop may be handled to the best advantage in the matter of the irrigation and other care of it. The bulletin is practical and valuable and should be in the hands of every alfalfa grower in the irrigation sections of the south and west.

While the crow has a bad name with the agriculturist, and perhaps justly so, the bird nevertheless fills an important niche in nature's economy as scavenger—a devourer of dead and decaying animal matter. In this respect it resembles the turkey buzzard and vulture, the jackal and hyena. The scavenger hosts are often a good deal of a nuisance, but they do much of nature's dirty work, performing a service which is but little appreciated.

There seems to exist between wild and tame fowl a sense of comradeship, due possibly to a distant kinship, and it is manifested in interesting ways. The melodious call of the southbound flock of wild geese finds response in the answering call and flapping of wings of the barnyard flock, while flocks of tame mallards on ponds and streams are frequently visited by their wild cousins, and the latter are lulled to a sense of security by their tameness and often fall a prey to the hunter as a consequence. Though in less direct line of kinship, flocks of bobwhite will often come to the barnyard and mingle and feed with the poultry.

It is an interesting fact that the two great staple cereal crops of the world, rice and wheat, should be grown in so nearly equal quantities, the latest estimates placing the respective yields at 175,000,000,000 and 190,000,000,000 pounds. Other statistics compiled by the department of commerce and labor show that the production of rice in this country during the past ten years equals that of the half century preceding. In 1908 the crop was 800,000,000 pounds, and of this amount Louisiana and Texas raised more than 90 per cent. During the past few years importations of rice have continued at about the same rate, which would seem to show a large increase in home consumption.

The United States department of agriculture has lately issued a popular review of some of the more important and practical experimental work done during the past two or three years by the several state experiment stations under the title of farmers' bulletin No. 360. This will place within reach of farmers in all the states valuable information which would otherwise be available only to farmers in states where the experiments were carried on. Among many subjects reviewed are milking machines, cost of producing farm crops, treatment of muck soils, manures for timothy hay, corn breeding, weed seeds in feeding stuffs, hookworm disease in cattle and milk supply of cities. The bulletin is for general distribution and should be in the hands of every up to date farmer.

A friend who makes a strong point of his dairy and usually secures a nice revenue from it told us the other day that he was about a dozen fresh cows short at the beginning of this winter because a year ago he unwittingly bought a sire which was badly infected with tuberculosis, which got only a portion of his cows in calf. Besides this loss, there is great danger that his whole herd of cows may be infected in greater or less degree with the disease. This is a fair sample of the damage which tuberculosis inflicts on the dairy interests of the country, the aggregate of which would be appalling could it be accurately known. Breeders should profit by experience of the above type and resolve not to purchase any breeding animal, and particularly a thoroughbred, without a certificate of health which guarantees him free from tuberculosis. It may be taken for granted that such a guaranteed sire will cost more than a rundown or diseased scrub, but he will prove by far the cheaper in the long run.

Andrew Ellingson has been appointed post master at Highlanding to fill the vacancy caused by resignation of J. W. Vrolson. Mr. Ellingson is one of our pioneer merchants who has always been a staunch republican and an ardent supporter of Halvor Steenerson, and when the office became vacant he was certainly entitled to first consideration for the appointment. —Sunbeam.

Mr. Ellingson has been a candidate for the postoffice at Highlanding for sometime, and the fact that he has been rewarded is far from the wish of the people of Highlanding and Northern Red Lake county in general. Two years ago Mr. Ellingson was elected as a delegate to the Republican county convention. He was instructed by the voters who elected him to vote for D. P. O'Neill for chairman of the convention, and promised faithfully one minute before the roll call in the convention to vote for O'Neill, but did not. The excuse he gave after the convention adjourned was that Red Lake Falls parties promised to secure for him the removal of Vrolson as postmaster and his appointment. The matter was taken up with Congressman Steenerson at that time and he promised that Ellingson would never be appointed postmaster at Highlanding, but evidently someone has induced our congressman to change his mind.

Congressman Steenerson is accomplishing much for this section and it is the desire of most everyone to see him returned to congress, but by allowing Red Lake Falls to dictate the appointment of the postmasters in Northern Red Lake county where there is some rivalry, and the appointment of such men as Ellingson, he is not improving his chances any.

THE RAILROAD AND THE PEOPLE.

By the way, it was shown in the annual report of the interstate commerce commission, published last week, says the Duluth Herald, that the total gross earnings of the railroads of this country increased $32,591,214 this year over last, while the net earnings increased $86,568,870.

In other words, net earnings, available for dividends, increased in a much greater ratio than did gross earnings, out of which operating cost must come before dividends are considered.

Yet the railroad officials are stating quite positively that it is utterly unthinkable that they should increase the pay of their workmen unless they also increase freight rates. When shown how the cost of living has outstripped increase in wages, they shrug their shoulders and declare that they are sorry, but helpless. When told that the worker for wages is finding it increasingly hard to make both ends meet, when his earnings stand still while the cost of bread and meat and clothes and shelter are rising with deadly certainty day by day, they shrug their shoulders again and say that the only remedy is to increase freight rates. "And that would do no good whatever", they add, "because the increase would be added to the cost of commodities, the cost of living would increase some more, and then the workingman would be no better off than he was before".

All of which lends new force to the recommendation of the commission that it be given broader powers, as follows:

To make a physical valuation of the railroad property of the country. This is essential to honest rate-making. The railroads are entitled to fair dividends upon fair valuations of their property. If they are getting more than that, it is plain, though perhaps legal, robbery of their workmen and the consumer. To know what rates they should charge it is essential to know what dividends they deserve. The power asked for should be granted.

To prevent advances in rates pending investigation as to their reasonableness. This is fair. If a proposed increase is just, it will stand investigation. If it is unjust, shippers should not be compelled to pay it pending investigation.

To establish joint rates and through rates, wherever needed. These are conveniences to which the shipping public is entitled, and which railroads should be compelled to extend, when they will not do so voluntarily.

To enter a corrective order as the result of an investigation instituted by the commission on its own motion. If the commission finds a rate unfair, it should have power to change it.

To exert control over capitalization of interstate railroads. The whole question of freight rates and wages hinges upon this power. It should be exerted by the government, and no better arm of government for that purpose exists than the interstate commerce commission.

Fair dividends to railroad capital, fair service and fair rates to railroad patrons, fair wages to railroad workmen—these things should be compelled, when they do not come automatically.

Nature makes the cures after all.

Now and then she gets into a tight place and needs helping out.

Things get started in the wrong direction.

Something is needed to check disease and start the system in the right direction toward health.

A Hardship.

Heretofore it has been the usual custom for patrons living along rural mail routes to place loose coins in their mail boxes, which makes considerable discomfort for the carrier who is obliged to take his mittens off each time this occurs, causes delays, and often a pecuniary loss to the carrier. If the patrons would place a small cup or other receptacle in their mail boxes, also buying stamps in quantity they would do a great deal to ease the work of the mail carrier, who, at the best has no snap.

To the Public.

I wish to thank the Patrons of the Post Office for their patience with and kind consideration toward the employees of the office during the rush of the Holiday season, which was of great help to the employees in handling one third more business with the same amount of help we had last year, so that every thing was taken care of without a hitch to the satisfaction of all in the office and I hope to the satisfaction of the public. I do not hesitate to say that there were not many Post Offices, where every thing presented for mailing was done up in proper shape and with very few exceptions every package was plainly addressed with the return properly written on nearly every piece of mail matter, thus assuring its prompt delivery or return to the sender showing that the public is becoming better posted with the requirements of the Postal Laws and Regulations and thereby saving a vast amount of extra work in the office, which was very much appreciated by us all, Wishing you all a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year, I remain.

Yours Resp.,
Frank H. Kratka,
Postmaster.

Change to Be Soon.

A. P. Toupin has received a telegram from Washington informing him that his appointment as register of the United States land office at Crookston had been confirmed by the senate. Mr. Toupin will take the oath of office about Jan. 1. The new register is a man well qualified from business experience and natural ability for the place, and his many friends are offering congratulations upon his good fortune. Mr. Toupin's family will continue to reside in Red Lake Falls for some time at least.

Judge R. J. Montague, the present register, tendered his resignation some months ago, owing to the fact that he preferred to devote his time to his extensive legal practice, which he had to neglect almost entirely, while holding the position of Register of the Land Office.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

Olson's Yule Punch Is Gone.

Deputy Marshall Larson, of the U. S. Indian Service, was a visitor at Erskine last Tuesday morning and confiscated about four gallons of wet goods from Alfred Olson, of the town of Winger. Mr. Olson returned from Crookston Monday and stopped at the Merchants' over night and did a little too much talking in the office in the presence of Mr. Larson, with the result that his liquor was confiscated and poured into the street. The town of Winger, it will be remembered, is closed territory for liquor and the government is looking after the liquor problem very closely.

Lost Her Child.

Mrs. J. H. Dannaher, of Highlanding lost her five-year-old son at Alexandria Christmas morning, while she was going from the Soo depot to the Great Northern to take the train into St. Cloud, Minn., where she intended to spend Christmas with relatives and friends.

She discovered her loss, when she reached the Great Northern depot and discontinued her trip until Saturday evening. She made headquarters at the Arlington hotel, and sent both the night watch and the police out sleuthing for the exploring youngster, who was found about noon, one half mile south of the Soo depot. He was complacently wandering about.

Recovering the child, Mrs. Dannaher continued to St. Cloud, having missed, however, her Christmas dinner appointment.

AGREED WITH THE ASP.

The Frenchman Got Around the Law Against Hissing.

A gentleman who had been unceremoniously hustled out of a Paris playhouse because he hissed when the curtain fell on the second act brought an action for damages against the manager of the said house.

The court decided in favor of the hissing gentleman, adding that if a spectator is allowed to show his delight by indulging in applause his neighbor has also the right to show disapprobation in an audible fashion.

But the law in France was not always so tolerant. In the middle of the seventeenth century it was strictly forbidden to hiss in a playhouse, and in every theater there were a number of "gardes Francaises" with strict orders to arrest any person infringing the law.

But the French are not easily put down by silly regulations, and whenever they see an opportunity they attack the authorities with that fearful weapon ridicule. In this case such an opportunity came at the Comedie Francaise during the performance of "Cleopatra," a play by Marmontel.

It was a badly written, dull work, and the people were waiting for a chance to give vent to their opinion. At last the chance came. The management had ordered a mechanical asp for the great scene in the final act, when Cleopatra puts an end to her life.

The actress raised the asp, which started hissing, whereupon a spectator rose to his feet and cried: "The asp is quite right. We all share his opinion." Roars of laughter greeted this joke, and as it was foreseen that a similar scene would take place every night the piece was withdrawn from the repertory.

Professor L. G. Michael, who has been experimenting as chemist at the State college at Ames, Ia., for the past five years, has recently signed a contract with the Russian government for $4,000 a year for three years to assume the position of director of several imperial experiment stations in the province of Bessarabia, with headquarters at Kishinev. This section has the same mean annual temperature as the middle Atlantic states, though its growing season is about forty days longer. It will be the new director's chief duty to instruct the Russian peasant in the growing of more bushels of corn to the acre. Mr. Michael has had excellent preparation for this work through association with Professor Holden, the corn expert, and it is conceded that he will be able to earn his salary.

Commissioners Win.

The supreme court last week decided that the county commissioners of Red Lake county had the power to issue bonds in an amount not to exceed one per cent of the valuation of the county for the purpose of constructing a court house. This will give the commissioners power to issue bonds to the amount of $40,000. Only three of the supreme court judges favored the decision, the other two, Justices Brown and Jaggard, were against the decision. It is the intention of those fighting the issue of bonds to ask for a re-hearing of the case.

An insect known as the southern pine sawyer, which does much damage to injured and felled pine trees, has lately been studied by government entomologists. The parent beetle is one and one-quarter inches long and mottled gray or brown in color. The grub is white and slender and sometimes attains a length of two and one-half inches. They hatch from eggs deposited between the outer and inner bark and when full grown have been known to bore clean to the heart of large trees. It is estimated that in three severe storms which passed over southern states in 1907 and 1908 2,000,000,000 feet of timber was blown down and that practically all of this was damaged by the pine sawyer, the value of the timber being decreased by their attacks more than $2,000,000. Sawing into lengths and peeling the bark from storm felled trees and the getting of logs into the water as soon as possible are suggested as methods of preventing damage by the pest.

A new record for the sale of hogs at the South St. Paul Market was recently established when the price touched $8.40 per 100 pounds after several weeks of steady climbing. My Dear Sir:

In response to the invitation from your Excellency, representatives of the thirteen Twin City lines, whose switchmen are now on strike, attended a meeting at the Capitol building on Thursday, December 23rd.

In opening the morning, your Excellency recommended to the representatives of the railways and to the representatives of the switchmen, a basis of settlement as follows: That it had been brought to your attention that a conference between representatives of certain railways in Chicago, and representatives of their switchmen was now being held to consider proposals for increase in wages and changes in working conditions, and that the matters under consideration there were similar to those presented to the representatives of the Twin City lines, and that in the opinion of your Excellency, if the representatives of the Twin City lines would agree to apply the provisions of whatever settlement might be reached through the Chicago conference to the switchmen employed upon the Twin City lines and re-employ as far as possible the men, who left the service of these lines on November 30th, such a settlement would be fair and equitable.

The representatives of the railways then withdrew to consider your Excellency's proposals, and accepted them in a written statement, which was handed to you, and which is here quoted: "A conference between representatives of the railways in the Chicago district and representatives of their switchmen is now in progress for the purpose of determining a scale of wages and the establishment of working conditions for that district. The rates of wages in the Chicago district and in the Minnesota cities for switchmen have been identical and the working conditions similar.

The representatives of the Twin City lines, in conference this date, have confirmed, by a majority vote, the report to your Excellency, that those roads represented will agree to re-employ such of their former yard employes as the roads may have places for, at the rates of pay and under the working conditions in effect November 1st, 1909, and that, at the termination of the Chicago conference, the lines here represented will meet any additions in rates of pay or working conditions that may be granted by the Chicago lines to their switchmen, and that, as heretofore announced, the differential of two cents per hour in the wages of switchmen will apply in the territory, Billings and west, on the Northern Pacific railway, and in the territory Havre and west, on the Great Northern railway".

It is the understanding of the representatives of the Twin City lines that the matter of re-employing the switchmen, who voluntarily left the service of the Twin City lines on Nov. 30th, requires further explanation.

With every wish to meet any suggestions made by your Excellency, and with the natural desire of employers to help worthy men, who gave up their positions and who should be at work for the support of their families and themselves, the representatives of the Twin City lines submit that no hardships should be imposed, nor any injustice permitted, to the large number of present employes in yard service, who are in no way responsible for the present situation.

When the former yard employes of the railways voluntarily gave up their positions on November 30th, after refusing the offer of the railroads to arbitrate and be bound by the arbitration award without appeal, the refusal being made in the following language in a letter signed by Mr. Hawley, and dated November 23rd: "The committee begs leave to state that it will not submit to arbitration under any circumstances", it became necessary for the railroads to promote many of the men, who remained in the service, to transfer some from other branches and to employ many new men in order to perform their duty to the public, to the other employes and to the owners of the properties.

As large employers of labor under wage agreements, the Twin City lines would not be justified in reducing in rank those employes who have been promoted since November 30th, in returning to their former employment those who have left positions in other branches of the service, or in dismissing without cause the competent men who have been employed to fill the other vacancies.

It is, however, certain that upon the basis of re-employment suggested by your Excellency, many of the old switchmen can be given employmet and probably a large number would be restored to their old positions.

With the growth of business, it is reasonable to expect that considerable increase in force will be required which will enable the Twin City lines to provide employment in the aggregate for more men than were employed previous to November 30th.

The representatives of the Twin City lines believe that they have accepted your Excellency's suggestions without reservations. They have done so with the sincere desire of avoiding any further inconvenience to the public, and the loss to their employes which will result from a continuance of the present conditions.

In conclusion, the representatives of the Twin City lines are under the necessity of advising your Excellency that their offer can not remain open indefinitely, and that if not previously accepted, it will be considered withdrawn at twelve, noon, Wednesday, December 29th.

OLD WORLD ARMIES

Drafting Methods by Which Their Strength Is Maintained.

TRICKS OF THE CONSCRIPTS.

All Manner of Dodges Are Adopted by the Eligible Young Men to Avoid the Enforced Military Service That Is So Hateful to Them.

We hear a good deal about conscription, but few people know what it actually means. In no country is every person who is able to fight drafted into the army. All males who are liable to serve undergo a physical examination, resulting in only a certain number being passed as fit for service.

No government has sufficient funds to draft the whole of these men into the regular army, so a selection is made by ballot, the number of men enrolled varying according to the funds in the hands of the authorities.

The pay provided for the conscript is necessarily very trifling indeed and will not compare with that paid to volunteer soldiers. In fact, it is generally true that the conscript must fall back upon his private means.

The methods vary in each country. But take the case of one European power. Every male subject not physically incapacitated is liable to enter the army at the age of twenty, although those who care to enlist may do so at eighteen.

A register is kept of all the youths who reach the age of twenty in the particular year. Men under five feet two inches in height are exempt from service, as well, of course, as those who suffer from natural infirmities which render them unsuitable for active service.

Other men are also exempt if they have helpless dependents—thus the only son of a widow or of a disabled father, the latter category also including the only son of a father who is above seventy years of age. Then the eldest of a family of orphans is exempt, and in the case of two sons only one is liable, there being various other exemptions.

The term served by the conscript is one of twenty-five years, three years being spent in the regular army, six and one-half in the army reserve, six in the territorial army and the remaining nine and a half years in the territorial reserve, all liability to service ceasing at forty-five.

The service is frequently so hated that all manner of methods are adopted in order to avoid it. In many cases substitutes are provided by the wealthy, though there are stringent regulations with regard to the provision of the substitutes.

In most European countries military malingering in order to avoid compulsory military service has reached the stage of a fine art. In fact, a formidable list of new crimes has been added to the statutes as a result, and medical men frequently have to suffer for their assistance in this particular kind of fraud.

Thus some time ago a number of Cologne doctors were arrested upon a charge of having administered pills to young conscripts. These pills consisted of drugs which produced the symptoms of heart disease so effectively as completely to deceive the military authorities, with the result that the conscripts were declared unfit for service. In this case the fraud was brought to light by one of the conscripts dying as a result of an overdose of the medicine.

In Germany, where the conscript is frequently treated with the greatest harshness, there are very few towns where there are not specialists whose living depends solely in inducing such a condition of affairs as will render young men exempt by reason of unfitness.

In the French army it is quite common for youths to feign all manner of ills, deafness being the usual ailment trusted to in order to escape the service. As a result the military doctors have made an especial study of methods of detecting feigned deafness and to trap the cunning youth who acts the part of a deaf man.

Another common practice in France is to tamper with the eyesight, though this frequently results in permanent injury. For instance, short sight is produced by wearing powerful concave glasses for a considerable time despite the risk of bringing about permanent blindness. It is no uncommon occurrence for men to commit suicide rather than submit to forced service in the army.

In eastern Europe most brutal methods are adopted by parents in order that their sons may be able to work for them instead of serving in the army. The boys are frequently ill treated, and it is not at all uncommon even for their limbs to be broken or their sight to be destroyed in order to prevent any likelihood of their having to become soldiers.

Switzerland probably has the cheapest army and the least burdensome methods of conscription, the service being much lighter than in the other continental armies. Indeed, the conscript in the infantry army has to undergo actual training for only 123 days during the entire period of his service.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A NEW YEAR CONTEST

By ADELAIDE RUTH HILL.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

"The New Year day" of old New York—and it was then a great function with the Dutch men and Dutch women of that town—was at hand. It was in a transition state. The simple visits of the inhabitants, where they made few calls and spent plenty of time drinking schnapps at each call, were passing out with the growth of the place,—and already some of the fashionable young men were beginning to boast of the number of visits they would make.

Miss Kate Van Gaasback was then the belle of the town, and two of the city "bloods," Derrick Schermerhorn and Beekman Van Corlaer, were aspirants for her hand. A few evenings before the 1st of January they happened to meet in Miss Van Gaasback's parlor, each hoping for a favorable answer to his suit.

"I desire," said the lady, "for a husband one who will join with me in a successful society career. You two each take a notebook with you when you call on New Year's day and have every lady you call upon enter her name in it. Begin calling at 10 o'clock in the morning, ending your rounds here at 5 in the evening. He who can show the largest number of signatures shall have preference over the other."

Now, it was not that the lady had no preference. She had a very strong preference for Derrick Schermerhorn. But at times a woman moves like a crab, backward—that is, when she is expected to go forward she proceeds in the opposite direction. This, however, will be recognized at the end of the story. At 10 o'clock on New Year's morning the two suitors, dressed in the height of the then fashion and each with a big bouquet in his buttonhole, started to make the rounds of their lady friends. Derrick, who from the fact that his father was a rich brewer was popular, had been able to make the larger list. Beekman realized this and had great fears that his own list would be exhausted before the limit of time had elapsed. However, he could do only what he could and accept defeat, if it came, like a man.

The first call Derrick made was on Miss Van Horn. After a few remarks he was bowing himself out when the lady reminded him that it was not complimentary that he should hurry and he must have some refreshment. He waited half an hour for the refreshment to be served, then, after partaking of it, got away as soon as possible. At his second call the lady insisted on reading to him from her favorite book, and he found it impossible to leave her under three-quarters of an hour. Even then she reproached him. The third call was made with a similar delay. After this came a number of visits which were completed with dispatch. And so passed the day. About one in three of those he called on delayed him.

Now, it happened that about 4 o'clock in the afternoon the two suitors met at the house of Vanderpole Ten Eyck, a manufacturer of calico, in King street. There were a number of girls in the party, and they had heard that a contest was on between the young men as to who would make the most calls. A bevy surrounded each of the contestants, teasing him to reveal his score. Both refused. Then one of the girls snatched Beekman's notebook from his pocket and ran away with it. Having examined it, she sang out:

"Thirty-two calls!"

This was sad news to Derrick, who knew that he had made only twenty-eight. It was half past 4, and even if Beekman made no more visits Derrick must make five more to beat him. He started to go, but the mischievous girls locked the front door. But a rear door was open, and he plunged through it, followed closely by his opponent. This door led through a passageway uniting the dwelling with the print works. The two men rushed through this passageway and found themselves moving on a raised platform on either side of which, their upper edges rising some twelve inches above it, were dye vats. A brilliant idea occurred to Derrick. Lessening his pace, he permitted Beekman to overtake him and gave him a push. Beekman's heels caught against the projection of a dye vat, and he fell into it, catching with his hands either side of the vat. Then he pulled himself out, dripping with a beautiful yellow dye.

Derrick shot out of a door at the other end of the building at the same time that the pursuing girls entered the dye house. A merry shout of laughter sounded to poor Beekman like a funeral knell. At any rate, he knew he had lost the race and the prize. He stood surveying himself, scraping the thick dyestuff off one hand with the other, and vice versa, till Mrs. Ten Eyck took pity on him and led him away to a place where he could get off his clothes and put on a suit of her son's.

Derrick Schermerhorn got in five more visits and mounted the stoop of the Van Gaasback dwelling as the clock struck 5.

"I've won!" he cried.

"How many?" asked Kate, with quick breath.

"Twenty-nine."

"Do you know how many Mr. Van Corlaer has made?"

"Twenty-eight at half past 4, but he won't make any more."

"Why?"

"I pushed him into a dye vat."

There was a double cause for her laughter. She had pledged all her girl friends to delay Derrick, who, after all, had won the victory she wished him to win.

THE MYSTERY OF THE SALMON

There is no member of the large family of fishes that presents a more interesting study than the salmon—not only because of the mystery of certain phases of its life, but because of its commercial value as a supplier of wholesome food for mankind. The salmon is one of a very few fish which are able to live in both fresh and salt water. The female salmon seek the streams of their birth at four years old, making the most strenuous efforts to reach their remotest tributaries. After ascending rapids and leaping waterfalls they at last reach a suitable place to deposit their eggs. They possess but one set of ovaries, and both they and the males which follow die when the reproductive process is completed. It is a pathetic sight to see the bruised and battered condition of these noble fish, the result of their attempts to ascend swift mountain streams. During the season of their birth in the smaller streams the small fry descend to the ocean and are not heard from again until at four years of age they ascend the streams in which they were hatched and sacrifice life, as did their progenitors. There has been much speculation as to where this interval is spent, but no one has as yet solved the mystery. It is said that after leaving the ocean salmon take no food, being seemingly bent on the one purpose of perpetuating their kind. Another well known fact yet unexplainable is that salmon will frequent one stream to spawn, yet will avoid another watercourse near by seemingly as good and without any apparent reason. The Chinook salmon, which often attains a weight of eighty pounds, is the most highly prized for food, and it is this kind which has the rich flavor and shows the deep salmon color when taken from the can. The catch of salmon has been so great in recent years that millions of eggs are now hatched annually in plants owned by the government in order to replenish the rapidly decreasing supply.

WATER RIGHT GUARANTEES.

The settler in any of the arid or semiarid sections of the west, where irrigation is required in the growing of crops of whatever kind, should in the purchase of land be most particular in regard to the water rights which go with it. He should see to it first of all that the parties back of the irrigation system are absolutely reliable and above even the suspicion of crookedness and dishonesty. A government irrigation project is reliable in the matter of its water guarantees, for no more land is sold than the engineers are positive can be adequately supplied with water when moisture is needed. There are some private irrigation companies whose guarantee is just as good, but there are many other projects where land is being sold at long prices in which water could not be furnished in sufficient quantities at the critical time if one were to wait till he became gray headed. Water in the ditch between November and May, when it is not needed or used, is a different thing than little or no water from May to October, when it is needed; hence when irrigated land is bought the guarantee of the water privileges must be in the most direct and plain terms, so that no loophole will be left through which the guarantors may evade furnishing a service for which they are duly paid. It may be a nuisance to have to look after this matter, but attending to it at the proper time will mean a lot less grief later on.

THE CARLOAD PRIZE.

The chief prize striven for by the fruit growers who exhibited at the national apple show held at Spokane, Wash., the latter part of November was $1,000 in gold hung up for the best carload of 630 boxes of fruit of one variety. Last season this prize went to a fruit ranchman in the Wenatchee valley, in Washington, on a carload of Winesaps. At the show just held the first prize was captured by H. B. Tronson of Eagle Point, Ore., in the famous Rogue river valley, on a carload of Spitzenburgs, his exhibit scoring 92½ points. The second prize of $500 went to W. W. Sawyer, who owns extensive fruit ranches in the Yakima valley, in central Washington. He exhibited a car of Grimes Golden, which scored but one-eighth of a point below his successful competitor. It has been contended by some that the Hood river, Wenatchee and Yakima apples surpass the Rogue river from the standpoint of color, but the awarding of the premier prize this year to southern Oregon Spitzenburgs would seem to show that the growers there will have to be reckoned with even in the matter of color. The exhibits are judged from the standpoint of the shape and uniform size of the apples, freedom from bruise or defect, etc., while the way they are packed and displayed is also an important consideration.

Strictly speaking, school time comes but once. On this account both boys and girls should be encouraged in every way to make the most of it.

Meat scraps and milk for the flock of laying hens are excellent substitutes for the insect food which they get at range during the summer months, and if eggs are expected of them they should be provided with both.

A fact that is not generally known is that popcorn may be too dry to pop well, just as it is often too moist. In this case its popping qualities are improved by dipping it in water and then drying it out quickly just before it is to be used.

A rather curious physiological fact in connection with tuberculosis is that a cow having the disease does not transmit it to her calf at birth. This makes it possible to keep her offspring from contracting it by feeding it sterilized milk or putting it with a cow which is free from the disease. By doing this the calves of valuable full blooded dams have been saved for useful careers.

While the brown Swiss breed of cattle do not equal any of the four leading dairy breeds in milk and butter production, they still are making a very satisfactory showing for dairy purposes. They are not only docile and easily handled, but possess large frames and beefy quarters. Four of these cows owned by the Michigan Agricultural college showed a milk yield for the past year ranging from 8,120 pounds of milk producing 406 pounds of butter to 10,158 pounds of milk giving 457 pounds of butter.

In view of the killing freeze in the fore part of October the corn belt farmer in sections where the freeze was heavy has no more important task in hand during the next few weeks than that of looking up and testing his supply of seed corn for next year. Maybe enough corn can be secured from shocks in fields which were cut before the freeze, yet there are many who will have to send to a distance for seed which will germinate. In any event the job of securing seed of good vitality should not be postponed until next March or April, when the scramble for seed will be fierce and when a lot of tail enders are going to get left.

Perhaps the largest authenticated yield of corn ever recorded was that produced by John Sundberg, president of the Iowa Corn Growers' association, the past season, the amount being 153 bushels and 55 pounds from a single acre, or just five times the average annual yield. A justice of the peace made affidavit that he personally measured the acre of ground and weighed the corn. The patch from which the corn was taken was an acre and a half in extent and produced in all 224 bushels. The owner says it took seven years to get such a yield, the result being in part due to proper care of the soil and thick planting and as largely to continual selection and breeding up of the seed corn. There is something in this record for corn growers to think about.

There are many towns in the more recently settled portions of the west and some in sections not so recently settled which pride themselves much on their push and enterprise that act all too literally upon that Scriptural injunction, "Let the dead past bury its dead," and allow their burial grounds to remain in a shabby, unkempt condition that is a positive disgrace not only to the dead, but the living chiefly. There is mighty little excuse for such neglect, for the matter could be remedied easily were the care of the cemetery placed in the hands of an association of wide awake, sympathetic women, who, in addition to annual dues, could pull on the community in one way and another for financial aid sufficient to give the cemetery the care it ought to have.

The Illinois state board of health has lately issued an order which provides that all cows in the state must be subjected to the tuberculin test and those found affected branded with a letter "T" upon the right ear. The enforcement of this regulation, it is thought, will put a stop to the traffic in tuberculous cows and the sale of milk from them an offense which is punishable with a heavy fine. Only those animals which are provided with an inspection and health certificate countersigned by the state veterinarian may be kept to furnish a milk supply. In the past the diseased cows have been sold to unscrupulous dairymen and the polluted, germ laden milk peddled for the consumption of little children. Other states should follow the lead of Illinois in this most commendable plan for conserving the public health.

An experiment is being tried by the Southwest Texas Truck Growers' association along the line of socialistic production that will be watched with much interest by people living elsewhere. In brief, they have pooled their affairs in the matter of growing onions and now buy their seed direct from the Canary Islands at a cost of $2.75 a pound where before it cost them $4 through the middleman. The sales agent after making a careful survey of the market allots so many acres to each member of the association, taking into account in this last year's output. In marketing the crop all the onions are mixed together and then sorted by efficient inspectors, who also take special pains to see that they are carefully packed. While the growers all receive the same price for their onions, they are held in duty bound to raise those of the best possible quality.

Millet which has been cut before the seed developed and is bright and clean makes a fair roughage for horses. If the seed has developed it should not be fed to them at all.

Pasteurization or sterilization of milk simply means the heating of it to a temperature of 180 degrees F., which kills any bacterial life it may contain. No complicated apparatus is required, but just the application of enough heat to do the business.

The rapid increase in land values must inevitably compel the adoption of a type of agriculture which will yield a corresponding interest return on the increased valuation. He is a level headed tiller of the soil who, realizing this fact, adopts the more intensive methods and secures the increased returns on a relatively low land valuation.

While some tobacco is produced in almost all the states, less than 1 per cent is grown west of the Mississippi, Texas being the only state, in which the industry has gained any importance. Kentucky leads all other states in tobacco production, growing about one-third of that produced in the United States and one-ninth of the crop of the world.

If the products raised on the farm for feeding purposes consist only of corn, corn fodder, timothy or wild hay, the ration is not well balanced and should be re-enforced with oilmeal or bran to furnish the protein lacking and give the best results. The most satisfactory feed containing protein in considerable quantities is clover or alfalfa, and when these are available the bought stuffs will be needed little, if any.

A danger that the dairyman should be on the lookout for in securing new individuals for his herd—and this holds whether the purchase be bulls or cows—is contagious abortion, a disease that may cause a cow to lose her calf before time year after year. It is estimated that the loss in a year due to decrease in milk yield is from $18 to $25 per head. A fact that makes the disease especially dangerous is that the germs may be transmitted to a calf at birth from its dam and lie dormant until it is of breeding age, when it may be the means of infecting a whole herd.

A scientific analysis of soil which has been cropped continuously for a long period of years and several of its important elements depleted would in many cases greatly aid the owner in determining what fertilizers it were best to apply to raise its productive capacity to a maximum. Often soil analyses will show an element in sufficient quantity which had been supposed to be depleted, while another supposed to be abundant is shown to be quite deficient. The above holds especially in the case of land devoted to orchards and to intensive crops, such as beets, onions and cabbages.

It's lots of bother—will be viewed so by the corn grower who wants to save time or is lazy—but in view of the heavy October freeze the past fall, which killed the germ in the seed corn, the only absolutely sure method of securing a supply that will germinate is to go into the field as soon as the husks turn yellow and select the seeders and get them thoroughly aired out before frost time. Many make a regular practice of this and are hence on the safe side this season, but those who usually wait till husking time to make the selection are in a pretty tight place or will be before they get good seed corn in the ground next spring.

A fact that the eastern and central farmer should realize fully when he leaves a section of abundant rainfall for the semiarid sections of the west is that there must be a radical change in depth of plowing, methods of cultivation, etc. Instead of three or four, he should plow the land in the new country to a depth of six or seven inches, while his aim in the surface cultivation of the soil must not be, as in the humid section, to accelerate the evaporation of the moisture from the soil, but by the creation of a fine dust mulch to reduce this evaporation to the minimum. The application of the old and familiar methods to the new conditions can only result in grievous disappointment.

The department of agriculture at Washington has issued a bulletin to the farmers of the middle west, especially to those in Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Nebraska and Kansas, on chinch bugs, warning them that another outbreak of this bug pest is likely to occur during 1910 and also suggesting that they make application for the bulletin, which will be sent free from Washington on application. During the past half century the damage done by this insect has been estimated at $60,000,000. In 1871 the north central states suffered a loss of over $30,000,000. There was another serious outbreak in 1892, but in the interval following there has been little or no damage from them. Chinch bugs hibernate in old corn shocks, litter and dead leaves, and the burning of this stuff at once is urged. The common quail is a voracious feeder on chinch bugs, and farmers are urged to protect the bird in every way possible. The bulletin referred to tells of several methods of combating the pest.

INJURES THREE PERSONS

Municipal Gas Plant at Slayton, This State, Blows Up.

The municipal gas plant at Slayton blew up, injuring three persons, employes of the city, one of whom will probably die of his burns. The injured are:

Jacob Quackenbush, thirty-two years old, unmarried, badly burned about the face and back, picked up unconscious, will probably die.

Richard Marsh, thirty years old, married, badly burned about the face and hands.

Richard Piper, thirty-six years old, unmarried, slightly burned.

The explosion is supposed to have been caused by gas working into the furnace.

There was no loud report, the fire bell being the first general alarm. The flames from the tank, however, blazed high into the skies and immediately consumed the building about the plant, causing a loss of about $6,000. Quackenbush was with difficulty rescued from the path of the fire.

ELECTRIC LINE TO BE PUSHED

Will Connect the Twin Cities With Head of Lakes.

What is taken to mean the early completion of the proposed electric line between the Twin Cities and Duluth and Superior was shown in the filing of a trust deed with the state by the Twin City and Lake Superior Railway company.

The deed is a mortgage for $4,000,000 and is executed by the company to the American Trust and Savings bank of Chicago. Of this amount $250,000 in bonds is to be issued at once.

The total length of the proposed line is 130 miles and, according to officers of the company, over half of this amount is now graded. It starts at the belt line in the Midway district.

ITALIAN LABORER KILLED

Attempted to Slide Down Cable From High Building.

Tony Viloa, an Italian laborer employed on the fifteenth story of the Alworth building at Duluth, fell fourteen stories to his death as he was quitting work.

With a spirit of bravado he ignored the usual method of descending the ladders and grasped the steel cable which is used for hoisting material to the top of the building to slide down it. The cable is kept oiled all the time to prevent it wearing rapidly and the moment Viloa gave his weight to it he went down like a shot. He could not check his descent perceptibly and arrived at the ground with a crash that killed him instantly.

DENTAL COLLEGE IS BURNED

State University Suffers Heavy Loss by Fire.

Millard hall, the home of the college of dentistry and part of the college of medicine at the University of Minnesota at Minneapolis, was almost totally destroyed by fire. The total loss to the state and the students will reach about $140,000, 75 per cent being approximately the amount of insurance.

Two hundred dental students will be deprived of their class for the time being, seventy-five freshmen and 125 juniors and seniors. The dental college has been the most crowded of any of the departments, about sixty-five students being refused entrance, owing to lack of space.

WOUNDED BY HER COUSIN

Little Girl Probably Fatally Hurt at Lake City.

Ruth Mitchell, a five-year-old girl of Lake City, was shot accidentally by her cousin, Ralph Smith, and her injuries are likely to prove fatal. An older brother had been out rabbit hunting during the day and, coming home at noon, he placed the gun against the wall while he got ready for dinner. Ralph, eleven years old, saw the gun and, in a playful mood, seized it and aimed it at his little cousin Ruth across the room. The gun was discharged, terribly mutilating the child's jaw and tongue and severing the jugular vein. Physicians were summoned, but there is very little hope of her recovery.

AFTER WARNING WIFE TO RUN

Minnesota Man Blows Himself Up With Dynamite.

Oscar Erstinea started with his wife to attend holiday doings at the Finnish Temperance hall at Virginia. He stopped on the way to blow himself up with a dynamite cap.

He had the grace to warn his wife and she escaped by running from him. Erstinea was instantly killed.

He deliberately lit a match and ignited the fuse, holding the deadly charge in his hand until it exploded.

He was thirty-five years old and, in addition to his widow, there are four children.

LABORER FROZEN TO DEATH

His Companion Goes Insane From Exposure.

The body of George Illeas, a laborer, was found frozen stiff beside the railroad track near Virginia. An empty whisky bottle is supposed to establish the theory that he was intoxicated and lay down and froze to death.

Another man, supposed to have been his companion, was found wandering in the woods and so nearly exhausted and mentally bewildered that he cannot give an account of himself.

PLENTY OF ROOM.

No Trouble to Find a Place For Him to Rest In Sleep.

His blanket the soldier takes along on the march, but usually not his tent. Usage soon makes the ground as soft a bed as he wants. The case is pretty nearly the same with the prospector and the frontiersman. In writing of the "Highways and Byways of the Pacific Coast" Mr. Clifton Johnson tells of the practice on the ranches of the west. He was the guest of an early settler.

While we were chatting a laborer passed, shouldering a roll of blankets. The butcher had come to the door, and he pointed to the passer and said: "You see that fellow, don't you? Well, when I first reached here from the east I thought a man with a bed on his back was the funniest thing I'd ever come across.

"A rancher in this country won't take his hired man into his house. They've got to furnish their own blankets and usually sleep on the hay in the barn.

"I know a fellow who, when he'd just arrived and didn't understand the way they manage, got a job harvesting on a big wheat ranch. The help usually sleep in the straw stacks then, and it's precious little time they get to sleep anywhere. But he didn't know anything about that, and he was sitting around in the evening and finally said to the rancher, 'Where am I to sleep tonight?'

"'Why, I don't care where you sleep,' said the rancher. 'I've got 900 acres of land around here, and if you can't find a place to sleep on that I'll get my next neighbor to lend me a piece of his.'"

TOWER OF BABEL.

Traditions as to the Height of the Famous Structure.

The actual height at which the last stone of that famous structure, the tower of Babel, rested cannot, on account of the remoteness of the times at which it is said to have existed, ever become more than a matter of merest conjecture. Herodotus, who lived about 1,700 years after that "great spiral way to heaven" is said to have been attempted, says that he saw at Babylon a structure consisting of eight towers raised one above another, each seventy-five feet in height, but whether this ruin was the remains of the tower of Babel it was even then impossible to ascertain. Herodotus, usually minutely exact in his writing, leaves us in ignorance as to how the upper level of each of these seventy-five foot towers was reached from the level below.

As might be expected, even in tradition, a wide difference of opinion exists as to the height of the tower. Most orientalists maintain that God did not put a stop to the work until the tower had reached a height of 10,000 fathoms, or about twelve miles. In Ceylonese tradition it is said to have been as high as 20,000 elephants, each standing one above the other. St. Jerome asserts on the authority of persons who had examined the ruins that it did not reach a height exceeding four miles. Other statements are still more extravagant.—London Saturday Review.

Happy Events.

A teacher in one of the public schools of Vienna in order to test the ability of her junior class—girls eight to nine years old—in composition writing gave each little miss a subject to be discussed "at once without consultation and without help of any kind." The articles were found to be so interesting and amusing that they have been collected for publication. One article on "My Three Happiest Days" is notable in the unique collection. In well chosen words and clearly rounded sentences the little girl says that, being lost in the woods, having to run away from a fire which broke out in their house and watching a little boat as the wind tossed it on the waves and finally smashed it, were the most "happy events" that she could think of. Another in describing "fairyland" said that it must be a place where "everything is as it is here except that the lakes should be frozen half across at all times of the year so that we could take a swim and jump out and skate."

James I. and Billiards.

James I. appears to have inherited his mother's love of billiards. Among the payments from his privy purse noted in the exchequer records is one to "Henry Waller, our joyner, for a billiards boarde. Twelve foote long and fower foote broade, the frame being wallnuttree, well wrought and carved, with eight great skrewes and eighteen small skrewes." A salutary billiard rule in force in the days of the Stuarts was one to the effect that no bystander, even though he was betting on the game, should be allowed to offer advice unless asked. If he did so it was provided that "he shall for every fault instantly forfeit twopence for the good of the company or not be suffered to stay in the room."—London Chronicle.

His Early Home Coming.

"Does your husband carry a latchkey, Mrs. Homebody?"

"No, I never knew him to."

"Oh, then he comes in early! That must be due to your training?"

"Not in the least. There is always some one up when he gets home in the morning."—Chicago Record Herald.

MODERN CHAIRS.

Evolution of Our Seats With Arms and High Backs.

Chairs with high backs and arms, after coming into general use with the renaissance, began to be ornamented with an amount of carving and gilding that has hardly since been equaled, which came naturally from the artistic tastes of the period. Their size, form and the amount of decoration lavished on them indicated the rank, fortune, authority or social position of their possessors. Bishops and abbots had seats corresponding with their dignity, while those below them sat on stools or benches. Only the king and queen and persons of high rank could be seated on chairs with arms and backs in the time of Catherine de Medici, and her sons, courtiers and favorites sat about them on stools called taborets.

This manner of expressing difference of rank prevailed under Louis XIV. and his successors down to the French revolution. To the chairs elaborately carved succeeded the armchair, so called in these times, which, with unimportant variations, is much the same as in the reign of Louis XIV. Specimens of the stools used by the favorites and ladies of honor of the king and queen may still be seen in the royal palaces of France. They were changed into the modern parlor chair by simply adding a back, which has hardly made them more comfortable. —Westminster Gazette.

A KINGLY PICTURE.

Slovenly Figure Cut by Charles XII. of Sweden.

Distance lends enchantment to the imagination as well as to the actual vision. This is a fortunate circumstance, for the real truth about some of the heroes of history might to a person today bring disenchantment and even disgust. Charles XII. of Sweden may claim the world's admiration as a military genius, but from Mr. Morfill's description of the monarch, given in the "Story of Poland," that gentleman would be anything but an agreeable addition to society.

"He wears a black crape cravat, but the cape of the coat is always buttoned so closely that one cannot see it. His shirt and wristbands are always dirty. He wears no ruffles nor gloves, and his hands are commonly the same color as his wristbands, so you can hardly distinguish them. His hair is light brown, very short and never combed but with the fingers.

"He begins dinner with a big piece of bread and butter, having stuck his napkin under his chin. Between every two bits of meat he eats bread which he butters with his thumb. He is never more than a quarter of an hour at his meals, eats like a horse and never speaks a word."

A kingly picture, indeed, savoring of romance and knightly fashion!

An Independent Element.

Carbon is an elementary substance widely diffused throughout nature. It occurs uncombined in two distinct forms or allotropic conditions—viz, graphite or blacklead and the diamond, which is pure crystallized carbon. It is, however, more commonly found in combination with other elementary substances than in the free state. United with oxygen, it occurs as carbonic acid gas (CO_2) and exists in the atmosphere, in natural waters, in limestone, dolomite and ironstone. In combination with hydrogen it forms the extensive series of chemical compounds known as hydrocarbons. It is also an important constituent of wood, starch, sugar, gum, oil, bone and flesh. No other element is so characteristic of the plant and animal world as carbon. In 1788 Lavoisier showed it to be an independent element. He furthermore proved the diamond to be the purest form of carbon and by combustion converted it into carbonic acid gas.—New York American.

Not the Usual Romance.

Recently one of our most fastidious young men bought a pair of overalls and found in them the name of the sewing girl who made them.

He very promptly wrote her a letter with all the effusiveness necessary in such a case and in due time received a reply, which, however, was void of the romance usual in such cases. Here it is: "I am a working girl, it is true, but I make a good living, and I do not care to support a husband, as I would do if I married some silly noodle who gets mashed on a girl he never saw. Permit me to say that I do not know how my card got in that pair of overalls and that when I do marry, if ever, it will be some fellow who can afford something better than a forty-seven cent pair of breeches."—Muscotah Recorder.

Improvement.

Bacon—How is your wife?

Egbert—Improving, thank you.

"Why, I didn't know she'd been ill!"

"She hasn't, but she bought a bonnet today for $4. She used to buy the sixteen dollar kind, you know."—Yonkers Statesman.

Blunt.

"I should like to go to my mother-in-law's funeral this afternoon, sir," said the bookkeeper to the "old man."

"So should I," replied the proprietor as he turned to his desk again.—London Tit-Bits.

Nautical.

"Cap, how many knots an hour can you make with this vessel?"

"Can't make any just now; we're tied up."—Baltimore American.

What is not necessary is dear at a penny.—Danish Proverb.

HARD WORK.

Sam's Desperate Effort at Composing a Love Letter.

To one old southern negro in New York the difficulties of letter composition seemed well nigh insurmountable. The old fellow, as a writer in the Atlanta Constitution relates, asked his "boss," Colonel Yerger, to write a letter for him to his sweetheart.

"All right, Sam, I'll do it," agreed the colonel.

"Has yer got de paper and de ink and de pen ready, sah?"

"Yes, Sam. Go ahead."

"Write—Thompson—street,—New York."

"All right."

"Has yer got hit written?"

"Yes."

"All ob hit?"

"Certainly."

"What has yer got written? Read it to me, boss."

"Thompson street, New York."

"Dat's right. Now write May de fourteenf."

"Yes."

"Has yer got hit down, boss, already?"

"Yes."

"G'way, boss, you're jokin'! Read it to me."

"May 14."

"Mah goodness! You has got hit down all right. Now, boss, read hit all over from de berry beginning."

"Thompson street, New York, May 14."

"Dat's right. Whew! Say, boss, let's res' awhile; I's tired. My head aches like hit was gwineter split."

HE REFORMED.

A Flash of Lightning Made Him See His Evil Ways.

A group of men sitting on the dry goods boxes in front of a country store were discussing big storms.

"There's no use in talking," remarked one of them. "We are all badly scared in a thunderstorm."

"I remember one time when I was, sure enough," said another. "It was about a year after I was married, and I was on my way home from town. It began to thunder and lighten when I was about halfway there, and the rain fell in sheets. I stopped under a big tree. I knew that wasn't safe, but I thought I'd risk it.

"In a few minutes the lightning struck a tree about a hundred feet away, and I fell down, either from the shock or from fright, I don't know which to this day. But I got up again, and my hair rose on end when I remembered that I had a plug of tobacco in my pocket."

"What had that to do with it?"

"Nothing but this: My wife didn't know I chewed tobacco. She hated the weed like poison. 'What if I had been killed and that plug of tobacco found in my pocket?' I thought. I think I had the worst fright right then that I ever had in my life."

"Well?"

"Well, before the next flash came I took that plug out of my pocket and threw it as far as I could send it, and I have never chewed tobacco since."

Didn't Teach Him That Trick.

"That's a werry knowing animal o' yours," said a cockney gentleman to the keeper of an elephant.

"Very," was the cool rejoinder.

"He performs strange tricks and hantics, does he?" inquired the cockney, eying the animal through his glass.

"Surprisin'!" retorted the keeper. "We've learned him to put money in that box you see up there. Try him with half a crown."

The cockney handed the elephant half a crown, and, sure enough, he took it in his trunk and placed it in a box high up out of reach.

"Well, that is very hextraordinary—hastonishing, truly!" said the green one, opening his eyes. "Now let's see him take it out and 'and it back."

"We never learned him that trick," retorted the keeper and then turned away to stir up the monkeys and punch the hyenas.—London Tit-Bits.

Rearranging the Basis.

"You are charging me $7 a week for board and lodging, Mrs. Irons," said the gray haired person of the name of Harris. "May I ask how you would itemize it? What part of it is for board?"

"Five dollars," replied the landlady.

"And $2 for my room?"

"Yes."

"Well, if you don't mind, Mrs. Irons," he said, proceeding to square up for another week, "we'll consider hereafter that I'm paying you $5 for lodging and $2 for board. It will seem more as if I were getting the worth of my money."—Chicago Tribune.

The Fortune Tellers.

Lady—Poor man! So you are just out of jail? Tramp—Yes, mum. I was a victim of fortune tellers ten years ago. Lady—Indeed? Tramp—Yes, mum. The district attorney told me where I'd ever been and what I'd ever done during my whole life, and the judge predicted where I would be for the next ten years.—Puck.

A Paragon.

"What reason have you for thinking that he's a perfect gentleman?"

"He must be. I had dinner at his house, and neither his wife nor daughter corrected him once."—Detroit Free Press.

CEYLON MENUS.

The Way Natives Wrestle With the English Language.

A writer in the Epicure tells of several menus with which he was confronted when traveling in Ceylon. The menu, he says, is an indispensable adjunct to a respectable luncheon or dinner table in Ceylon. As a rule, the head servant writes it out and from his elementary knowledge of English as "she is wrote" springs a host of quaint blunders. At the same time his fertile oriental brain is ever apt to add footnotes, which are perhaps his happiest achievement.

At one lunch there figured among the dishes "roast beef," but it caused the hostess some consternation when she discovered the additional legend in very small letters, "roast beef, smelling a little," the parenthetical note being meant to intimate that the dish was accompanied by a sauce of savory odors.

On another occasion there appeared this following acknowledgment of deficiency: "Steak and kidney pie; no kidney."

It was altogether delightful, continues the writer, to find at one dinner our old friend Welsh rabbit appearing as "Welsch rubbish." The same genius translated haricot mutton into "hurrygod mutton." Our own boy, he adds, on the occasion of a hastily improvised dinner, was unable to accomplish a dessert. Consequently he put the word "plates" at the end of the menu.

A COSTLY TRIFLE.

It Brought Bankruptcy to an English Iron King.

It was a common penny postage stamp that brought Hobart, the great British "iron king," to his ruin. At the time of the Whitworth period, when there was a big crisis in the iron trade, he had agents in all parts of the world who kept him posted. Sometimes they telegraphed news to him in cipher, but those in England were nearly always instructed to write. At that period his principal agent, who was also his chief partner, was in Sheffield and wrote him from there warning him to sell out all iron interests for the time on account of the Whitworth crisis.

Hobart had frequent fits of irritability, and he had been receiving a lot of unstamped letters of no importance on which he had to pay double postage. One morning in anger he gave orders that such letters were to be returned to the postman. The very first unstamped letter received after this was from his partner. It was rejected as soon as it arrived.

Consequently, knowing nothing of the existence of the letter or the all important private news it contained, Hobart pledged himself next day for more iron deals than even his mighty credit was good for. The great drop in prices came two days later, and Hobart, once a millionaire, was involved in a hopeless bankruptcy from which he never recovered.—London Telegraph.

Pillsbury's Wonderful Memory.

Harry N. Pillsbury, the chess player, offered one day in South Bethlehem, Pa., to memorize thirty words, no matter how hard they might be, the selections to be read to him only once.

Professor Merriman of Lehigh university and Dr. Threlkeld-Edwards of Bethlehem picked out most of the following words: Antiphlogistine, periosteum, takadiastase, plasmon, ambrosia, Threlkeld, streptococcus, staphelococcus, micrococcus, plasmodium, Mississippi, Freiheit, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, athletics, no war, Eichehberg, American, Russia, philosopher, Piet-Potgieters-Rost, Salmagundi, Oomsillecootal, Bangmamvato, Schlochter's Nek, Manzinyama, theosophy, catechism, Madjesoomslopa.

Mr. Pillsbury immediately repeated these words in the order given and in the reverse order.

A Cockney.

Minshen, a dictionary maker of London, in 1617 issued a work which gave the following amusing account of the origin of the word "cockney:" "A cockney, or cockny, applied only to one born within the sound of the Bow bells—that is, within the city of London—whiche terme came first out of the following tale:

"A citizen's sonne, riding with his father out of London into the country and being a novice and merely ignorant of how corne and catel do increase, asked when he heard a horse neigh what the horse dide. His father answered, 'The horse dothe neigh.' Riding further, he heard a cock crow and said, 'Dothe the cock neigh too?' And therefore cockney, or cockneigh, by inversion thus: incoctus—i. e., raw or unripe in countrey-mens affaires."

Italian Brigandage In 1848.

One summer evening in the crowded theater an impatient house demanded the drawing of the curtain preliminary to the first act. When at last it was upraised Il Passatore and his armed band occupied the stage, with muskets aimed at the affrighted audience. The chief stated that he should levy a tax per head, which he then and there collected. The gang made off with their booty unmolested.—Lady Presturch's "Essays."

Depressed.

"I am afraid Bliggins has met with reverses."

"What makes you think so?"

"He goes about with a gloomy look, saying there is no such a thing as disinterested friendship. That is almost a sure sign that a man has been trying to borrow money."—Exchange.

MANY CITIES WILL PROFIT

Improving Navigation on The Red River Is of Local Interest.

Other Cities As Well As Thief River Falls Will Benefit By Work.

That a profitable combination between Grand Forks and Thief River Falls can be brought about for the purpose of furthering the campaign that has been put under way for the securing of larger appropriations for the government work in the Red river and the Red Lake river, is evident. Both cities have the same end in view, that of bettering their rivers for navigation purposes, and it is believed that if they get together their efforts will have more weight with the officials of the war department, with whom rests to a great extent the disposition of the matter.

The Grand Forks commerical club recently named a special committee to take up the work of getting a larger appropriation for work on the Red river, and this committee is expected to confer with the Thief River Falls agitators very early to see along what lines the two cities can work together for the improvement of the two rivers.

Asks Aid in Taking Census.

George Welch, commissioner of immigration, is sending circular letters to the commerical clubs, agricultural societies and farmers' clubs urging them to assist the census supervisors in obtaining complete statistics of farm yields. The immigration authorities of Minnesota, he explains, have been hampered in preparing advertising matter to promote the welfare of the state by lack of authentic statistics of the crops. Sometimes the census officials are suspected of being assessors or that their figures will form the basis of assessments and the farmer becomes too conservative.

The census reports are valuable for comparison with the crop yields in other states, and Minnesota can make a fine showing if correct information is obtained.

Good Cattle Bring Good Price.

Good cattle bring a good price. John Clemedson, of Erskine, sold on Dec. 27th seven two-year-old steers and heifers at $5.00 per 100 lbs live weight. The cattle bringing this price were Short Horn grades raised on skim milk and roughage until snow fell last fall, when they were started on a little grain and from then on till marketed they consumed about 200 pounds of grain apiece. They weighed a total of 6671 lbs., at $5.00 per cwt., making a total of $333.55; average weight, 953 lbs.; average price, $47.65.

It pays to raise good cattle and feed them.

A New Telephone Project.

A project for the building of a telephone line from Middle River to Gatzke is under way. A company composed of A. C. Kvennes, Henry Young, John Nordlum and B. F. Benson are behind the movement. A quantity of poles have already been contracted for, and the men interested inform us that they expect to have the line in operation by July 1st. In connection with this line there will probably be a local exchange put in in the village. The carrying out of this project will mean much to the people of this village and the whole country to the east of us and we wish the promoters a full measure of success in their enterprise.—Middle River Pioneer.

Erickson Is Back.

County Attorney Michelet has received a letter from Mrs. A. P. Erickson, of Hazel, stating that her husband has returned. It will be remembered that a few weeks ago there appeared an item in the News to the effect that the Erickson family was much concerned regarding the absence of Mr. Erickson, who had been up in the Canadian Northwest harvesting. The reason Mr. Erickson gives for not returning before is that he stopped off at Grand Forks to visit a brother and while there fell and broke his shoulder, being confined in a hospital for sometime.

TO BUILD AN ELECTRIC RY.

Henry Diebel Developes Into an Electric Railway Line Promoter.

Line Is Not Built yet, But Then of Course It Is a Sure Thing.

The following, taken from the Little Falls Daily Transcript, would indicate that Henry Diebel, former manager of the Pioneer Sash & Door company here, is now engaged in building electric lines:

"Henry Diebel of Long Prairie was in the city this week to get figures on the cost of power for an electric line on which he has been figuring for some time. Mr. Diebel and others of Long Prairie are desirous of seeing an electric road built from Alexandria to Long Prairie and thence to Little Falls. The road could run almost in a direct line, in accordance with the plan of the promoters, and would be a boom to each of the towns it touched as well as a paying proposition for the owners.

"In a talk with T. C. Gordon of the Water Power company, Mr. Diebel asked for a proposal for supplying 5,000 horse power from the local power plant. The present capacity of the power house is not great enough to supply this additional 5,000 horse power over the amount now used, but Mr. Diebel was assured that the power could be secured by the addition of more machinery.

"In speaking of the enterprise, he said that for the time being he would not push the matter but that he could report to those interested in Long Prairie. The cost, he said, would exceed his estimations and for that reason he would be in no position now to push the project. Mr. [illegible] that because of the interest shown in his home town, where such a road is considered almost necessary, he does not believe the electric line proposition will be dropped".

N. F. Saxton, Martin Jacobson and Sever Stennes were down to Crookston last week to attend the annual banquet given to the employes of the Finch-Winslow-Carlisle wholesale house.

SELMA LAGERLOF IS POPULAR

Since She Was Awarded the Nobel Prize for Literature She Is the Most Talked Of Person In Sweden—Her Success Gives Pleasure to the Large Number of Her Countrymen and Co-Religionists in the United States.

SWEDEN.

Selma Lagerlof is easily the most popular and most talked of person in the literary world of Sweden at present, since she was awarded the Nobel prize for literature. She is recognized by the Swedes as a prose poetess of unusual merit and is esteemed somewhat as Schiller is admired by the Germans. Her writings cover a wide range and have exerted a positive influence on the national character. The prize was awarded not on the basis of any single work, but in recognition of her substantial work as a writer. A description of her says that "she is a modest and rather shy woman, of very attractive personality. She is an ardent lover of nature, with a passion for flowers and the ability to diffuse their perfume through her books." It gives pleasure to a large number of her countrymen and co-religionists in America as well as to the people in Sweden to thus have this Swedish authoress' merits as a writer recognized. The most popular novel ever written in Sweden was her "Gosta Berling's Saga." Since 1891, when this romance appeared, her publisher Albert Bonnier, has printed about 60,000 copies. This means much in a land of only 5,000,000 inhabitants. Even adding Norway and Denmark, the only foreign countries in which there is a market for Swedish books, this output corresponds to 200,000 copies in England or 500,000 in America. "Gosta Berling" was Miss Lagerlof's first book. She was thirty-three years old when it appeared and an unknown scoolteacher. Now she is the most famous woman in all Scandinavia. Her book describes the life of the Swedish country gentry early in the last century. It is a story full of cold northern nights, sleigh bells, music and dancing.

Among the many paintings from the world's greatest artists, which are now on exhibition at the Luxembourg Museum in Paris, is Anders Zorn's oil painting entitled, "Fishing in St. Yves." The painting represents a fisherman and his sweetheart engaged in fishing and leaning on a railing with their eyes intent on the water. There has now arrived in Paris another of Zorn's paintings, representing a young woman making up her hair after the bath. Both paintings have been much admired by art lovers and highly praised by the French art critics. It is learned that Zorn has been offered 25,000 franc for his latest painting. Some of his paintings will in the near future be on exhibition at the art exhibition which is now in progress in Venice.

The Swedish match industry is seriously threatened if it is true that match manufacturers at their convention in Berlin in the near future, will make a huge combine. It is believed that the Germans are going "after" the Swedish match industry in earnest. Sweden, by the way, has had the match industry pretty well under control during the past twenty years and her matches may be found in every nook and corner of the globe.

Dec. 8, which marks the day when King Oscar died, was generally observed in the Swedish capital. Members of the Royal House and of the diplomatic corps gathered at the Riddarholm's church where wreathes and flowers were placed on the king's coffin. A male chorus of select voices rendered several appropriate numbers.

The population of Stockholm is at present estimated to be about 339,582. This shows that there has been a marked decrease in the population since last year.

It has now been learned on good authority that the anonymous donor of 350,000 crowns to the Stockholm High school was Bank Director Edward Heckscher.

NORWAY.

Says Charles D. Cheney the well known American newspaper writer regarding road building in Norway: "Norway has national directors of public roads, under the department of public works. This department, together with the storthing or parliament, exercises some control over main roads, through national aid. The counties build main roads, but are aided by the state to the extent of a fifth to a third of the cost. The smaller or cross roads are built by the local districts with some aid from the county. County road engineers, under the county magistrates, control the road-building operations. Maintenance has always been attended to in the past by farmers themselves under direction of the lensmand or sheriff, each farm being responsible for a given stretch of road, but this is being superseded by the employment of road keepers for each district. In case of new construction, the county or division engineer assigned to manage the road makes the plans, which are approved by the national director, together with all estimates of cost—the contract system, as we know it in Norway, but the usual system is for a crew of men under a foreman to make a collective contract to do the job for a stated sum. This is used both in construction and in maintenance. Convict and pauper labor are no longer used. Road grades are the great problem in Norway, and material of no importance, as it can be had anywhere for the cost of hauling. Macadam with stone surface is used on all roads for heavy hauling, and on other roads, a gravel surface. Main roads are made 6 yards wide, and smaller ones 4 yards. All road engineers have good technical training, most of them with German engineering degrees. Field and district engineers get salaries from $1,157 to 1,286 a year. Common labor on roads is paid 80 cents a day, and a man with horse and cart receives $1.75. Practically all stone is broken by hand. Norway has in all 6,623 miles of main roads and 10,926 miles of public cross roads, all built of stone, gravel and sand. The annual cost of maintenance is place at $500,000."

DENMARK.

Commodore Jensen in an article to the National Tidende, dated Dec. 26 says: "For three weeks past I seem to have been living in a dream, so strange and unreal have been the conditions, so astounding the developments of what a Danish journalist called the 'Cook phantasmagoria.' Rude indeed has been the awakening of the Danes. When I reached Copenhagen I found them wrapped in happy unconsciousness, their placid faith in the man they made a hero scarcely ruffled by the doubts of the outside world. As I am leaving them I cannot but feel a keen sympathy for the kindly, honest, simple people in what to many of them is an hour of an almost national humiliation. In the transcript of the diaries you find here and there some notes about longitude and latitude, which are recorded as the results of astronomical observations or dead reckoning. For the control of the results which are found by such calculations, there is not one single item of necessary material. From time to time Cook gives latitude and longitude observations, supposedly taken at the same time, which it was impossible to make by the sun alone. Presumably he made use of the moon. There is no account of how he controlled his pocket chronometers. Even daily comparisons had not been made. It seems as though Dr. Cook were totally unacquainted with the variations of the compass. There is nothing in Dr. Cook's records to show he understood observations. In the arctic regions, where the variations of the compass are most important, going to nearly 180 degrees, so that the needle instead of pointing north, points almost directly south, the compass is of little use unless its variations are controlled at short intervals. When one realizes that Dr. Cook evidently knew nothing about the variations of the compass or the methods of control of them and yet set his course to the pole by the compass, the most fantastic suppositions as to his wanderings are possible."

Denmark, with its level country and dense population, has a far easier road problem than Norway. Its roads are largely a question of maintenance, which is attended to by a permanent staff. Each is responsible for about four kilometers, or 2.4 miles of road, and works from three to six days a week, according to the need. They are under expert inspectors employed by the county councils. The counties administer their road affairs under supervision of a national director. Iron rollers and stone crushing machines are forbidden in Denmark on the smaller or parish roads, and also on the main high road between Copenhagen and Elsinore. Government roads in Denmark are built of broken stone with gravel top dressing. On less used roads only the tracks are filled. Broken granite is the favored material.

PERRY HAS EARS FROZEN

Pole Finder, in Evening Dress, Caught in Maryland Blizzard.

Commander R. E. Peary, now recognized as the only living genuine discover of the north pole, had a real artic experience within six miles of Washington.

The commander and Mrs. Peary and the latter's sister, while on their way to keep a dinner engagement at the home of Ralph P. Barnard, son of Justice Barnard, supreme court of the District of Columbia, were snowbound seven miles from the capital. The vehicle ran off the road and buried itself up to the body in a snow drift.

Commander Peary jumped out, clad in evening dress and low shoes, and set off across the country to get help. Commander Peary's ears were badly frozen.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

As the result of one of the worst train wrecks in the history of the Butte division of the Great Northern, when the Burlington passenger train en route to Kansas City from Seattle crashed into a stalled engine at Judith Gap, Mont., two are dead, ten injured and the greater part of the train of coaches is in splinters and ashes.

As a result of the recent blizzard in the East it is announced by the New York police that fourteen lives were lost in that city alone, while great suffering was entailed, occasioned by the tying-up of traffic and the impossibility of carrying food and clothing to the needy poor.

William Foster, a pioneer Des Moines architect and theatrical man, and Louis Bemis of Spencer, Ia., aged seventeen, who was a guest at the Foster home, were found dead from asphyxiation in adjoining bedrooms at the Foster residence.

Seven children, ranging in age from two to ten years, were burned to death at Sykesville, Pa., and three other persons were perhaps fatally injured. The fire, followed by an explosion of powder, destroyed the house of Stephen Bronosky, a miner.

Belated Christmas packages and other valuable express packages in large numbers went up in smoke in a fire which destroyed the American Express company's office and storerooms at New York, causing a loss estimated at $500,000.

Three people, two of whom were women, were killed and at least forty-three injured when the Rock Isand passenger train No. 3, the "California Special," was wrecked two miles south of Trenton, Mo.

Spencer Trask of Saratoga, N. Y., one of the leading financiers of the United States, was killed by a freight train running into the rear of the New York Central passenger train near Croton, N. Y.

Four men who went down in the collapse of the center span of the McKinley bridge at St. Louis were rescued in an exhausted condition after a thirty-hour battle with death in the ice floes.

Four men were blown to fragments at the Ollie Bell mine near Mineral Point, Wis., by the explosion of 150 pounds of dynamite, which wrecked the upper workings of the mine.

Four men were killed in the No. 5 mine of the Centralia Coal company near Centralia, Ill. They were shot firers and had gone into the mine to fire a charge.

Five men were instantly killed by the explosion of a boiler at the new plant of the Metropolitan Electric company at West Reading, Pa.

More than a score of persons were injured, five of them possibly fatally, in a fire which swept a big double tenement in New York city.

THE DEATH RECORD.

Ray Lamphere, thirty-eight years old, the convicted slayer of Mrs. Belle Gunness and her children, is dead in the Michigan City (Ind.) penitentiary, where he was serving an indeterminate term for arson. Lamphere, on April 28, 1908, set fire to the Gunness home near Laporte, Ind., and incinerated the family. He had formerly been employed by Mrs. Gunness as a workman on her farm. Following the fire the bodies of several persons who had been murdered by Mrs. Gunness were unearthed in the farmyard.

Barring the limited amount of inferior humus which cornstalks contribute to the soil, there is no reason for leaving them in the field. If they are cut up and fed, the increase in manure which can be replaced on the land will be worth many times more than the unfed stalks.

The dumb brutes about us appreciate kindness and consideration, and so do the folks who labor with us. It is a specific that has never been overworked, yet when it is tried invariably gives satisfactory results.

That apple prices are likely to be as high as they were last year may be taken for granted from an inspection of the estimated yield for the year, which is 42.5 per cent of a full crop as against 43.4 per cent in 1908 and a ten year average of 50.0 per cent.

Bird lovers may do much to make the winter days cheery for their little friends by fastening small pieces of meat in trees or on shelves near the windows so that they will not have to go hungry when the snow lies deep on the ground. They appreciate such kindness and often reward their benefactors with gentleness and confidence.

An apple grower in the famous Wenatchee valley, a Mr France, this year realized $3,024 from one acre of his old Winesap orchard, considered the record yield for this valley and quite likely equaling or surpassing that of any other apple growing section in the world. Land that will give such annual returns is worth about any price the owner takes a notion to set on it.

Any reader wishing to find out more about the fertile cut over lands in Wisconsin, to which reference was recently made in these notes, may do so by writing Mr. A. D. Campbell, commissioner of immigration, Madison, Wis. Like information about the same kind of land in Michigan and Minnesota may be had by directing inquiries to state immigration agents, whose offices are usually in the respective capital cities.

The question of whether or no there is likely to be an overproduction of apples is quite effectively answered in the statistical returns of recent years. The 1909 crop is placed at but 42.5 per cent of a normal crop, last year it was but 52.1 per cent, in 1907 34.7 per cent, while the average for ten years past has been only 50.9 per cent. With this condition of underproduction continuing over so long a period and with population steadily increasing there would seem to be slight grounds for fear that the apple supply will seriously exceed the demand.

SHOE SIZES.

How the Standard of Measurement Was Established.

It is most difficult for many persons to remember the sizes of their different articles of wearing apparel. Collars, shirts and gloves are easy enough, because in the case of these it is a matter of actual inches. But the hat and shoe numbers are what puzzle most people, to say nothing of the mystery why a No. 11 stocking goes with a No. 8 shoe.

This last puzzle is, however, easily explained. Stockings have always been measured by the inch from heel to toe, but the numbering of shoes was fixed a long time ago by a Frenchman.

The Frenchman permanently fixed the numbers of shoes for all Europe and America. He arbitrarily decided that no human foot could possibly be smaller than three and seven-eighth inches. So, calling this point zero, he allowed one-third of an inch to a size and accordingly built up his scale. It follows therefrom that a man cannot find out the number of his own shoe unless he be an expert arithmetician. Even then he is likely to go wrong, because all the shoe experts allow for the weight of the individual and the build of his foot before they try to determine what size shoe he ought to wear.

As far as women's shoes are concerned the problem is still more difficult, because many of the manufacturers instead of keeping to the regular scale have marked down their numbers one or two sizes in order to capture easily flattered customers. For this reason most dealers ask out of town customers to send an old shoe with their orders.

The system of measuring hats is much simpler. Any man can tell what size he wears simply by adding the width and length of the inner brim and then dividing by two. Orders can also be sent to the shopkeeper by stating the circumference of the head.—Boston Globe.

BURNED PAPER MONEY.

Source of Great Profit to the Government and Banks.

At the redemption windows of the treasury and of the subtreasuries of the country any silver coin that has not been mutilated willfully and which still is recognizable as from the mints of the United States will be redeemed at face value, this in spite of the fact that the silver in the worn coin may not be worth half its face value. As to gold coin, the government stands only a small portion of the loss from abrasion; but, according to weight, these worn gold coins always are redeemable.

In the case of the paper currency two-fifths of a note must be presented if it shall be redeemed or a new note issued, and, no matter what the evidence may be as to total destruction of this paper currency, the government regards it as the holder's individual loss with which it is no further concerned. Fire may melt $1,000 worth of silver coins and it is worth its metal value. It may melt $1,000 in gold coins and the mint will pay $1,000 in new twenty dollar gold pieces for the mass. But the ashes of $1,000 in paper currency is without value.

In the thousands of fires over the country every year involving office buildings, factories, business houses and family residences an untold total of legal tender notes of all kinds are destroyed. Every piece of such paper lost is loss to the holder and gain to the government or to a national bank. It is a promissory note hopelessly lost to the holder. It is even more, for in many cases an individual man might redeem his debt obligation if he were assured by the holder of it that the piece of paper to which he had signed his name had been destroyed by accident and by no chance could turn up again against him.—Chicago Tribune.

Pope as a Witness.

Pope, like Garrick, made but a poor figure in the witness box. He was cited to appear in defense of Bishop Atterbury when that prelate was tried for high treason in the house of lords in 1723. "I never could speak in public," he told Spence afterward, "and I don't believe that if it was a set thing I could give an account of any story to twelve friends together, though I could tell it to any three of them with a great deal of pleasure. When I was to appear for the bishop of Rochester in his trial, though I had but ten words to say and that on a plain point (how the bishop spent his time when I was with him at Bromley), I made two or three blunders in it and that notwithstanding the first row of lords (which was all I could see) were mostly of my acquaintance."—London Standard.

The Lost Company.

"Hungry, I suppose?" said the sharp faced woman as she opened the door just a little bit.

"W'y, no," answered the ragged wayfarer. "I've clean forgot how to be hungry. But I'm out and out lonely."

"Lonely?"

"Yes. You see, I hain't had nothing to eat for so long that I've got so thin I can't cast no shadder, and you ain't no idea what company a man's shadder is to him while he is travelin' along the road."

Considerate.

Muggins is not handsome, and he knows it. When his first baby was born he asked, "Does it look like me?"

Of course they replied in the affirmative.

"Well," said he, with a sigh, "break it to my wife gently."—London Tit-Bits.

THE HARP CAME BACK

Incident In the Career of an Old Time Opera Manager.

A SURPRISE FOR MARETZEK.

It Came at a Time When Max Was Broke and the Sheriff Had Levied Upon All His Stage Properties—Mme. Maretzek's Thanks to the Carpenter.

In the old days in New York city, before there was a Metropolitan or a Manhattan Opera House and when the center of the theatrical world was around Fourteenth street, Max Maretzek and Strakosch were prominent at the old Academy of Music. There was a keen rivalry between them. Strakosch had Nilsson, and Maretzek was exploiting Di Murska.

By some error of dates both were booked for New York at the same time. Strakosch was at the Academy and Maretzek, having closed a poor season elsewhere, had halted in New York before going to Philadelphia and secured a week at the Lyceum theater on Fourteenth street. There were strong bills at both places. Each manager had his friends, and the billposters had a busy time of it. A round of bills for one company was no sooner posted than the rival billposter covered up the poster with the rival company's sheets.

At last, for the matinee on Saturday, bills at both houses were suddenly changed, every vacant fence place plastered over quickly, and with a pelting storm in the morning the managers began to put out "paper" to fill the houses. Alfred Joel was the business man for Maretzek and an adept at "papering" when necessary. With a house packed from parquet to gallery Joel had counted the boxes, found only $100 in the house and announced it to Max when the curtain fell between the acts.

This was serious to Max. The ever ready money lender who had "put up for him" had a lien on the box office, a sheriff's officer was in waiting on the stage, and it was a question of replevin before the properties and costumes could be liberated to follow the company to Philadelphia early next morning.

"Well, Alfred," quietly said Max, "I guess I'm used to trouble. But there is a good, big house anyway!" Then, turning to his wife, who was the harpist of the orchestra, he clasped both her hands, kissed her and remarked: "Let your fingers do their best. I want to hear you play. It does my heart good, you know, even when there's trouble."

There was hustling after the performance. Legal talent was at a premium, creditors were obdurate, everything that was supposed to be Maretzek's was temporarily in "hock," and Mme. Maretzek in tears, with longing looks at the harp she valued.

The scene of negotiations was transferred to the greenroom just as the officers making the levy were searching for more, and when their backs were turned the old stage carpenter hurried Mme. Maretzek away, then called her back again five minutes after and pointed to the orchestra.

The harp had disappeared. Clearing out everything on Sunday morning, while the boxes of properties were being taken away, Max and his wife stood in the center of the darkened stage. Both were crying. The instrument they valued most had been taken from them. Other things had been liberated, but no harp, and with a scene of grief that no others than themselves could have appreciated they were silent.

Then Old Man Guernsey stood between them and waved his hand above them into space. There were a creaking of pulley wheels, an injunction from the carpenter to "look out for your heads," and, lowered from above, came Mme. Maretzek's harp, landing on the stage between them.

"Now you've got it again, get it away quick!" said Guernsey. "Stop crying and be thankful. That's all."

He moved off without waiting for thanks, and a pathetic scene with Max and his wife closed the incident. To them the harp was as a part of themselves. To lose it was more than a misfortune, and in a broken voice the lady called the carpenter back to her.

"Please let the harp thank you," said she, "and listen. It will speak with my hands on this Sunday morning."

She placed herself beside it, seated on a box, and, with a smile that chased away tears, gave for a moment or two, as only she could give it, the air of the doxology, "Praise God, From Whom All Blessings Flow."—New York Times.

School Notes.

School opened on Tuesday for the winter term of three months.

Seven new pupils enrolled in High School on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. No seats were available for them in the three rooms now occupied by the high school students, so the desks, which were crowded into the laboratory in the fall and later taken out will have to be returned there. This will interfere not a little with the science classes.

It has been stated before and is again repeated for the sake of information that every state high school must be open to all students entitled to enter same. The generous state aid guarantees this to all high school students resident of the state.

The roller skating rink is now used from four to six o'clock by the several divisions of the basket ball teams and those taking physical culture with Miss Schwalbe. It has been secured for three months by the high school students and faculty.

The Sophomore literary society presents a program on Friday afternoon at 3. Miss Godward is class adviser for this section of the high school.

The twelfth student to enroll in high school from Newfolden entered last Tuesday. Without saying anything disparaging of the students from other sections, much which is creditable might be mentioned of the standing and success of the young people from the schools about the town of Newfolden.

Janitor Bailey is unable to attend to his duties at the Knox this week on account of illness. Mr. Hagen is temporarily taking his place.

The Misses McCrum and Lakin cared for the upper grade rooms in the Knox on Tuesday, as the regular teachers, through the carelessness of a train porter, were compelled to take a trip up to the Canadian boundary on the "Flyer" Monday night.

A large number of former students in the high school, who are now engaged in teaching in this and adjoining counties visited Thief River Falls during the Christmas holidays. It is discovered that these young people earn something in the neighborhood of $1400 every month during the seven months of the rural school year, and it is a certainty that the larger part of this sum is also spent in this city. Their salaries ranged from $40 to $65 per month, the latter amount being received by a graduate of the local high school for teaching in North Dakota.

The Conductor.

I had been suffering with a severe cold for several days, and was so hoarse, I could not speak above a whisper, Nov. 10th, I met one of Dr. Warner's agents on my train, he handed me a bottle of the White Wine of Tar Syrup and one hour after taking the first dose my hoarseness commenced leaving me. In twenty-four hours my voice was quite clear and natural and my cold was cured. It is the best remedy, I ever saw.

Respectfully,
Conductor Warren,

It is a dangerous thing to take a cough medicine containing opiates that merely stifle your cough instead of curing it. Foley's Honey and Tar loosens and cures the cough and expels the poisonous germs, thus preventing pneumonia and consumption. Refuse substitutes and take only the genuine Foley's Honey and Tar in the yellow package. Sold by all druggists.

One of the World's Greatest Remedies.

Mr. S. P. Mason, of Markle, Ind., writes:—I have been in the drug trade twenty years and have handled your White Wine of Tar fifteen years. I have never sold a remedy that equals it. Fifteen years ago, I bought a bill of this medicine from your agent. The first bottle I put out was for Asthma in the case of Jas. Ledbetter of this town. The Dr. said he could not live. One bottle of Warner's White Wine of Tar cured him and he is still living. I think the world should know more of this wonderful remedy.

Band Benefit.

A business meeting of the Thief River Falls Concert Band was held on Tuesday, Prof. Hay and Dr. Penny of the band committee being present. The matter of raising funds for the purchase of some new instruments was discussed and it was decided to give a supper. Members of the band were appointed on various committees to canvass the city and look after the collecting of material for the supper. It is hoped that the ladies of Thief River Falls will interest themselves and assist in making a financial success of the project. The date set was Friday evening, Jan. 21st. In the evening following the supper will be given a ball at which it is expected the attendance will be large, and the supper and ball combined should net a good round sum for the band treasury, which is very much needed. The music at the ball will be provided by an orchestra of 10 or 12 players, selected from the best musicians in the city, and all can look forward to some exceedingly fine dance music.

Died Tuesday.

Mrs. Carl Hoffseth died Tuesday evening at the age of 54 of consumption. The deceased had made her home on the East Side for the past fourteen years and was a woman held in high esteem. Besides her husband she leaves two children, John Hoffseth and Mrs. Axel Rod. The funeral services will be held from the home tomorrow afternoon at 1:30.

Thief River Falls School of Music

As will be noticed from an ad on this page of this issue, this city is to have a school of music, to be under the management of Mr. H. G. Maxwell, director of the local bands. This seems to be a move in the right direction, as we believe this city to possess exceptional advantages to students from other towns as well as those residing in the city, and bids fair to become a musical center of no small importance. The name of this institution is the Thief River Falls School of Music and the object is to give a thorough course on all instruments with special reference to piano and violin.

Frank Tilton Dead.

Frank Tilton, one of the pioneer citizens of this section of the state, died Tuesday morning after an illness of a few weeks duration. The deceased came to this section over twenty years ago with S. T. Johnson and they settled upon land in the town of Excel. When the town of Thief River Falls started, they disposed of their land and removed to this city and have resided here ever since.

Mr. Tilton was married twice, his first wife being a daughter of S. T. Johnson, who died a number of years ago, and by this union there was one son, Lowell Tilton, who is the manager of a store over on the Iron Range. He was 68 years of age and has been the sexton of Greenwood cemetary for the past fourteen or fifteen years. Mr. Tilton was known to nearly every person in the city and was never known to have an enemy.

COUNCIL ORGANIZES.

Anderson Elected City Clerk, Evenson Assessor and Halvorson Attorney.

Charles Alexander Resigned as Alderman from the Third Ward.

The first meeting of the recently elected city council was held Tuesday evening and it resulted in a number of surprises.

Milton Forder was elected president of the council and J. C. Berg vice president.

The next official to be elected was city attorney and G. Halvorson received four votes and E. M. Stanton one.

For city clerk there was considerable of a contest, three candidates having made application for this position as follows: N. J. Anderson, Lars Backe and Nels K. Nelson. The first ballot resulted in three for Anderson and two for Backe and Mr. Anderson was declared elected.

M. V. Evenson was elected assessor, receiving three votes to two for Ben Christienson.

E. Mellby was elected street commissioner for two years without any opposition.

For city physician there were two candidates, Dr. Mellby and Dr. Grundy, who had in applications. The vote resulted in three for Dr. Mellby and two for Dr. Grundy.

Andy Smith was elected poundmaster after a sharp contest with W. J. LaBree, but it took two ballots to land Mr. Smith.

Mayor Hamre appointed Dr. Grundy health officer, and the appointment was confirmed.

At the close of the meeting Alderman Charles Alexander surprised all those present by tendering his resignation as a member of the council. While Mr. Alexander gave no reason for the action he had taken, it is understood that he was dissatisfied with the organization of the council. No action was taken upon the resignation.

TO FIND FAULT.

People Are Sometimes Paid For That Express Purpose.

You have no idea how many things are wrong in a big business until you are paid to look for them, writes Gelett Burgess in Collier's. There were the clocks, for one thing, when I first began. The girls wore too many rats in their hair, there was grease on the elevator doors, expensive hats were dumped one on another, the ventilation was bad, the boxes on the shelves showed from the street through the show windows and about a thousand other things. Then Spiddelheim sold teapots just like our eighteen cent ones for 14 cents, and for a concern like Smith & Co. to be undersold is fatal. There's really nothing that so enrages Mr. Smith; also Rubinstein's window dresser has beaten ours, too, at times. Down it goes in my little report. Wouldn't any woman love my job.

Yes, it's fun to be paid for being a misanthrope, but it's hard work too. At 9 o'clock I begin my promenade through the store—downstairs, upstairs, basement, attic and annex. If a girl at the counter has dirty finger nails or too wide a pompadour to suit me I stop and talk pleasantly, buy 9 cents' worth of edging and so get her number from the sales slip. She never knows anything about it till her superintendent gives her a scolding the next day. I have eyes like a hawk and a nose like a hound and ears like a small boy under the sofa when a young man's calling on big sister. In ten minutes I have spotted the dust in the corner of the aisle, a girl who wears brass bracelets, a porter who is not attending to his duty, a badly arranged counter, an error in spelling on a placard, two store detectives loafing on their job and a hideous combination of colors in the front window. I go to the ladies' room and make a note of these things surreptitiously. I don't dare go there too often, though, for fear I'll be identified, so sometimes I run back to my office, two blocks away. So it goes till about 4 o'clock, hither and thither, nigh and yon, looking for trouble. It doesn't do a clerk any good to be uncivil to me, I can tell you, or to make me wait too long for my change, but I try to be fair, and if I find a particularly willing and considerate sales person down that name goes in my report too. You might suppose that there'd be good graft in that; but, of course, I keep my position only so long as the head of the firm has absolute confidence in my integrity. The funny part of it is that the more I complain the better he likes it. I'm like the opposition party in congress. I'm never satisfied. When I am I'll have to look for another position.

At 4 o'clock I go back to my little office and dictate my report from my notes to a stenographer, and when it's typewritten I send it to the head of the firm.

When "Pluck" Was Slang.

The word "pluck" affords an instance of the way in which slang words in the course of time become adopted into current English. We now meet with "pluck" and "plucky" as the recognized equivalents of "courage" and "courageous." An entry in Sir Walter Scott's "Journal" shows that in 1827 the word had not yet lost its low character. He says (volume 2, page 30), "Want of that article blackguardly called pluck." Its origin is obvious. From early times the heart has been popularly regarded as the seat of courage. Now, when a butcher lays open a carcass he divides the great vessels of the heart, cuts through the windpipe and then plucks out together the united heart and lungs—lights, he calls them—and he terms the united mass "the pluck."—London Notes and Queries.

Henry Ward Beecher's Wit.

On one occasion as Mr. Beecher was in the midst of an impassioned speech some one attempted to interrupt him by suddenly crowing like a cock. The orator, however, was equal to the occasion. He stopped, listened till the crowing ceased and then, with a look of surprise, pulled out his watch. "Morning already!" he said. "My watch is only at 10. But there can be no mistake about it. The instincts of the lower animals are infallible."

There was a roar of laughter. The "lower animals" in the gallery collapsed, and Mr. Beecher was able to resume as if nothing had occurred.

French Convicts.

Convicts who are sent to the French penal colony in French Guiana are punished in exactly inverse ratio to their crimes. The murderers and the most dangerous convicts are sent to the island of Salvation, where they lead lazy and healthy lives, but the men convicted of lesser offenses work and die in a terrible climate on the coast. In the settlement of St. Jean de Maroni the mortality is from 40 to 50 per cent. The average life of a convict is two years.

Which Was It?

"Are we slaves or are we free men?" thundered the orator. "I pause for a reply."

"Some of us are married," came the answer from the last row of seats.—New York Sun.

An Opportunity.

THE GUARD WAS ANGRY.

But the Pretty Girl Didn't Need His Protection.

Passengers on a subway car bound from Brooklyn to New York on Sunday afternoon had an experience that first caused frowns and then a laugh.

The car was crowded, but all the women had seats. On the platform was a middle aged man, apparently respectable. On a side seat was a girl in old rose, with cheeks to match.

The man on the platform caught her eye for a moment and threw a frantic kiss. The girl first smiled, then blushed furiously.

He threw another, and she turned away a crimsoned face.

"That will about do for you," said the big, rawboned guard. "Go home to your wife."

This didn't seem to worry the apparently respectable man, and, catching a glint from the girl's eyes, he threw another kiss. She turned her face to study carefully a pretty hat across the car.

At the Manhattan end of the bridge the girl rose to leave the car. The man who was trying to flirt with her also faced the sliding door. By that time all eyes were on the pair, the guard was mad all through, and a couple of passengers edged dangerously close.

The girl in old rose took the arm of the apparently respectable man and said in a silvery voice that all could hear:

"Oh, papa, how could you?"

Then everybody laughed at a joking father and a lovely daughter.—New York Press.

CONQUERED HER RIVAL.

Pretty and Pathetic Story of Jenny Lind and Grisi.

Jenny Lind and Grisi were both rivals for popular favor in London. Both were invited to sing the same night at a court concert before the queen. Jenny Lind, being the younger, sang first and was so disturbed by the fierce, scornful look of Grisi that she was at the point of failure when suddenly an inspiration came to her.

The accompanist was striking the final chords. She asked him to rise and took the vacant seat. Her fingers wandered over the keys in a loving prelude, and then she sang a little prayer which she had loved as a child. She hadn't sung it for years. As she sang she was no longer in the presence of royalty, but singing to loving friends in her fatherland.

Softly at first the plaintive notes floated on the air, swelling louder and richer every moment. The singer seemed to throw her whole soul into that weird, thrilling, plaintive "prayer." Gradually the song died away and ended in a sob. There was a silence—the silence of admiring wonder.

The audience sat spellbound. Jenny Lind lifted her sweet eyes to look into the scornful face that had so disconcerted her. There was no fierce expression now. Instead a teardrop glistened on the long, black lashes, and after a moment, with the impulsiveness of a child of the tropics, Grisi crossed to Jenny Lind's side, placed her arm about her and kissed her, uttering regardless of the audience.

Revised the Bill.

A young solicitor got a verdict for a client of considerable riches, but little beauty. Shortly afterward, in due course of business, he sent her a somewhat formidable account. On the following day his client called on him and asked him if he had been serious in his proposal.

"Proposal? But I have not proposed," replied the solicitor, somewhat aghast.

"What!" replied the fair client calmly. "You have asked for my fortune! I should have supposed that you would at least have had the politeness to take me along with it."

The next day she received a revised account as follows:

"Miss B., debtor to Mr. C. for legal business performed."

Then in place of "£ s. d." was "Total amount, Miss B."—London Telegraph.

What She Imagined.

"Don't imagine," he said after she had refused him, "that I am going away to blow my brains out or drink myself to death."

"No," she replied. "I have no idea that you will do anything of that kind. You are going away to do some wonderful thing which will bring you wealth and fame and make me regret all the rest of my life that I didn't believe you when you intimated that you were one of the greatest little men that had ever come over the asphalt."—Chicago Record-Herald.

KILLED THE COBRA.

Methods of a Mongoose In Attacking the Big Snake.

I had the good fortune to witness a fight between a four foot cobra de capello and a mongoose.

On first catching sight of the cobra rikki tik (as Rudyard Kipling calls the Indian mongoose) quietly smelled its tail and then hung around awaiting events with curiosity, but he had not long to wait, for the cobra spread its hood, hissed out its death sentence and prepared to dart from its coil at its natural and hated enemy.

Now commenced a most interesting and deadly battle of feint and counter feint by the mongoose and strike and lightning-like recovery by his adversary, who was also on the defensive, all the time watching for the opportunity to get in his properly aimed bite.

Time after time rikki tik squirmed slowly up to within reach of those terrible fangs, belly on ground, with every gray hair of his body erect with anger and excitement, his eyes glaring from his head, which, by the way, he invariably held sideways during this approach and attack, but the moment the cobra struck in a flash back sprang master mongoose, and, although often it appeared as if impossible that he could have escaped the dreaded fangs, ne'er a scratch harmed him, and there he would be again wearing the cobra out and pressing his advantage inch by inch. At last, with a growl and sharp rikki cry, the plucky little beast flew in, avoided the strike and seized the snake behind the head, never for a moment getting under his mouth, but right at the nape of the neck and head, which he scrunched with a loud cracking sound despite the struggles and twisting and turning of the cobra. Again and again rikki returned to the now writhing reptile and bit its head and body until it lay dying.

Finally he ate three or four inches of his mortal foe, but carefully avoided eating the fangs and poison glands, which I picked up by a stick and found them broken, but with the venom sacks attached.

Contrary to popular belief, I am of opinion the mongoose is not immune from snake poison, else why should he so particularly and carefully avoid being bitten? It is only by his marvelous activity that he escapes the spring and darting strike of his deadly enemy, the cobra de capello.—Ceylon Times.

DESTROYED BY CHEMICALS.

Weapons Used by Assassins Against Royal Personages.

Very few people are aware that as soon as the trial of an assassin of royalty is concluded the weapon with which he accomplished his crime is carefully destroyed so that no trace of it remains.

The reason of this is twofold—first of all, the possibility exists that at some time or other the weapons used in a royal tragedy may be exhibited to the public in some museum or show, and, second, there is a strange superstitious dread existing among reigning houses that the existence of the innocent but unhallowed weapons by which rulers have been dispatched to eternity is fraught with peril to their descendants.

The method of destroying these weapons is a curious one. The wooden portions, such as the stocks of pistols or the handles of poinards, are burned, and the metal portions are eaten away in a bath of nitric acid.

This has been the custom ever since the attempted assassination of Queen Isabella of Spain in 1852 by Merius. Prior to that date the metal work of firearms or knives was ground or filed away, but the blade of the dagger with which Merius sought to execute his dastardly crime proved to be of such exquisite temper and hardness that it resisted both file and grindstone.

This became known to the populace, and the superstitious Spaniards believed that Merius had invested his weapon with magical qualities. To divest them of this absurd belief the authorities had the weapon destroyed by immersing it in chemicals, a rule that has been followed ever since.

High Class Suicide.

In China suicide has been a fine art for several centuries. If a mandarin is guilty of misconduct he is requested to put himself out of the land of the living. There is a distinction, too, in the manner in which the oriental may die. If he is of exalted rank and entitled to wear the peacock feather he is privileged to choke himself to death with gold leaf. This is regarded as a distinguished manner of ending life. If the mandarin is only of the rank that is entitled to wear the red button he must be content with strangling himself with a silken cord. Such are the distinctions of caste.

Financial Information.

"So you at last yielded to that man's importunities and gave him some tips on the market?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Dustin Stax.

"What happened?"

"Well, they turned out so badly that I'm mighty glad I didn't invest any money on 'em myself."—Washington Star.

VERY FINE BIRDS.

His Wife's Comment on the Result of His Hunting Trip.

The braggadocio of the common variety of husbands generally sooner or later falls before the keen insight that most women have of human nature in general and bragging husbands in particular. A witty southern woman was married to such a man, who, though invariably unsuccessful as a hunter, was continually boasting of his killings.

As he was returning home one evening after an all day hunting trip it occurred to him that the usual accompaniment of an empty game bag was not in accordance with his oft boasted skill as a hunter and that his wife would again have the joke on him, so he went to the market and purchased two brace of partridges.

As he entered the house he threw them on the table with great eclat and exclaimed, "Well, you dear old doubter, you see that I am handier with the gun than you give me credit for being, after all; now don't you?"

Milady picked up the birds and examined them very carefully. As she looked up after the examination he said:

"Fine birds, my dear—very fine birds, are they not?"

"Robert," responded the wife, turning up her nose, "you were only just in time in shooting those birds today. Tomorrow it would have been everlastingly too late."—St. Louis Republic.

EATING AN APPLE.

What You Take Into Your System With the Fruit.

"Do you know what you're eating?" said the doctor to the girl.

"An apple, of course."

"You are eating," said the doctor, "albumen, sugar, gum, malic acid, gallic acid, fiber, water and phosphorus."

"I hope those things are good. They sound alarming."

"Nothing could be better. You ate, I observed, rather too much meat at dinner. The malic acid of apples neutralizes the excess of chalky matter caused by too much meat and thereby helps to keep you young. Apples are good for your complexion. Their acids drive out the noxious matters which cause skin eruptions. They are good for your brain, which those same noxious matters if retained render sluggish. Moreover, the acids of the apple diminish the acidity of the stomach that comes with some forms of indigestion. The phosphorus, of which apples contain a larger percentage than any other fruit or vegetable, renews the essential nervous matter of the brain and spinal column. Oh, the ancients were not wrong when they esteemed the apple the food of the gods—the magic renewer of youth to which the gods resorted when they felt themselves growing old and feeble. I think I'll have an apple," concluded the doctor.—New York Tribune.

Strange Lapse of Memory.

Cases of forgetfulness on matters of interest are on record. While Dr. Priestly was preparing his work entitled "Harmony of the Gospels" he had taken great pains to inform himself on a subject which had been under discussion relative to the Jewish Passover. He wrote out the result of his researches and laid the paper away. His attention and time being taken with something else, some little time elapsed before the subject occurred to his mind again. Then the same time and pains were given to the subject that had been given to it before, and the results were again put on paper and laid aside. So completely had he forgotten that he had copied the same paragraphs and reflections before that it was only when he had found the papers on which he had transcribed them that it was recalled to his recollection. This same author had frequently read his own published writings and did not recognize them.

A Question For the King.

Divinity doth not always hedge a king. There have been many rulers who could take as well as give in the joking line. The most striking instance of this kind is seen in the case of Charles II., that good natured Stuart, who once asked his chaplain, Dr. Stillingfleet:

"How is it that you always read your sermons before me when, as I understand, you can preach eloquently enough elsewhere without book or notes?"

The good doctor answered that he was so overwhelmed by his majesty's presence that he could not trust himself otherwise, continuing, "And now, sire, may it please you to tell me why you read your speeches when you have no such excuse?"—St. Louis Republic.

Her Own Coin.

There was quite a scene the other night at a certain bridge party. A loser paid a lady with her own I. O. U.'s. The lady said it was most ungentlemanly. She said she wouldn't have minded being paid back in her own coin, but she disliked paper money.—Exchange.

"Yes, it's hard to find the new tricks," added the simple mug.—Philadelphia Record.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

TO TEST GROSS EARNINGS TAX

Important Suit Begun by County Official at Duluth.

An action that is expected to precipitate one of the greatest test cases ever known to the courts of Minnesota has been taken by County Auditor Odin Halden of St. Louis county, who has placed on the assessment rolls of the city of Duluth, as omitted property, all property, real and personal, of the two telephone companies operating in Duluth.

Mr. Halden's action is based on the fact that the so called wide open tax amendment to the constitution, adopted in 1906, expressly repeals the provision of the constitution relating to the taxing of telephone companies on their gross earnings."

Section 1 of the wide open tax amendment provides that the amendment adopted in 1896 be repealed.

That amendment gave the state the right to tax telephone companies on a gross earnings basis, all of the taxes going to the state. Under the system as inaugurated by Mr. Halden the taxes will go to the cities, counties and other municipalities, the same as other taxes. It is expected the action will be strenuously opposed by both the state and the telephone companies.

KILLED BY HIGHEST COURT

Mill City Six-for-a-Quarter Street Car Ordinance Invalid.

A decision of great importance to the Twin Cities and Duluth was handed down by the United States supreme court at Washington when it sustained the United States circuit court, declaring invalid and void the Minneapolis city ordinance requiring the Twin City Rapid Transit company to give six fares for a quarter.

If the decision had been against the street car company there is little question but that St. Paul, Duluth and Stillwater, cities in which the company has its service established, would immediately have enacted ordinances on a six-for-a-quarter basis, provided their contracts with the street car company permit such action.

The court holds that the original contract between the company and the city fixing the fares at 5 cents stood for fifty years and was violated by the latter ordinance.

CASE SENT BACK FOR TRIAL

Supreme Court Reverses Lower Tribunal in Tawney Libel Case.

Congressman James A. Tawney of Winona won in the state supreme court in his libel suit against the Albert Lea Tribune.

The court reversed the district court of Freeborn county, which dismissed, on the pleadings, Mr. Tawney's suit for $10,000 damages, growing out of an editorial in the Albert Lea Tribune, based on some comment in the Philadelphia North American on Mr. Tawney's course in congress.

The supreme court holds, as a matter of law, that the language used by the paper concerning Tawney was libelous per se and that for that reason the trial court should have permitted the case to go to the jury to determine the amount of damages that may have been suffered.

MRS. LEDBETER ACQUITTED

Mankato Woman Freed of Murder Charge.

Mrs. Grace Ledbeter, on trial at Mankato on the charge of murdering her husband, has been acquitted. It took the jury just one hour, and three ballots, to formally decide on its verdict, but actually it was unanimous from the start, one juror casting blanks twice that undue haste might not seem to mark its deliberations.

Judge Pfau characterized the verdict as a just one, and the public was in a measure prepared for it. The scene in the courtroom was a touching one.

For six months Mrs. Ledbeter had been confined in the county jail and for two months before that she was harrassed by doubts regarding her husband's fate.

Another Strikebreaker Killed.

Frank Wile, aged thirty, of Cincinnati, a strikebreaker, was run down and killed by a switch engine in the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad yards at St. Paul while working as a switchman. He was found beside the track by a switching crew and a physician was sent for. Wile died before medical aid arrived. He was frightfully mangled about the legs and lower body. No one saw the accident.

Minnesota Game Commission.

Governor Eberhart has appointed H. A. Rider of Little Falls to succeed Carlos Avery as a member of the game and fish commission. With the appointment also goes the recommendation that Mr. Rider be made the executive agent of the board. In addition to Mr. Rider Governor Eberhart named George J. Bradley of Norwood as a member of the commission to succeed John H. Grill of Sherburne.

GREEK LABORERS EXPLOITED

According to Story Told Minnesota Labor Commissioner.

That ignorant Greek laborers are exploited from the time they make up their minds to come to America after mortgaging their little all to secure the necessary funds to do so until they become sufficiently acquainted with the language and ways of the United States to be no longer fit subjects for graft was the pith of a story told Labor Commissioner McEwen by George Angel of Duluth.

The greater majority of them drift to the Northwest. They arrive at St. Paul, he says, are hired by the railway companies and shipped out to work on various sections of the road. An employment fee is charged irrespective of whether they secure the situations themselves or are engaged by the railroad companies' employment agents.

The fee in some cases has been as high as $20 and Angel asserts the money is split up between the authorized hiring agent of the company and some "wise" Greek who in some indefinite way intimidates them and seems to be able to dictate whether or not they shall hold their jobs.

The process continues until the grafters begin to get afraid their victim is becoming too experienced to stand for any more deductions. Then they desist. Should a man, however, resist the attempt to realize on his wages he is discharged. When the Greeks first apply for a job the interpreter gets in his work, says Angel.

The interpreter poses as a man who is able to secure jobs for them, provided they pay him a lump sum or so much a month, and when one of them intimates he cannot see the necessity of "digging up" his job and he part company."

BUSINESS MEN VICTIMIZED

Worthless Checks Passed on Those at Bemidji, Minn.

Business men of Bemidji have been victimized of sums variously estimated at from $1,500 to $3,000, through cashing checks—purported to have been drawn by the Crookston Lumber company and signed by J. S. Hanson, chief cashier.

The fact that the checks were not genuine was not discovered by the payees until the paper was presented to the First National bank, which handles the accounts of the Crookston company. It was then too late to apprehend the men who issued and passed the paper.

Two men worked the deal. One was short, the other tall. Both were dressed in mackinaws and the regulation lumberjack suits used in the woods.

It is believed the men who fooled Bemidji are members of the same gang that operated at Bena and Cass Lake.

PAPOOSES GOT THE BENEFIT

Indians Bought Toys Instead of Fire-water.

Indian children on the Minnesota reservations had a "Merry Christmas" this year and dolls, toy engines and jumping jacks were in the hands of the copper colored youngsters for the first time in their lives.

This is one of the direct benefits of the enforcement of the Indian treaty regarding the selling or giving of liquor to government wards. All the Indians had money for Christmas, either from their annuity checks or from the sale of furs, and, as firewater was unobtainable, the children drew the benefits.

ROSSI SENTENCED TO HANG

Duluth Italian Murderer Hears Doom Through Interpreter.

Michaelo Rossi, convicted of the murder of Antonio Demeo on the evening of Aug. 4 in the Omaha railroad yards at Duluth, was sentenced to hang by Judge Cant in the district court of St. Louis county. Rossi took the sentence without a whimper. He was nervous and plainly agitated all through the proceedings, but when the interpreter conveyed to him the sentence of the court he did not change expression or utter a word.

Dies From His Injuries.

Joseph Connelly, twenty-nine years old, son of James Connolly, street inspector of Duluth, died in that city from injuries received at the Missabe docks, where he was a foreman for the Barnett & Record company, engaged at rebuilding one of the docks. He was struck on the head by an iron block, which fell when the boom of a derrick gave way, and the skull was fractured.

Engine Runs Down Family.

F. W. Smith, his wife and ten-year-old daughter miraculously escaped instant death when they were run down by a Chicago Great Western engine on the bridge near the clay pits at Red Wing. All three were hurled off the bridge with great force, but suffered only slight bruises.

Determined to End Life.

Olaf Bondeson of Duluth, a laborer, thirty-five years old, pulled the trigger of his revolver five times, failing to secure explosions on as many cartridges before he sent a bullet crashing through his brain in the Liberty hotel, on the Bowery.

Record Price for Live Hogs.

McKissick Bros., live stock commission dealers at South St. Paul, paid a record price for a "top" load of hogs. It was $8.45 a hundred pounds, live weight. That is the highest price ever paid for live hogs at the South St. Paul market.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

The Northern Pacific agent at Crookston has received stringent orders from St. Paul to refuse shipments of all beer and ardent spirits to Audubon, Benite, Detroit, Ougdale, Flaming, Fertile, Frazee, Gary, Guthrie, Hiberg, Lake Park, La Porte, Lees, McHugh, Mary, Syre and Twin Valley. The Great Northern Express company also received the same orders covering Lengby, Bagley, Shevlin, Abro, Mushka, Bena, Schley, San Diego, Suba, Cass Lake, Waubon, Mahnomen, Calloway and Ogemah.

The last of the old bonds that were issued by the state in 1858 to encourage the building of railroads through the state were paid last week, when the state treasurer took up the last bunch of $141,000 of funding bonds. The original bond issue of $1,659,000 became due in 1881 and refunding bonds were issued and reissued in 1891. The state has been paying off a few each year by means of a special tax for that purpose.

George Welsh, commissioner of immigration, is sending circular letters to the commercial clubs, agricultural societies and farmers' clubs urging them to assist the census supervisors in obtaining complete statistics of farm yields. The immigration authorities of Minnesota, he explains, have been hampered in preparing advertising matter to promote the welfare of the state by lack of authentic statistics of the crops.

The board of directors of the schools for the deaf and blind at Faribault has decided to admit students from other states to the school for the deaf and dumb. A charge of $275 per year will be made for these students. The attorney general had given the board a ruling that this could be legally done. The estimated per capita cost of educating pupils at the school is about $215.

Presidents of the state normal schools have decided to have a series of teachers' institutes to last one or two days in any county where the superintendent of schools will provide suitable arrangements. The normal schools will furnish the teachers for the institutes in the hope of bringing the normal schools closer to the country schools.

All county commissioners elected in the future must wait a full year before they distribute political patronage and the political phases of all appointments by the commissioners will be changed as a result of a supreme court decision holding that the county board may on the last day of the year appoint county employes for a full year.

Stockholders in the Great Northern ore properties will divide among themselves $2,065,500 on Jan. 10 from the United States Steel corporation as royalties on the ore lands leased from the Great Northern stockholders. The payment will be for the year 1909 and will aggregate about 1.37 per cent on outstanding certificates.

Sexton Henry Krogman of Oakdale cemetery, the only cemetery in Crookston, is cast down because of lack of business. He has not dug a grave in two months and, as he puts it, "this is the end of the limit."

Minneapolis and St. Paul were chosen as the next meeting place of the convention of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, in session at Boston.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

O. H. Simonds of Duluth, aged sixty-six years, died quite suddenly in that city, although he had been in poor health for a week. He had been a resident of Duluth for twenty-five years and had been prominent in numerous large enterprises there, one of which was the West Duluth Land company.

Adolph Poirer, aged seventy-five, a pioneer resident of St. Paul, is dead. Mr. Poirer was born in Canada. He reached St. Paul in 1857 and engaged successively in the furniture and broom manufacturing businesses, from which he retired six years ago.

Lars Ruda, who would have been ninety-five years old in a few days, died at Lafayette of old age. Ruda was one of the pioneers of Nicollet county, having lived in Lafayette forty-two years.

Patrick Cantwell, a pioneer settler of Le Sueur, is dead, aged eighty-six years. Mr. Cantwell was the oldest inhabitant of Le Sueur, having lived there continuously for fifty-six years.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

E. H. Phelps and his son Ray have been arrested in Cass Lake and taken to Grand Rapids on a charge of arson. They were arraigned before Court Commissioner Pratt and released on $750 bail, pending a hearing. May 18 last the Phelps' stopping place at Winnebigoshish dam was burned to the ground and a man named Joseph Wegge lost his life.

A. Luhkanen is alive because a fellow tailor in the shop of J. Frank Burrews forgot his laundry. Returning to get it he found Luhkanen slowly dying from strangulation in an attempt to commit suicide.

Roy Earle, aged eleven, of St. Paul, while visiting L. F. Winter on a farm near Eau Claire, Wis., was gored to death by a bull when he started to drive the cows into a barn. The boy died in fifteen minutes.

Every human being so blessed should be thankful for the physical strength wherewith to earn his daily bread and an appetite and stomach which will enable him to enjoy and digest it properly. These are common blessings, yet a good many people are denied them.

In making preparation for the winter food supply for the poultry it is well to keep in mind that both clover and alfalfa are excellent rations in the supplying of needed protein. The hens will devour all leafy parts of the legumes as eagerly as they will wheat or corn.

Limberneck is an ailment which now and then appears in flocks of poultry and seems to be due to a diseased condition of the neck, induced by poisons contained in partly decayed meat. The cure is to remove diseased fowls from those that are well and the feeding of ground bone and meat scraps that are fresh and untainted.

Carrots, beets and turnips which it may be desired to carry through the winter should be packed in barrels or bins with clean sand or dry earth, enough filler being used to keep the roots separated a bit. The place where such crops are stored should be both cool and dry so as to retard as far as possible the tendency to decay or sprout.

There is no profit and mighty little satisfaction in the end in buying fruit trees of unknown descent and dubious vitality of a foreign house at long prices when the same varieties guaranteed true to name and vigorous can be bought from the nearby nurseryman at more reasonable prices. Before placing orders for future deliveries with the foreign house it would be a good idea to write the nearby house and get prices.

Experiments which have lately been conducted in the bacteriological department of the University of Wisconsin seem to point quite conclusively to the fact that a good many cases of poisoning from the eating of ice cream are traceable to the keeping of the cream from which it is made for some length in cold storage, during which interval poisons are developed by harmful bacteria, whose work is not discernible from either texture or taste

The apple crop of America—United States and Canada—is placed at 35,000,000 barrels, which is 12,000,000 barrels more than that of 1908. It is generally conceded that the crop produced east of the Mississippi river is larger and poorer than last season, while that west is lighter, but of superior quality. Some forecast of apple prices is inferable from the fact that a fellow is paying $4 or better per barrel for runty Ben Davis in November.

The covering of the strawberry bed, if it needs covering, should be deferred until the ground has frozen solid. Then enough clean straw or cornstalks should be scattered over the bed to shield it from the alternate thawing and freezing of the bright days and cold nights of the winter months. If the ground is frozen, as suggested, before the covering is applied this frozen body holds the plants in complete cold storage, it being easy to retard the growth and blossoming of the plants in the spring by simply leaving the covering on.

A rather unusual suit has been brought by an Iowa farmer against the tenant who has been working his farm the past year or two. The damages asked are $630, and the grounds of the suit are that the renter allowed cockleburs to grow on the place. It is possible that the tenant may bring countersuit for damages against the landlord for having allowed cockleburs to go to seed the year prior to his occupancy of the place. In any event the decision in the case will be viewed with interest, as it opens a very wide field for speculation and action.

In some sections of the west the wayfarer notes an interesting bird habit—a sort of joint food-storage arrangement practiced by the yellow hammers and bluejays. As related by a resident of one of these localities, the flicker pecks holes in the bark of the yellow pine large enough to accommodate the acorns which fall from nearby oaks, one in a place. Worms pass from the bark into the acorn, where they fall easy prey to the sharp bill and spiked tongue of the flicker, while the jay, seeking the meat of the acorn, dislodges them, thus making room for those of the next year's crop. During the fall months one may observe acorns by hundreds thus stored.

Fortunate indeed are those folk who in the strenuous struggle of life for material possessions keep as intact as may be the instinctive, God given interest in and love for the beauties of nature scattered in profusion about them—in the soil beneath their feet, the flower and leaf that perfume and brighten the meadow or woodland path, the birds that minister sweet harmony to the ear, the rose tinted and cloud flecked skies of morn and eve, the starlit heaven at night and the speechless messages that all of these speak to him of an open heart and inquiring mind. Such tastes and likes are subtle and spiritual and should be cultivated as earnestly as one may. They give balm and comfort for the hurts of life.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

MAN AND TWENTY ACRES.

A bulletin lately put out by the department at Washington tells of a farmer of Pawnee county, Neb., who has made an unusual success in the farming of a very unpromising twenty acre tract. The owner came from Switzerland ten years ago, worked out until he saved $275, when he bought the tract in question for $12.50 an acre, and it was conceded to be the poorest land in the neighborhood, covered with brush and small trees. He cleaned it up and developed it along intensive lines until today he has it all paid for, a neat house on it, with stone basement barn and other outbuildings, and has been offered $2,500 for it. He has lately made three pleasure trips to Colorado and spent three months of last year in Switzerland. His annual net revenue from this small tract averages $1,000. The methods which the owner follows are of especial interest. The land is kept busy from spring until fall. At the last cultivation of potatoes corn is planted between the rows. In this way a full crop of potatoes is secured and a fair crop of corn. As high as 700 bushels of potatoes and seventy-five bushels of corn to the acre have been grown in this way. The corn usually has to be hoed once, but the potato vines so nearly cover the ground that not much working of the corn is required. By the time the corn needs the ground the potatoes are ripe, while the corn is in the shock before it is time to dig the potatoes. Sometimes part of the potato patches are sown with millet or sorghum before the last cultivation, this making a good crop of feed and not hurting the potatoes. The onion patches also grow corn and melons. In the orchard, which comprises eight acres, small fruits, potatoes and truck are raised. The farm is situated seven miles from a town of 2,500 people, and the reader will see at a glance that this must mean low prices and heavy expense in hauling. What he might do with the same tract or one of ten acres located within two miles of a city of 25,000 it would not be difficult to forecast. In speaking of his work the owner says: "I think I have found a remedy for hard times. Any man can pick up ten or twenty acres. On ten acres he can make a living; on twenty acres he can get rich. I can't understand why a man will live in a city and work for wages that do not give him a fair living when he can walk out a hundred miles or so and get a farm like mine and be independent."

A PRESSING QUESTION.

If reports which are being circulated in different sections of the corn belt are to be credited the cold snap of Oct. 12 and 13, which damaged the apple crop from Colorado eastward and as far south as central Missouri and ruined hundreds of thousands of bushels of potatoes in the Dakotas, in Minnesota and Wisconsin, very seriously impaired the vitality of much of the corn still in the field at the time. In some counties in the corn belt it is stated by those in a position to know that it is doubtful if there was a bushel of sound seed corn left after the freeze. If this is the case here and there it is quite likely that like damage has been done over a considerable area of the corn belt in which the freeze referred to was heavy. It goes without saying, too, that if such damage has been done the best time to determine its extent is now and not three or four months hence. It is dead sure that seed corn which is worthless now is not going to improve any as the winter advances. The advantage of early testing will be that if there are a few fields in which the corn was sufficiently dried out to escape damage the owner can gather at once from these seed for himself and his neighbors who may be unfortunate. It is quite likely that there will be foreign orders to fill if a fellow's corn tests O. K. Seed of good type and strong vitality will be a prime essential in the growing of next year's crop, and the securing of a supply of it is a matter that should be looked into at once.

A GAMBLING PROPOSITION.

There is just enough of the gambling instinct in a fellow so that after he has attended a big corn show where all kinds of whopping, even rowed ears have been on exhibition, so much larger and finer types than that corn which he has grown in his own fields in the north part of the corn belt, he has an itching to try to raise the same big corn, when the chances are ten to one that he will not reach a proper maturity in the short growing season where he lives. This tendency is one of the very few ill effects of a corn show; yet it is one that every corn show director, every experiment station instructor and every agricultural paper should dwell on persistently.

A merciful man is not only kind to the dumb brutes that he has the care of, but also considerate of the feelings of the folks whom he associates with daily.

The philosophy of covering small fruits and flowering shrubs during the winter lies in giving them such shelter as will protect them from alternate thawing and freezing, the result of exposure to the direct rays of the sun.

Carroll county, Ind., has a skunk farm, on which there are at present more than 1,200 of these odorous animals. When the skunks reach a given age they are killed and the hides sold. The owner is at present building a factory for the manufacture of fertilizer and skunk oil.

While one would suppose that the poultry raiser of the south and west, where the thermometer seldom shows many degrees of frost, had decidedly the better of it from the standpoint of weather conditions, yet these same genial conditions result in an enormously increased number of lice and mites, which pester the poultry and tax the patience of the owner to the limit.

Experiments which have been carried on by representatives of the federal department of agriculture at the Rampart station in Alaska, within the arctic circle, show that every variety of spring grain tried ripens its crop, while winter rye and wheat survived the winters when covered with snow. It has been found that both barley and oats can be grown successfully in the Yukon and Tanana valleys.

Readers of the daily papers have lately noticed the case where a number of thoroughbred racing horses which were assembled in a town of high altitude in the southwest were very seriously affected by the decided change in altitude, some of them dying as a result. The same thing has been noted in the case of horses shipped from the low altitude states of the Ohio and Mississippi to the higher levels of the mountain and Pacific coast states. The fact is one that the mover—to the west and southwest would do well to take account of.

It does not take a large measure of insight to realize that instead of introducing new crops into this country which can only be grown at a relative disadvantage as compared with the conditions of climate and labor under which they are produced in their native climes and in almost every instance crops which require intensive care it would be just as well if the department at Washington devoted a good measure of its energy in such study of the agricultural labor problem of the country as will enable farm owners to handle more adequately than at present the work which they have to do and that with the most approved types of labor saving machinery.

The second national apple show was held in Spokane this year the latter part of November. Some idea of its magnitude may be had from the fact that the three floors of the Washington state armory, containing in all 100,000 square feet, and a steam heated tent 225 by 300 feet were required to accommodate the exhibits. Prizes aggregating $25,000 were offered, the chief being $1,000 for the best exhibit in the carload class, which called for 630 boxes, or 210 barrels, of one or more standard varieties. Besides, there were prizes for best box, barrel, pyramid, basket and plate displays. Fruit from all the principal apple growing sections was on exhibition, and the show was conceded to be superior to that of last year. The total number of apples on exhibition was placed at 2,000,000.

One of the most practical as well as valuable phases of the work of the federal department of agriculture during the past year has been along the line of helping the southern farmer to help himself through the conduct of model and co-operative farms more or less directly under the supervision of its field agents. This plan has been found most helpful along the line of securing radical changes of farm methods which have been long in vogue. The good work was started six years ago with one field agent and one model farm. Today there are 362 field agents, who exercise direct or indirect supervision over 00,000 farms. The result of the work has been to secure a better preparation of the soil, better varieties of seed, more intensive cultivation of the soil and the production on the farms of the stuff needed for the consumption of both man and beast.

While it is the practice of a majority of milkers to sit on the right side of a cow while doing the job, the tester for a German breeding association has made some investigations in regard to the matter which are at least interesting. He has found that the right half of the udder produced 8.73 pounds of milk, while the left produced only 8.03 pounds, the milk from the right half testing 3.65 per cent butter fat, while that from the left showed but 3.31 per cent. The investigator attributes this difference almost exclusively to the fact that, as most milkers are right handed, the right side of the udder receives the better manipulation, and the milk glands are as a result better developed than on the left side. In way of correcting this difficulty he recommends getting the young cow accustomed to being milked on either side, the milker alternating his position when milking morning and evening. He contends that doing this would improve the yield of milk from a given cow both in quantity and quality.

Within the past few years American maize or corn has been introduced into Egypt and is at present grown there in large quantities under irrigation.

The little terror or guillotine mouse trap may be made quite a bit more effective if the little piece of meat or cheese with which it is baited is tied to the tongue with a bit of thread or string. When thus fixed these traps are a dead shot.

Hard milkers are the result of an unnatural tight condition of the muscles regulating the milk flow at the end of the teats. To remedy this difficulty the teats should be washed off with an antiseptic solution and teat plugs dipped into some healing ointment and inserted into the ends of the teats and allowed to remain there between milkings.

The muskrat, one of the most widely distributed of fur bearing animals, yields a pelt which, though of not high quality, nevertheless is much used and finds a ready sale on the market. Within recent years the flesh of the muskrat has not only come to be considered edible, but is even relished by epicures. It is sold in the larger cities under its own name or that of marsh rabbit.

Besides grain weevils and flour beetles, which flour mill owners have had to contend with, they have of late years had a much worse pest on their hands in the shape of the Mediterranean flour moth, which was first introduced into the country about twenty years ago. Both sulphur and carbon bisulphide have been used as insecticides, but of late very satisfactory results have been secured by fumigation of the infested quarters with the very poisonous hydrocyanic acid gas.

The progressive potato growers in Waushara county, Wis., have acted on the advice of a soil expert from the experiment station at Madison and have ordered a carload of ground limestone to apply on their sandy soils as an aid to growing clover for soil improvement. The soils in question have become sour, and the limestone is for the purpose of remedying this defect. The clover is used in rotation with the potatoes, and the growers are anxious to get the largest possible growth of this. Their plan of co-operative carload ordering is one that sour soil fellows in other sections might adopt with profit.

The level headed man employed in mercantile or manufacturing pursuits and so situated that he is dependent on another for the job he holds will do well to get hold of a few acres of land in the course of the next few years so as to have something to fall back on when advanced age compels him to give up his position to a younger man. Such an investment is preferable to wildcat mining and other investment schemes, because the land is there, won't burn up or blow away or disappear in some swindler's satchel. And this man in the subordinate position will have more health and a larger bank account if he gets on to this land and learns how to till it with his own hands before he is fifty.

The loss to the cattle raising interests of the country from tick fever is placed at $40,000,000, the malady being confined to a few southern states and being directly due to a little blood-sucking tick about an eighth of an inch long which in the process of extracting the blood of the animal attacked injects into its circulatory system a virulent microbe which feeds upon the red blood cells and destroys them, thus producing the disease known as tick fever. The federal authorities are doing all in their power to reduce the losses from the disease, having found the fever can be eradicated if the tick causing it can be destroyed, and it is this phase of the campaign which is at present occupying their energies.

New York state has lately come into possession of a wild game farm near the village of Sherburne, in the Chenango valley, the English pheasant being the variety at present raised. The preserve contains 800 acres, five of which have been in use the past season, inclosed with poultry netting nine feet high, with additional fine mesh netting at the bottom and extending seven inches into the ground as protection against minks, rats, skunks, etc. For the first six or seven weeks the little birds are kept in yards 10 by 50 feet. One wing is then clipped, and they are allowed to roam in the larger tract. The hen pheasant lays about thirty eggs in her wild state and sixty in confinement. The eggs require twenty-eight days' incubation, and the job is turned over to docile old Biddies, who cover a clutch of from twenty to thirty eggs. Partridges of the American type are to be raised next year in addition to the pheasants. The manager of the farm says the pheasant is more easily raised than the common domestic fowl and requires little care after it is three weeks old. Pheasants are insectivorous birds, almost entirely subsisting on bugs, worms, ants and other insects, and being especially fond of the potato beetle. It costs but 50 cents a year to keep a pair of them, while mature breds fetch from $2 to $3 per pair on the market, and a trio of prime birds will bring from $6 to $9 for breeding purposes.

ODD ELECTION SIGNS.

The Signs Are In Washington,—the Elections Elsewhere.

"Of course we don't have any elections of our own," said a man from Washington, "but we have election intimations, if I may call them that, which can't be duplicated anywhere else in the country.

"You see, when we Washingtonians want to vote we've got to do it somewhere else, and as most of us have a lingering fondness for the franchise we are pretty likely to hang on to a residence somewhere outside the District.

"We especially like to do it because it makes us feel as if we had some sort of weapon to flourish before the observing eyes of the politicians who may have something to say about our hold on our jobs, and when the time comes to go home to vote we visibly swell with importance.

"Naturally a national election is the one that catches us all at once, and it is then that the intimations I spoke of do most abound. The papers are full of advertisements of loans for election expenses. Department clerks can be accommodated with sums covering their railway fare, new clothes for the trip and a substantial margin over and above necessary items. The interest is a bit high, but a clerk who is pining to go back home to splurge a bit is willing to mortgage his resources for the pleasure.

"These offers of loans fill columns of the daily papers. Alongside of them are other advertisements, all turning on the one theme, the election. 'Buy yourself a new suit to go home and vote in!' The grammar is a bit off, but the prices are asserted to be all right.

"In the shop windows there are dozens of election placards: 'Just the hat to wear when you go home to vote.' 'Specials in suit cases for the election.' 'Take a souvenir hatpin to your best girl when you go home to vote.' 'Swell suit for the election, only $1 a week.' and in a shoe store window, 'Tramp, tramp, tramp, the boys are marching—home to vote; wear ——'s shoes and you won't get sore feet!'

"The railways offer special rates to voters, and so it goes. You won't find anything like it in any other town."—New York Sun.

EASILY MANAGED.

The Clever Scheme Evolved by the Clock Winder.

The contract for keeping the church and town hall clocks in order was given to a new man. Unfortunately from the start he experienced a difficulty in getting the clocks to strike at the same time. At last the district council requested an interview with the watchmaker.

"You are not so successful with the clocks as your predecessor," he was told. "It is very misleading to have one clock striking three or four minutes after the other. Before you took them in hand we could hardly tell the two were striking. Surely you are as competent?"

"Every workman has his own methods, gentlemen," replied the watchmaker, "and mine ain't the same as H.'s were."

"I'm decidedly of the opinion that it would be for the general good if they were," remarked one of the councilors.

"Very well, sir, in future they shall be," came the reply. "I happened to write to him last week about the trouble I had with the clocks, and—but perhaps," he added as he produced a letter and handed it to the chairman, "you'd like to see what he said."

"Dear sir," ran the letter—"about them clocks. When you get to know what a cantankerous lot of busybodies the council consists of you'll do the same as I did for fifteen years—forget to wind up the striker of the town hall clock, and the blooming jackasses won't be able to tell that both clocks ain't striking together!"—London Tit-Bits.

Curious Laws In India.

Some of the old laws of Nepal, India, were curious. Killing cows ranked with murder as a capital offense, for instance. Every girl at birth was married with great ceremony to a betel fruit, which was then cast into a sacred stream. As the fate of the fruit was uncertain, the girl was supposed never to become a widow. To obtain divorce from a husband a wife had only to place a betel nut under his pillow and depart. In Nepal the day is considered to begin when it is light enough to count the tiles on the roof or distinguish the hairs on a man's hand against the sky.

Ancient Sacrifices.

Many Roman and Greek epicures were very fond of dog flesh. Before Christianity was established among the Danes on every ninth year ninety-nine dogs were sacrificed. In Sweden each ninth day ninety-nine dogs were destroyed. But later on dogs were not thought good enough, and every ninth year ninety-nine human beings were immolated, the sons of the reigning tyrant among the rest, in order that the life of the monarch might be prolonged.

A Far Sighted Man.

"Women vote! Never, sir, with my consent!"

"Why not?"

"What! And have my wife losing thirty dollar hats to other women on the election?"—Boston Transcript.

"He's a very particular man."

VOL. XXVII. THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, JANUARY 13, 1910 NUMBER 3

H. O. NELSON IS DEAD

One of the Pioneer Citizens of This Section Passed Away Last Week.

Came to This Section in 1878 and Settled First at St. Hilaire.

Hans O. Nelson, one of the oldest settlers of this section of Minnesota, died last Friday morning after a short illness at the advanced age of 70.

Mr. Nelson came to this section in 1878 and settled upon a homestead, which was later a part of the village of St. Hilaire. For a number of years Mr. Nelson conducted a general store at St. Hilaire and the late Charles G. Rapp and Thorvold Mork were employed by him as clerks. When the village of Thief River Falls was started, he removed his general store to this city and conducted this business until about eight years ago. For a number of years he was postmaster.

Mr. Nelson was one of the most honorable men that ever lived and his kindly disposition won for him years ago the friendship of the entire community. Besides a wife he leaves five children as follows:

Mrs. James Patten, Mrs. Chris. Paulson, Mrs. Rowley, Miss Julia Nelson and William Nelson.

The funeral services were held Sunday.

A number of Chinese pheasants have been seen lately near the new mill at Fertile. A large flock formerly inhabited the country around Kittleson's Lake, north of Fertile, but have not been seen lately and have probably moved to more favorable ground. There is a heavy fine for killing these beautiful game birds.

Dennie Still Lives.

Old settlers in Thief River Falls will remember Dennie Leahg, an old soldier, who had one eye. Dennie was a friend of every man, woman and child in the village in the early days and his witty sayings furnished much amusement for all. He left here about ten years ago and the report was in general circulation that he was dead. Last week, however, Charles A. Robbecke received a letter from Dennie, who is now in the Veterans Home at Napa, California. He says that of late he has been having considerable trouble with his eyes, but otherwise is enjoying good health. He likes the Veterans Home and sends his best regards to all former friends.

Johnson Speaks "Right Out".

William E. Johnson, chief special officer of the U. S. Indian Department in stamping out the liquor traffic among Indians, is exceedingly plain-spoken, when referring to sale of liquor to Indians.

He recently wrote the mayor of Deer River as follows:

"The saloon men of your town for years have made a regular business of selling whiskey to Indians and 'rolling' lumberjacks. They have befouled the good name of your town throughout the state. They have committed felony daily in you midst. I know of none of them that do not richly deserve a penitentiary sentence for their crimes.

"For these reasons they deserve and shall receive from me no consideration whatever".

City Council.

At a meeting of the city council held last week, salaries of city officials were fixed as follows for the year:

Mayor, $100 per year.
Aldermen $50 per year.
City Clerk, $50 per month.
City Treasurer, $25 per month.
City Attorney, $35 per month.
Supt. of Police, $65 per month.
Patrolmen, $60 per month.
Street Commissioner, $60 per month.
Assessor, $200 for year 1910 and $175 for year 1911.
Librarian, $18 per month.
Health Commissioner, $175 per year.
Supt. of Water and Light Department, $125 per month.
Electricians, $65 and $62.50 per month.
Linemen, $60 per month.
Office Clerk, $45 per month.
City Physician, $150 per year.

The resignation of Alderman Charles Alexander was accepted and Dr. G. W. Booren appointed in his place. Dr. Booren has announced that he cannot devote any time to the office and will not qualify.

THE FINISH IN SIGHT

Red Lake County Runs Behind at the Rate of $8,000 a Year.

If Present County Commissioners Continue to Run County It Will Be More.

The annual expenses of the revenue fund is about $25,000. On a valuation $4,000,000 at 5 mills, 20,000 can be raised, but only about $17,000 of this amount is collected so they run behind $8,000 a year at the present rate of expenditures.—Extract from the report of C. E. Johnson, assistant public examiner on affairs of Red Lake county.

It does not take much of a financier to see the finish of Red Lake county if the present condition of affairs is to continue. At the January meeting of the county commissioners a good start was made. The county printing was let to the highest bidder and to the publisher offering the poorest service. That is going to mean an additional cost to the county of between $800 or $1,000. The bills of special attorneys hired by the commissioners were allowed at between $600 and $700 with more expense to follow later. Recently the county board purchased four lots in Red Lake Falls for an additional court house site. This cost the county $4,000 and any private individual could have purchased the land for $400. That is the reason that the revenue fund is short, although the commissioners are making a five mill tax for this fund—the limit allowed by the laws of the state.

There is one hope, however, and that is that County Commissioner Linqduist will undoubtedly be removed from office in a short time and if the people of his district get together and elect a good, honest man for the place, it will help some. It should not make any difference whether he favors Thief River Falls or Red Lake Falls for the county seat—the county is going to be divided next November—but in the meantime the county is badly in need of one commissioner who will work in harmony with Aubol and Johnson.

Knew Glavis Well.

L. R. Glavis, the special agent of the Interior Department who has been causing Secretary Ballinger so much trouble and has the backing of Pinchot, is known to many Thief River Falls people. Mr. Glavis first entered the government service as an estimator of the Chippewa pine in this state and when the headquarters of the estimators were at Thief River Falls he often visited this city. E. S. Wilcox, of this city, who was one of the estimators, worked with Mr. Glavis and they camped together many months and naturally became very well acquainted. After the work was finished in this state Mr. Wilcox quit the service of the government, but Mr. Glavis remained and has been in the government employ until recently dismissed. The two have kept up a correspondence, however, and last week Mr. Wilcox received a long letter from Mr. Glavis, who is now in the west.

Mr. Wilcox says that Mr. Glavis is a very honest and sincere person and he believes he is entirely in the right in the present controversy.

Married Monday.

Mr. Trambley, a retired French farmer living down near Brooks, who says that he was [illegible] years of age a long time ago, was united in marriage Monday to Mrs. Morin, aged [illegible], mother of Andrew Morin a former drayman of this city. The happy couple will make their home in this city in the future, and will occupy the Morin home up near the Thief river bridge.

Soon to Wed.

Invitations have been issued by Mr. and Mrs. August Wertenberg, who live near Middle River, to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Martha to George Albert Guss. Both are popular young people of that section, and are well known in this city. The marriage is to take place on Tuesday, January 18.

The Bray Mutual.

Pursuant to the call of Secretary Swanson, the annual meeting of the Bray Mutual Fire Insurance Co. was held in the village hall on January 3.

The election of officers and a slight change of by-laws constituted the most important transaction of business.

The following officers were elected:

President—Nels K. Anderson.
Secretary—John O. Swanson.
Treasurer—Chas. Gustafson.
Directors—Ed Aubol, John Naplin, Fred Goether.

An Early Georgia Monster.

In the fore part of August, 1812, a party of hunters found in a mountainous region now known as Rabun county, Ga., a being nearly eight feet high covered with bluish hair and having a human face adorned with immense ears resembling those of an ass. The creature was stone deaf and on that account seemed wholly unconscious of the approach of the men. This monster seems, from all accounts, to have been seen upon several occasions during the next four years. In 1816 a number of adventurers from Virginia, most of them surveyors working up the unexplored portions of Georgia and the Carolinas, formed themselves into a party for the express purpose of capturing the uncanny being if possible. They scoured the hills and valleys for several days and at last returned unsuccessful to the starting point.

The many tales told of this extraordinary being seem to have created quite a stir all along the Atlantic coast. A printed circular issued by a land company in 1815 says, "The climate of Georgia is exceedingly mild, the soil productive, and the danger of attack from uncouth beasts which are represented as being half beast and half man are fairy tales not worthy of consideration."—Exchange.

Made It Quite Clear.

The engineers of a party in the field were continually annoyed by the curiosity of the farmer folk in the country round. Each and every day their progress was blocked by some inquiring soul who would have liked to spend the forenoon acquiring answers to questions of why and whither and how far and what-for, relates the New York Sun. At last a serious faced young man took an interested bucolic graybeard one side and explained matters.

"Now," said he, "I'm telling this to you, and I don't want it to go any further. We have discovered that the earth is a parabolic hexoid, and the ordinates and co-ordinates do not quite tally by a foot or perhaps by fourteen inches. The place where the gap comes has been located in that field just ahead of us. We don't want it mentioned, but we are getting ready to blow up the spot and make an incision before beginning the operation of joining the two."

The engineers finished their labors in peace and solitude.

The Shilling Bequest.

The wealthy auctioneer who reduced the inheritance of a daughter to an annuity of £104 because she had become a Socialist reminds one of the old fashioned "cutting off with a shilling." Why a shilling rather than nothing? Blackstone explains. The Romans used to set aside wills as deficient in natural duty if they disinherited or totally passed by any child of the testator. But the smallest legacy was accepted as evidence that the testator had not lost his reason or his memory, as the law otherwise assumed he had; hence the groundless belief in England that a father could not disinherit his child without a shilling, although the English law knows no presumption of insanity or forgetfulness in such a case. Of Sheridan and his son Tom (and of other fathers and sons) the story is told: "Father—I'll cut you off with a shilling. Son—I'd rather have it now, dad."—St. James' Gazette.

Appealed to His Pride.

It was the most obstinate mule in the lot and refused to enter the car of a train held up at a little wayside station. Threats, cajolery and blows were alike useless. The mule refused to budge, and the slant of his ears told those of the passengers who were familiar with mule ear talk that where he was he intended to stay. Then the aged African who was trying to load him in said in honeyed tones:

"Whuffo' yo' behave dis way befo' all dese strange people? Why, yo' fool mule, doan' yo' know dat dese people will jes' believe dat yo' neber done trabeled befo' in all yo' life?"

The long ears lost their aggressive slant, and the beast went sedately up the inclined plank with the air of a man entering a drawing room car for the first time and determined not to betray the fact.—Exchange.

To Lady Correspondents.

Our young lady correspondents will confer a favor if they will write on only one side of the paper. We mean, of course, by this correspondence intended for the paper. As to the other, not intended for publication, we don't care if they write on all four sides and even across it.—Sylvania (Ga.) Telephone.

Probably on the Team.

"Such ignorance is inexcusable!" exclaimed Aunt Hypatia. "My nephew Percival has been going to college nearly three years, and when I asked him this morning whether he knew anything about Homer he said: 'Sure! A homer is a hit that's good for four bases.'"—Chicago Tribune.

Out of Date Now.

"Tommy, you have written this sentence, 'The pen is mightier than the sword,' and it is incorrect. How should it be changed?"

"Pen ought to be changed to typewriter, ma'am."—Chicago Tribune.

Willing to Try.

Harold—Couldn't you learn to love me? Amelia—No, but I'll try awfully hard. Papa has promised to send me abroad if my health breaks down from overstudy, you know.—London Scraps.

Men are the sport of circumstances when the circumstances seem the sport of men.—Byron.

For the Band.

The Thief River Falls Concert Band needs money for the purchase of some new instruments that are very much wanted. Two or three hundred dollars should be raised. The instruments needed are ones that individual members do not care to purchase as they are strictly band instruments and cannot be used except in the band. The band has made such wonderfully rapid progress in the last few months that it is now on a footing musically with the finest amateur band of the country.

A plan is being broached to send the band to the Winnipeg Fair next summer to enter the contest that is to be held there, and also to the State Fair at St. Paul. It would also be good policy to send the band to neighboring towns and cities on occasional trips. It must be conceded that Thief River Falls is one of the fastest growing and most progressive cities of the Northwest. What we want is that the greatest number of people possible should know this. This city has advantages to offer to prospective residents and business enterprises, and there can be no method of advertising this fact that equals the inspiring strains of a fine concert band. It is commonly understood that the progressive spirit and ability that leads cities to maintain fine musical organizations is an indication of prosperity, culture, means, and the general trend of social and business advance that accompanies well balanced progress under a liberal yet discreet city management.

If the band is to be sent out to advertise Thief River Falls it must be equiped with the best instruments that money can buy. The citizens of this city must see to it that the players are not in any way handicapped by poor instruments. This is a simple business proposition. It is a wise man who knows how to spend a dollar so as to make it bring back two, and while it is not the intention to put the matter in a purely mercenary light at all, there is no doubt but that every cent spent in equiping and maintaining the band in the best condition and sending it outside the city to play will bring a practical and definite return.

There will be a benefit for the band at the Lyceum on Jan. 20th, the entertainment being provided by a special company of singers, humorists. The Lyceum management shows the right spirit in thus helping to provide the band with funds, and the benefit should have a crowded house. On Jan. 21st there will be a supper and afterward a ball. The best of good things to eat will be offered, and the music for the ball will be the finest ever heard here. These benefits should be highly successful and furnish the needed finances. Now let everybody in Thief River Falls do everything possible to help make all these benefits a grand success.

The Conductor.

I had been suffering with a severe cold for several days, and was so hoarse, I could not speak above a whisper, Nov. 10th, I met one of Dr. Warner's agents on my train, he handed me a bottle of the White Wine of Tar Syrup, and one hour after taking the first dose my hoarseness commenced leaving me. In twenty-four hours my voice was quite clear and natural and my cold was cured. It is the best remedy I ever saw.

Respectfully,
Conductor Warren,

For Sale at Peoples Drug Store.

The need for the rigid national inspection of all foreign nursery stock, a matter to which attention has been called in these notes on several occasions, has been given great emphasis in the report which has been made to Secretary Wilson by Dr. L. O. Howard, chief of the federal bureau of entomology, who has recently returned from a tour of inspection in European countries, the primary purpose of which was to confer with representatives of the department of agriculture abroad, who are aiding in the importation of parasites and other natural enemies of the gypsy moth and brown tail moth, the latter pest being introduced into the country accidentally upon plants imported from Europe. Quarantine and inspection laws are in force in nearly all civilized countries of the world but the United States, which seems to be indifferent to the dangers which threaten its vast horticultural interests. Dr. Howard found that the inspection service in force in nursery exports from Holland was careful and reliable, that in France worthless and their certificates of inspection of as little value, while in England there was no inspection whatever of export nursery stock. When in addition to the above it is remembered that the very worst fungous pests have also been introduced on foreign stock it would seem the part of wisdom for horticulturists to unite in a demand for rigid inspection of all imported stock as well as that of stock shipped from one state to another. When such inspection laws are in force there will be some sense in attempts to stamp out the pests that inflict losses running into the millions upon the horticultural interests of the country."

FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR
Cures Colds Prevents Pneumonia

SOON TO BE FINISHED.

Viewers of the Big Grygla Ditch Are Now Assessing the Benefits.

Expected That Contract for This Work Will Be Let About First of February.

The appointing committee consisting of G. O. Cross of Warren, Minn.; John Simonson, Excel, Minn., and Chris. O. Hagen, Bemidji, have just completed their tour as viewers for the judicial ditch district, No. 11.

Their duty is to appraise properties along the ditch line and charge benefits and assess damages to every land owner with whom these ditches come in contact.

Over 400 miles are planned in this system. These 400 miles of ditches will drain 500 sections of land. The entire drainage shed is known as the Thief River Drainage shed. Every section will be thoroughly drained and fit for cultivation.

The land benefitted lies between Town 156 north and Range 30 west and extends west to Town 155, range 43, which covers a distance of over forty miles on an air line.

The benefitted townships in Beltrami county are Benville, Spruce Grove, Minnie, Lee, Hamre and Steenerson and three unorganized townships.

The benefitted townships in Marshall county are Thief Lake, Rollis, Veldt, Eckvold, District No. 1, East Valley, Ogder, Grand Plain, Moylan and Espelee.

No ditches will be less than sixteen feet in width and an average depth of from three to four feet. The main ditch will not be less than sixty feet wide and about ten feet deep.

This committee will report to Judge Grindeland at Warren about February 1 and work will be commenced in the early spring. It is estimated that to complete the entire drainage system will take about two years.

The committee have been at work all week at the Beltrami county court house going over maps and charts and compiling their report. It is said that hardly a quarter section in this part of the county will not be affected by this watershed. The ditches will be dug and the earth thrown to one side, on which will be the highway, thus making both a wagon road and a ditch at the same time.

The ditches will run along the section lines and the benefits derived by the property owners can hardly be overestimated. Much of the benefitted property is owned by the government and considerable by homesteaders.

All claims hereafter filed upon will be taxed with their share of damage expense and homesteaders will feel better satisfied and glad to pay a just assessment. With the digging of these ditches will come new wagon roads, and access into a country never before reached by team, means new homesteaders, new farms, good crops and a richer country.

Foley's Kidney Pills are healing and antiseptic and will restore health and strength. Sold by all druggists.

THE NEWS
BY JOHN W. EASTMAN

ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

According to the Bemidji Pioneer, A. H. Jester is to become a candidate for state senator. It seems to be a little early for a candidate to get in the field, and it may be a joke.

The appointment of H. A. Ryder as executive agent for the state game and fish commission is a popular one in Northern Minnesota. Mr. Ryder has been serving as deputy U. S. marshal in this section for a number of years and made many friends here.

After all we are kind of glad that Harry Ives is not to be removed as county treasurer. We have made our home in Red Lake county for fourteen years and we never knew Mr. Ives to miss an opportunity to run for office, but the only time he was successful was when the county commissioners elected him treasurer. Let him serve his term out, for the chances are he will never again secure an office.

The Duluth, Herald, the official organ for the kitchen cabinet, publishes the following special correspondence from St. Paul:

> The governor has permitted himself to become involved in the Red Lake county seat fight. Some weeks before Governer Johnson's death complaint was made to him that the county board had illegally diverted money from the ditch fund to purposes of building a new court house at Red Lake Falls to rebuild one destroyed by fire. The commissioners hastily put the money back, but meanwhile the governor ordered the public examiner to make an examination of the facts. Attorneys for Thief River Falls were not satisfied with the restitution, claiming that the county revenue fund was still short in spite of the return. Red Lake claimed an old shortage and denied responsibility for the admitted deficit in the fund, insisting that while possibly illegal the commissioners did it innocently and had made the amende honorable. Governor Johnson it is said, had decided that he would take no further action than to send the public examiner to the scene of the trouble. But the Thief River Falls partisans secured a second examination and it is on the showing made by this report that the governor has appointed Attorney Mathson of Ada as a special commissioner to take testimony on the charges. Thief River Falls citizens are said to be in the majority in the county, and there have been vague threats that unless something were done to secure the removal of the offending commissioners something would drop in the next Republican state convention.

Gov. Eberhardt is simply doing his duty and we believe that Gov. Johnson would have done the same had he lived, regardless of what John King's wishes in the matter were. The Red Lake county officials have done wrong and should be removed from office. That is all there is to it.

The Sunbeam accuses the News of butting-in on the affairs of Highlanding because we criticised the appointment of Andrew Ellingson as postmaster up there. We certainly had no such intentions. All we desired to do was to express our contempt for Ellingson. Although the Sunbeam claims that the appointment of Ellingson was a popular one, the facts show a different state of affairs. Many people from Highlanding have called at the NEWS office the past week and all have said that the appointment of Ellingson was a very unpopular one. The Farmers' Club of that township, which has a membership of thirty-seven, at a meeting held recently passed a unanimous resolution disapproving the appointment of Ellingson in very strong language and the members of the club further resolved that as long as Andrew Ellingson was the postmaster there they would refuse to take their mail from that office. The Sunbeam further says that it is trying to build a good, strong machine up there in the interest of Congressman Steenerson, which is a comendable work. If we were the congressman, however, we would do a little investigating. Mr. Steenerson has the appointment of seven postmasters in the township of Highlanding and is nursing two newspapers published there, yet he never has been able to receive a majority of the votes cast in that township. There must be something wrong with the Highlanding machine.

Strandquist.

Jonas Sjooine was taken with Appendicitis last evening and has gone to Warren to consult a physician. We all look for his quick recovery.

Mrs. E. C. Raymond and Miss Jorda Tell were visitors in Warren Saturday.

Miss Emily Bjornoss was a pleasant caller in town on Saturday. She formerly taught school here.

Albert Bjorkman returned home Sunday after having been away all fall.

The Lincoln Creamery association held its annual meeting last Tuesday, and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Pres., A. H. Lund; Vice Pres., L. O. Sjoquist; Secretary, L. G. Franzen; Treasurer, Lewis Anderson; Directors, P. A. Sundberg, O. O. Carlson, V. Lefrooth. A very liberal payment was made on the creamery this year, due to the most successful run they have ever experienced and the outlook for 1910 is much brighter than last year, and we all look for a very successful season. It was decided for the next year to pay St. Paul prices, also to pay every week at the creamery office. The creamery will open March 1st, and let us all co-operate and make this the best year of all.

Mr. Halvorson, a former resident of this town, is back for a few days visiting old friends and relatives.

Mr. Claude Lawthrope of Karlstad was a pleasant caller this week. We understand he is to reside here for a short while.

Charley Carlson has opened his famous hotel, and all boarders are congratulating themselves on being able to secure such good accomodations.

J. T. Goodbar, our genial depot agent, who has been away for some time, returned the first of the month, assuming his duties in the most satisfactory manner as before.

School Notes.

The following program was presented in the assembly room by the sophomore class last Friday afternoon; Address by the class president Agnes Wilson; recitation, "Raggedy Man," by Irene Chiddick; debate,—"Resolved that there should be an educational qualification for voting" negative led by Clarence Larson and affirmative by Olga Stenarud, the former winning; original story, Eugene Hance; vocal solo, Maurice Giller; dialogue selection from Merchant of Venice, Marjorie Grundy, Dora Clark and John Brudie, class paper by Irving Carter and John Brudie; song, chorus of girls.

The Misses Grindeland, Knoff, Sherbino, Hoff and Wilhelm, all former teachers in the city schools, called at various rooms last week.

The Central School will present an exhibit of all lines of school work on Thursday of this week at the Central building. Parents and friends particularly those of the Central district, are requested to attend during the afternoon, visiting the several rooms and viewing the exhibit. Samples of writing, drawing and, in fact, regular class work and exercises from all the pupils in every room will be classified for exhibition. The child's relative standing and merit in class may be judged from an examination of these exhibits.

A large number of visitors attended the forty minute literary and musical program presented at the High last Friday by the second year class. The freshmen will make their first appearance this week. Miss Anderson is class adviser for the latter group of students.

The basket ball teams, both girls and boys, announce a couple of match games between teams from the Junior and Senior classes for Thursday evening of this week at the roller rink, to which an admission of ten cents will be charged.

Beginning pupils cannot enter class only at stated periods when classes to care for them can be organized. The primary rooms are now badly crowded and have been all year, consequently small pupils would better not enter until April first, when arrangements will be made to care for them. Stragglers dropping in at odd times demoralize the class organization and receive no benefit for themselves.

Superintendent Botha of Hallock spent last Tuesday visiting local schools.

This week closes the first semester in the high school. Final examinations for half year subjects are being held and the new program for the second half will be announced next Monday morning.

How Pete Engelstad Makes Money.

In the table below will be found some of the most interesting figures that could possibly be published in this county at present. They are furnished by Peter Engelstad of the town of Rocksbury showing the amount of production of his dairy herd, consisting of 24 cows, during the month of December. He also shows the actual expenditure in producing this quantity of dairy-product. The name of each cow is given and is assigned a number, and the time of her freshening is also given so that an actual estimate can be ascertained from these figures.

In speaking with Mr. Engelstad in regard to this matter, the Editor asked this question: "What do you consider the most important part of your report?" Mr. Engelstad modestly replied: "I do not consider any part of the report important. It's only importance lies in the fact that Mr. Johnson, Mr. Nelson, Mr. Hanson and almost anybody else could show a report equally as good as this if they would keep a record of what their cows were doing, and keep a strict book account with each cow."

This is only showing what can be done in dairying in Red Lake County by any man who has a quarter-section of land, and enough energy to use it.

Now, what does it cost to produce this amount of milk for that particular month? Let us see.

These 24 cows consume on an average of about 45 lbs. of Silage per day each estimated at $1.75 per ton,	$29.29
Estimated 10 lbs. of hay per day, each at $6.00 per ton,	22.32
Grain fed at the rate of 1 to 2 lbs. of milk,	60.00
Makes a total for grain and roughage	$111.61

According to the value of butterfat at local Creamery, those 24 cows gave an average return of $2.13 for each one dollar's worth of feed for butterfat alone. Cows are kept in the barn all the time with the exception that they are turned out for watering once a day. A heater is kept in the tank to take the chill out of the water. When taken into consideration that quite a few of those cows are shippers having called in March and April, the average return is good. Of course more is realized from selling milk and cream for retail which I have done in the past by hauling butterfat to creamery, but nevertheless my check at creamery would have been some over $200.00, if it had been brought there. My actual sales of milk and cream from the farm for the month of December is $277.10. Of this amount $252.59 goes to Knox Dairy, $18.00 to Creamery and balance to parties in city. The above publication is simply a reply to some parties who ask me if dairing does pay in this locality where winters are so long. The above demonstration shows that it does pay.

DEATH OF A PIONEER

J. W. Wallin, Pioneer Citizen of Thief River Falls, Is Dead.

Funeral Services to Be Held Today at Two O'Clock from M. E. Church.

A telegram received in the city Tuesday morning from Kellihor announced the death of J. W. Wallin, one of the pioneer citizens of Thief River Falls. No particulars were received, but as Mr. Wallin was quite advanced in years and had been in poor health of late, his death was not unexpected.

The remains will be brought to this city for burial and placed in the Greenwood cemetary beside his wife who died a number of years ago. The funeral services will be held today at two o'clock from the Methodist church, of which the deceased had long been a member.

Mr. Wallin came to this section in the early 80's before there was a Thief River Falls. He was postmaster and conducted a small general store at Rockstaad, a mile south of this city, for a few years. In 1883 when the postoffice of Thief River Falls was established (Frank H. Kratka being appointed postmaster) the postoffice at Rockstad was discontinued and Mr. Wallin removed to this city and conducted a general store here for a number of years. He was elected treasurer when Thief River Falls was organized as a city and held this office until a few years ago when he removed to his daughter's home near Kellihor, where he died.

The deceased was the father of five children—three girls and two boys—all of whom are living. They are: Ella, Hattie, (now Mrs. Monroe) and Florence, of Kellihor, and Henry and Otto, of Everett, Wash.

Notice.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Farmer's Co-operative Creamery of Thief River Falls will be held at the Antlers club rooms on Saturday, the 29th of January at 11 o'clock a. m.

Dinner will be served in the basement of the Norwegian Synod church.

One of the World's Greatest Remedies.

Mr. S. P. Mason, of Markle, Ind., writes:—I have been in the drug trade twenty years and have handled your White Wine of Tar fifteen years. I have never sold a remedy that equals it. Fifteen years ago, I bought a bill of this medicine from your agent. The first bottle I put out was for Asthma in the case of Jas. Ledbetter of this town. The Dr. said he could not live. One bottle of Warner's White Wine of Tar cured him and he is still living. I think the world should know more of this wonderful remedy.

Meeting of Subscribers to Stock in the Co-Operative Store Is Called.

Some Two Hundred Shares Have Been Sold at $100 per Share.

A meeting of the subscribers to the stock of the Thief River Falls Co-Operative Store, organized under the auspices of the Right Relationship League by W. H. Hall, a gentleman in the employ of this association as organizer, is called for Wednesday, January 19, at 1 p. m. The meeting is to be held in the Antlers Club rooms and is for the purpose of completing the organization of said company.

We are not familiar with the rules and regulations under which this co-operative store is to be organized, but next week we hope to give a thorough write-up of the association. There are a large number throughout the United States and they are said to be very successful. Those, who have subscribed for stock are for the most part farmers, but there are quite a number of business men and others in the city, who are large buyers of merchandise, who have taken stock. In all about 200 shares have been sold at $100 per share, so that the association will start out with a capital of over $20,000.

The new company has purchased the mercantile business of O. J. Schei & Co., and will probably be running this store inside of a few weeks. Officers, directors and a manager is to be elected at the meeting to be held next Wednesday.

How Pete Engelstad Makes Money.

In the table below will be found some of the most interesting figures that could possibly be published in this county at present. They are furnished by Peter Engelstad of the town of Rocksbury showing the amount of production of his dairy herd, consisting of 24 cows, during the month of December. He also shows the actual expenditure in producing this quantity of dairy product. The name of each cow is given and is assigned a number, and the time of her freshening is also given so that an actual estimate can be ascertained from these figures.

In speaking with Mr. Engelstad in regard to this matter, the Editor asked this question: "What do you consider the most important part of your report?" Mr. Engelstad modestly replied: "I do not consider any part of the report important. It's only importance lies in the fact that Mr. Johnson, Mr. Nelson, Mr. Hanson and almost anybody else could show a report equally as good as this if they would keep a record of what their cows were doing, and keep a strict book account with each cow."

This is only showing what can be done in dairying in Red Lake County by any man who has a quarter-section of land, and enough energy to use it.

Now, what does it cost to produce this amount of milk for that particular month? Let us see.

Estimated 10 lbs. of hay per day, each at $6.00 per ton,	22.32
Makes a total for grain and roughage	$111.61

According to the value of butterfat at local Creamery, those 24 cows gave an average return of $2.13 for each one dollar's worth of feed for butterfat alone. Cows are kept in the barn all the time with the exception that they are turned out for watering once a day. A heater is kept in the tank to take the chill out of the water. When taken into consideration that quite a few of those cows are shippers having calfed in March and April, the average return is good. Of course more is realized from selling milk and cream for retail which I have done in the past by hauling butterfat to creamery, but nevertheless my check at creamery would have been some over $200.00, if it had been brought there. My actual sales of milk and cream from the farm for the month of December is $277.10. Of this amount $252.59 goes to Knox Dairy, $18.00 to Creamery and balance to parties in city. The above publication is simply a reply to some parties who ask me if dairing does pay in this locality where winters are so long. The above demonstration shows that it does pay.

DEATH OF A PIONEER

J. W. Wallin, Pioneer Citizen of Thief River Falls, Is Dead.

Funeral Services to Be Held Today at Two O'Clock from M. E. Church.

A telegram received in the city Tuesday morning from Kellihor announced the death of J. W. Wallin, one of the pioneer citizens of Thief River Falls. No particulars were received, but as Mr. Wallin was quite advanced in years and had been in poor health of late, his death was not unexpected.

The remains will be brought to this city for burial and placed in the Greenwood cemetary beside his wife who died a number of years ago. The funeral services will be held today at two o'clock from the Methodist church, of which the deceased had long been a member.

Mr. Wallin came to this section in the early 80's before there was a Thief River Falls. He was postmaster and conducted a small general store at Rockstaad, a mile south of this city, for a few years. In 1883 when the postoffice of Thief River Falls was established (Frank H. Kratka being appointed postmaster), the postoffice at Rockstad was discontinued and Mr. Wallin removed to this city and conducted a general store here for a number of years. He was elected treasurer when Thief River Falls was organized as a city and held this office until a few years ago when he removed to his daughter's home near Kellihor, where he died.

The deceased was the father of five children—three girls and two boys—all of whom are living. They are: Ella, Hattie, (now Mrs. Monroe) and Florence, of Kellihor, and Henry and Otto, of Everett, Wash.

Notice.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Farmer's Co-operative Creamery of Thief River Falls will be held at the Antlers club rooms on Saturday, the 29th of January at 11 o'clock a. m.

Dinner will be served in the basement of the Norwegian Synod church.

One of the World's Greatest Remedies.

Mr. S. P. Mason, of Markle, Ind., writes:—I have been in the drug trade twenty years and have handled your White Wine of Tar fifteen years. I have never sold a remedy that equals it. Fifteen years ago, I bought a bill of this medicine from your agent. The first bottle I put out was for Asthma in the case of Jas. Ledbetter of this town. The Dr. said he could not live. One bottle of Warner's White Wine of Tar cured him and he is still living. I think the world should know more of this wonderful remedy.

Meeting of Subscribers to Stock in the Co-Operative Store Is Called.

Some Two Hundred Shares Have Been Sold at $100 per Share.

A meeting of the subscribers to the stock of the Thief River Falls Co-Operative Store, organized under the auspices of the Right Relationship League by W. H. Hall, a gentleman in the employ of this association as organizer, is called for Wednesday, January 19, at 1 p. m. The meeting is to be held in the Antlers Club rooms and is for the purpose of completing the organization of said company.

We are not familiar with the rules and regulations under which this co-operative store is to be organized, but next week we hope to give a thorough write-up of the association. There are a large number throughout the United States and they are said to be very successful. Those, who have subscribed for stock are for the most part farmers, but there are quite a number of business men and others in the city, who are large buyers of merchandise, who have taken stock. In all about 200 shares have been sold at $100 per share, so that the association will start out with a capital of over $20,000.

The new company has purchased the mercantile business of O. J. Schei & Co., and will probably be running this store inside of a few weeks. Officers, directors and a manager is to be elected at the meeting to be held next Wednesday.

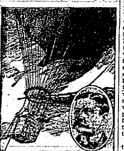
DID ANDREE REACH THE POLE?

Finding of the Explorer's Balloon at Reindeer Lake and the Fact That It Came from the North, Leads to the Belief That Peary Was Not the First Man to Discover the Pole—Party To Be Sent After the Andree Relics.

SWEDEN.

Even at this late hour the name of the daring explorer, Andree, will come up in connection with the still unsolved question as to where he met his death when seeking the north pole, in a balloon in 1907. A dispatch from Prince Alberts, Sask., dated Jan. 4 says: "The finding of Andree's balloon at Reindeer lake in the Arctic circle 900 miles north of here, is thoroughly believed by trappers and prospectors, many of whom have spent a lifetime in the northern wilds. They know that when such a story is circulated among the Indians that there must be some truth in it. There came from the north a Hudson Bay company trader, and he confirms the story received recently, and adds many interesting details, which are so confirmatory that a party will be sent back to bring the relics. According to the story told by the Indians around Fort Good Hope the balloon was seen drifting from the north, so it is believed that Andree and not Peary was the first one to reach the pole. The trader says the Indians have several books which were found in the basket of the balloon, and from what he has heard these are the records kept by Andree on his trip across the frozen northland. The Danish consul in Montreal telegraphed to this city several times regarding the fitting out of an expedition to bring back the relics of the explorers, and it is stated that the Danish government has agreed to pay all the expenses of such a trip and provide men who are well versed in exploration work. Reindeer lake, where remnants of the balloon are now lying, is almost due north of here, and can only be reached by dogsled in winter and canoe in summer.



S. A. ANDREE AND HIS BALLOON.

The palace Rosendal will be turned into a Bernadotte museum during the coming summer. It will be set aside for the Bernadottes exclusively and everything of interest from the standpoint of culture, which happened during the time of the Bernadottes will be placed on exhibition there. King Oscar has left a most interesting collection and there are also some very interesting things since the times of the first Bernadotte that sat on Sweden's throne.

By means of telephone connection between Malmo and Nassjo, it will soon be possible to establish telephone connections from one end of the country to the other, that is, from the extreme northern end of Norrland down to Malmo. The telephone line, which will be a direct one, may exclude Stockholm altogether.

Hjalmar Branting, the well known socialist leader and editor, has resigned from the so-called "Frisinnade Klubben."

The "Haupstelle Deutcher Arbeitergeberverbande" have sent a telegram of congratulation to the Swedish Employer's association, expressing their admiration for the way the Swedish strike was handled.

The International Mercantile Treaty which exists between Sweden and Germany, has now been extended to Dec. 1, 1911.

During the month of November last year, there emigrated from Sweden to foreign ports, 1,281 persons, while there were only 484 who left during the same month in 1908. From Jan. 1, 1909 to Nov. 1, the same year, there emigrated from the country not less than 15,129 persons—9,445 men and 5,651 women—while in the previous year there were all told only 6,802 persons, who left the country. This alarming increase in emigration is everything possible is being done to causing no end of worry in Sweden and induce people to remain at home, but it seems that this is impossible. The one fact which stands out pre-eminently is, that nearly all who leave the country come to America and the American and Canadian northwest are just now receiving thousands of Swedish emigrants. A great many, however, remain in the east for not all the people who leave Sweden nowadays come from the agricultural districts. Fully as many come from Stockholm and other large cities where labor conditions have grown intolerable. Many of those who emigrate say that they have no guarantee that the great strike movement in Sweden will cease and rather than accept the uncertain conditions at home, they prefer to take chances in the great northwest of America.

NORWAY.

The population of Norway at present is estimated at 2,350,000. Owing to the heavy emigration to foreign lands, the increase in population during the past five years has only been a slight one.

Miss Agnes Hansen, who recently made her debut at the National theater, has met with splendid success and is now taking the role of "Aida," to the great admiration of all who go to hear her. The papers have been lavish in their praise of her.

Thomas Krag's production entitled "Mester Magius," is heralded as being the hit of the season. It is having a great run now in Christiania and will soon be given in all the leading cities of the country.

Dr. Otto Schultz has been appointed head physician at the Voxenkollen sanatarium. He is considered by many as one of the country's leading physicians.

The people of Trondhjem are taking a hold of the question of reforming young men and women in earnest. Trondhjem has a somewhat shady record, but there is perhaps a more vigorous reform element in that city than in many other cities in Scandinavia. During the past year there were so many young men and women that were ruined by licentious living that the "saedlighetsforening" felt constrained to take hold of matters in earnest. A large mass meeting was held a few days ago, which was attended by a large number of people to whom statistics of an appalling character were referred. The society will go to work at once and seek to protect the young people of the city from a repetition of such disgraceful things as have happened there during the past two years.

Librarian Arne Kildahl of Washington, has been appointed the official librarian at the Bergen National library.

Storms have rendered much damage to shipping during the past few months and exporters and shippers are complaining very generally.

Thousands of people are rejoicing over the news that Bjornstjerne Bjornson is steadily improving and that his strength is increasing from day to day. His closest friends and physicians are no longer alarmed over his condition. Mr. Bjornson is still in Paris where he is under the care of the best and most skillful physicians.

It is a singular fact that the Norwegian government received $200,000 more from the import duties on liquor during the month of November last than during the same montht in 1908. The rise is said to be due chiefly to the fact that certain laws passed by the last storthing closed many large distilleries in Norway.

During the past ten years it is a noteworthy thing that English capital is seeking channels of investments in Norway. Thus far, it seems that English capitalists have been buying up hunting and forest reserves and have also invested heavily in mining properties. Many of the latter have failed, however. An English syndicate has now made arrangements to erect a hotel in Christiania. The Grand hotel, long the leading hostelry in the city is not to be outdone. The stockholders have voted to spend $225,000 on the house, remodeling and practically rebuilding it in two sections, so that half the present capacity of the hotel will continue in use during the period of building.

John Lange of Bergen has drawn up a legacy of 25,000 crowns, the interest of which will be used to help deserving sailors and firemen and others, who have been active in saving human lives. Another business man of prominence will donate 10,000 crowns which it is reported will be added to this legacy.

DENMARK.

Dr. Cook's great "joker" is the talk of all Denmark and some people are having much fun at the expense of the learned professors at the university. If Cook should show up in Copenhagen, there would, however, be lots of trouble in store for him and he would not be able to make his escape from the country without encountering perhaps, a severe grilling. Some say that he should be under arrest now. A dispatch dated Copenhagen, Jan. 4 says: "The announcement by Walter Lounsdale, private secretary of Dr. Cook, that he had again been in communication with the Brooklyn "explorer," has given rise to the hope that Cook will yet come to Copenhagen and personally appear before the committee that recently rejected his claims to the discovery of the north pole. While there is no disposition on the part of the committee to reopen the case, there is a desire to have the doctor explain and to attempt to clear up some discrepancie that arise between the statements made by him when he first arrived in Copenhagen on his return from the arctic and those which are contained in the proof of his claims.

The quarrel between Rear Admiral Dorresen and Vice Admiral Sparre has been settled at last by a court of honor and the result is that Sparre will have to step out. The quarrel which is well nigh an historic one dates back for several years and has been very demoralizing to the navy. Both pledged themselves beforehand to abide by the decision of the court of honor, thereby precluding a renewal of the fight. People all over the country have been taking sides in the controversy, but it is a good thing that the matter has been settled at last.

CONGRESSIONAL DOINGS.

By far the most important bill affecting the public lands of the United States that has been offered since the enactment of the free homes law was introduced in the senate by Senator Nelson of Minnesota. The measure, which is understood to be approved by President Taft, proposes a new policy in handling coal, oil and timber lands over which the federal government exercises jurisdiction.

Resolutions looking to the investigation of the general land office and the forest service growing out of the differences between Secretary Ballinger and Forester Pinchot were introduced in both houses of congress and while neither was acted upon it is understood they will be adopted by both houses within the next few days and that the inquiry will begin soon.

Speaker Cannon and his organization in the house were administered a body blow when the Republican insurgents, assisted by the Democrats, amended the resolution providing for an investigation into the Ballinger-Pinchot controversy by providing that the committee of inquiry shall be named by the house itself instead of by the speaker.

Representative Humphrey of Washington has introduced in the house a bill providing for ship subsidy by the United States government, which measure is understood to have the approval of President Taft and the administration.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

Lemon and vanilla extracts are the next things which W. E. Johnson, government Indian agent, is going after in the reservation counties of the northern part of Minnesota, where he has just closed nearly sixty saloons. Mr. Johnson has found by long experience that the closing of saloons and the shutting off of whisky itself is invariably followed by some substitute which "Poor Lo" resorts to. In Minnesota it is the flavoring extracts, according to W. G. Calderwood, secretary of the state Prohibition committee.

It cost $1,567,203.96 to administer Minneapolis city affairs in 1909, according to figures prepared by City Statistican H. A. Stuart and approved by City Controller Dan C. Brown. The amount available for current expenses for the year, including the tax levy and the miscellaneous revenue, reached $1,552,066.

The Park hotel at St. James has been purchased by Mayor B. W. Utman of Hudson, Wis., for $25,000. It is understood that physicians and surgeons are associated with Utman, who will turn the property into a first class hospital.

All the important ice companies in St. Paul are now merged into one company, the People's Ice company having just purchased for $125,000 the properties, assets and good-will of the Northwestern Ice and Fuel company.

The public schools at Bessemer have been closed because of the prevalence among children of scarlet fever. Some forty cases are reported and about a dozen deaths so far.

Levi Willicuts has been nominated for another term as collector of customs at Duluth on recommendation of Senators Nelson and Clapp.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Oscar Johnson, a young machinist in the employ of the shops at the Shenango mine, on the Mesaba range, met a terrible death as a result of his clothing becoming entangled in the shafting. His coat was caught and he was hurled around the shaft, striking the floor with great force at each revolution. Johnson was dead before the machinery could be stopped.

Owen McEneany, chief tea inspector in the United States customs service in Minnesota, was killed when he fell down stairs at his home in St. Paul. Death was due to a fracture of the skull. Mr. McEneany started down the stairs in the dark, lost his footing and fell, striking his head against the door jam at the bottom.

Carl G. Palmer, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Palmer of St. Peter, died suddenly. A few days previous a slight abrasion on his lower lip became infected. The poison spread rapidly and finally affected the optic nerve, producing septic meningitis and causing death. The young man was twenty-two years old.

As John Skog, sixty-five years old, a tailor, started to enter his workshop in the Century building at St. Paul he plunged forward through the door and, when picked up a few minutes later, was dead. A stroke of apoplexy is thought to have been the cause of his death.

Henry W. Smith of Moorhead, fifty years old, one of the oldest employes on the Northern Pacific railroad, was instantly killed at Dilworth. He was cleaning a switch when the switch engine ran him down, smashing his head, breaking both legs and cutting off an arm.

Lish Creech, fifteen-year-old son of J. S. Creech, while driving to his home on Maple hill from Grand Marais, froze his feet and nearly lost his life. He was numb and unconscious when Peter Johnson, walking homeward, overtook him. He was revived.

The two buildings of the St. Boniface parochial school at Melrose were totally destroyed by fire, entailing a damage of $5,000. Five hundred children lost their books, overcoats and wraps, but escaped injury.

Henry F. Miller, a prosperous young farmer residing near Paynesville, was fatally crushed by being caught under a building which he and his neighbors were moving.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

George W. Caward, a pioneer and prominent business man of Steele county, died suddenly at Owatonna. He had gone to a train with his son Neil, an advertising man, when he suddenly became ill. He was taken to a hospital in a cab and died within ten minutes after reaching the institution. Mr. Caward was seventy years of age.

John L. Wilson, aged eighty-nine, the father of St. Cloud and one of the oldest pioneers in that section of the state, is dead. Mr. Wilson reached St. Cloud in 1853. He had lived there continuously and up to the time of his retirement was prominently associated with everything that led to the upbuilding of the city and county.

James P. Erckenbrack, one of Otter Tail county's pioneers and most widely known citizens, is dead. Mr. Erckenbrack was seventy-six years of age and as a boy drove horses on the tow path of the Erie canal, which passed by his home.

STEEL PLANT AT DULUTH

Appropriation Made for Purchase of Building Equipment.

The United States Steel corporation has made an appropriation of $275,000 for the purchase of locomotives, locomotive cranes, concrete mixers, pumping outfits, hoisting engines, derricks, etc., preliminary to the work of construction of the plant of the Minnesota Steel company in Duluth. This equipment will be assembled as quickly as possible, and is necessary before the actual work of construction can be begun in the spring.

A force of draftsmen is working steadily on the plans for the steel plant, and work at the site is in progress where the terminal facilities are being established; the bridge is being completed across the St. Louis river. Two hundred or more men are now employed there at the present time and the heavy work of excavating and installing of foundations will be begun as soon as the necessary equipment, provision for which has just been made, is delivered.

CHARLES M'ILRATH IS DEAD

Was Auditor of Minnesota During the Civil War.

Word has been received in St. Paul of the death in Berkeley, Cal., of Charles McIlrath, state auditor of Minnesota from 1861 to 1873, and during those years one of the most prominent and active public officials who have ever held office since the state was admitted.

Mr. McIlrath left Minnesota shortly after his retirement from the office of auditor in 1873 to engage in business in New York and his name is scarcely known to the present generation of public men. To older residents of St. Paul he is remembered as the organizer and first commissioner of the state land department, founder of the public school, state university and agricultural college funds and as the man who did more than any other to maintain the financial integrity of Minnesota during the reconstruction days following the Civil war and during the national financial panic of 1873.

FATAL FIRE AT MINNEAPOLIS

Sleeper in Livery Stable Overcome by Smoke and Fumes.

Albert Miller, twenty-seven years old, was suffocated in a small fire in Bardin's livery stable at Minneapolis and died on his way to the city hospital.

The watchman was aroused by the cries of Miller, who had been sleeping on the second floor, and called to him to jump, but he did not.

When the fire was extinguished Miller was found dying, having been overcome by smoke and fumes.

Forty horses were rescued.

CLERK AND MONEY MISSING

East Grand Forks Official Said to Be Short in His Accounts.

As a result of investigation the outgoing city council of East Grand Forks has just made on the books of former City Clerk C. P. Zimmerman it is found that there is a shortage of $4,500, accruing during the past year, being mostly money received through the city's lighting system.

Freezing With Cash in Clothes.

With $50 in money fastened in her dress Mrs. Theresa Palmer of St. Paul, aged seventy-seven years, was found suffering from exposure, her fingers and toes frozen. She was lying on a scantily covered bed in a shack where she has lived alone since the death of her husband, Paul Palmer. She was taken to the city hospital, seriously ill, and died a few hours later.

St. Paul Pioneer Dies Suddenly.

Dudley Finch, aged fifty-seven years, died suddenly of heart disease at his home in St. Paul. He was conversing with members of the household when he suddenly collapsed, expiring before medical aid could reach him. Mr. Finch was a pioneer St. Paul merchant, having been one of the founders of the firm of Lauphor, Finch & Skinner, fur dealers.

St. Paul Man a Suicide.

Andrew Olson, an employe of the American Hoist and Derrick company at St. Paul, committed suicide by drawing a razor across his throat from ear to ear. Olson had been drinking heavily during the past two or three days. It is thought that he was struck with remorse and killed himself, as he had not been known to be despondent.

Checked White Plague.

The city of Duluth made a big advance the past year in the fight against the white plague. There were eighty-nine deaths from consumption last year, as compared with 105 in 1908. City Health Commissioner Patton is much gratified, and says that this year will show a further gain.

Farmer Ends His Life.

Nels P. Person, a retired farmer sixty years of age, residing near the village of Hugo, in Washington county, committed suicide by shooting himself in the right temple. Despondency resulting from the recent death of his wife is supposed to have been the cause.

Fire Destroys Stock Food Plant.

Fire destroyed the plant of the Gold Coin Stock Food company at St. Paul, causing a loss estimated at $50,000, only partly covered by insurance. Only four walls are standing, for the three-story structure was completely gutted and the contents destroyed.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

UPHELD BY SUPREME COURT

Suit Against the Western Union for Unpaid Taxes.

The state of Minnesota won a distinct victory when the state supreme court denied the appeal of the Western Union Telegraph company in its suit to evade a valuation of $1,000,000 assessed against its property in Minnesota by the state board of equalization.

The action was for the recovery of taxes on this valuation for the years 1901 to 1905.

As a result of the supreme court's affirmation of the lower court's findings the state is richer by about $50,000.

The only modification of the district court's findings is the elimination of interest taxed against principal and penalty, amounting to about $5,000.

The telegraph company resisted the increase in its valuation from the time it was imposed by the board. It claimed that $600,000 represented its taxable holdings in Minnesota and refused to pay taxes on anything above that amount. It also attacked the law divorcing the telephone companies from the list of those to be taxed on a valuation basis and putting them on a gross earnings basis, while not including the telegraph companies. The telegraph company made the point that the two were similar and no discrimination should exist between them. This is the supreme court refuses to agree with.

The company's representatives announced their intention of carrying the case to the supreme court of the United States.

ATTACK CORPORATION LAW

St. Paul Business Men Start Crusade Against Federal Statute.

Opposition to the federal corporation tax is taking concrete form at St. Paul and results are predicted by corporation interests of that city. The efforts of those opposed to the tax will be confined to securing an amendment which will do away with the publicity features of the law. The attempt to obtain the amendment will be made at this congress and it is hoped to have it in time to protect the records which will be turned into the government next March.

It is also planned to bring the matter to the attention of the courts and an attempt will be made to prove the law unconstitutional. Opinions by several lawyers are that the law will be thrown out by the court. That will take a year or more for action. No suit can be brought until the government starts to collect the tax.

THE WHITE SLAVE TRAFFIC

Efforts Being Made to Wipe It Out at Duluth.

The district grand jury of St. Louis county, meeting at Duluth, found an indictment against Fred Hazen, a young man who has been around Duluth for some months, under the new law which is designed to wipe out the "white slave" traffic.

He was arrested a few days ago, charged with improper relations with Ester Mack, a girl whom Hazen brought to Duluth from Bayfield, Wis. Hazen has just started to serve a three months' sentence for a statutory offense and the Mack girl was the principal witness.

The indictment of Hazen is the first to be made under the law to stamp out the "white slave" traffic.

WOMEN HAVE A CLOSE CALL

Two Nearly Asphyxiated by Gas in St. Paul.

Mrs. S. J. Ealey and her sister, Miss Carrie Wolf, of St. Paul had a narrow escape from death by gas poison. They had been in the gas filled room from 6 o'clock in the morning until 7 o'clock in the evening, when the husband, S. J. Ealey, returned from work. Both women were found on the floor, both almost dead. Dr. F. J. Halloran was called and after four hours of hard work he stated that Mrs. Ealey would probably recover, but that Miss Wolf was still in a grave condition.

The accident is supposed to be the result of an error on the part of Mrs. Ealey.

Frozen to Death in Storm.

Joseph Bineck, a stonemason, living near Owatonna, was found frozen to death on the railroad tracks south of the pumping station. The body had evidently been lying exposed to the cold since early in the previous night, the clothing being frozen to the body. It is supposed that Bineck started from down town to his home and, becoming confused in the blinding snow storm became exhausted and sank into the snow.

Negro Pugilist Stabbed.

Walter Whitehead, the Duluth negro heavyweight pugilist, was seriously stabbed by Ralph Jones, also colored, in a quarrel over a crap game. Whitehead was taken to the hospital, where his condition is said to be critical. Jones is being held. He says Whitehead assaulted him.

Something Coming In

If you ADVERTISE in THIS PAPER. It will LOOK GOOD to you. Try it out NOW.

Strictly speaking, school time comes but once. On this account both boys and girls should be encouraged in every way to make the most of it.

Meat scraps and milk for the flock of laying hens are excellent substitutes for the insect food which they get at range during the summer months, and if eggs are expected of them they should be provided with both.

A fact that is not generally known is that popcorn may be too dry to pop well, just as it is often too moist. In this case its popping qualities are improved by dipping it in water and then drying it out quickly just before it is to be used.

A rather curious physiological fact in connection with tuberculosis is that a cow having the disease does not transmit it to her calf at birth. This makes it possible to keep her offspring from contracting it by feeding it sterilized milk or putting it with a cow which is free from the disease. By doing this the calves of valuable full blooded dams have been saved for useful careers.

While the brown Swiss breed of cattle do not equal any of the four leading dairy breeds in milk and butter production, they still are making a very satisfactory showing for dairy purposes. They are not only docile and easily handled, but possess large frames and beefy quarters. Four of these cows owned by the Michigan Agricultural college showed a milk yield for the past year ranging from 8,120 pounds of milk producing 400 pounds of butter to 10,158 pounds of milk giving 457 pounds of butter.

In view of the killing freeze in the fore part of October the corn belt farmer in sections where the freeze was heavy has no more important task in hand during the next few weeks than that of looking up and testing his supply of seed corn for next year. Maybe enough corn can be secured from shocks in fields which were cut before the freeze, yet there are many who will have to send to a distance for seed which will germinate. In any event the job of securing seed of good vitality should not be postponed until next March or April, when the scramble for seed will be fierce and when a lot of tail enders are going to get left.

Perhaps the largest authenticated yield of corn ever recorded was that produced by John Sundberg, president of the Iowa Corn Growers' association, the past season, the amount being 153 bushels and 55 pounds from a single acre, or just five times the average annual yield. A justice of the peace made affidavit that he personally measured the acre of ground and weighed the corn. The patch from which the corn was taken was an acre and a half in extent and produced in all 224 bushels. The owner says it took seven years to get such a yield, the result being in part due to proper care of the soil and thick planting and as largely to continual selection and breeding up of the seed corn. There is something in this record for corn growers to think about.

There are many towns in the more recently settled portions of the west and some in sections not so recently settled which pride themselves much on their push and enterprise that act all too literally upon that Scriptural injunction, "Let the dead past bury its dead," and allow their burial grounds to remain in a shabby, unkempt condition that is a positive disgrace not only to the dead, but the living chiefly. There is mighty little excuse for such neglect, for the matter could be remedied easily were the care of the cemetery placed in the hands of an association of wide awake, sympathetic women, who, in addition to annual dues could pull on the community in one way and another for financial aid sufficient to give the cemetery the care it ought to have.

The Illinois state board of health has lately issued an order which provides that all cows in the state must be subjected to the tuberculin test and those found affected branded with a letter "T" upon the right ear. The enforcement of this regulation, it is thought, will put a stop to the traffic in tuberculous cows and the sale of milk from them an offense which is punishable with a heavy fine. Only those animals which are provided with an inspection and health certificate countersigned by the state veterinarian may be kept to furnish a milk supply. In the past the diseased cows have been sold to unscrupulous dairymen and the polluted, germ laden milk peddled for the consumption of little children. Other states should follow the lead of Illinois in this most commendable plan for conserving the public health.

An experiment is being tried by the Southwest Texas Truck Growers' association along the line of socialistic production that will be watched with much interest by people living elsewhere. In brief, they have pooled their affairs in the matter of growing onions and now buy their seed direct from the Canary islands at a cost of $2.75 a pound where before it cost them $4 through the middleman. The sales agent after making a careful survey of the market allots so many acres to each member of the association, taking into account in this last year's output. In marketing the crop all the onions are mixed together and then sorted by efficient inspectors, who also take special pains to see that they are carefully packed. While the growers all receive the same price for their onions, they are held in duty bound to raise those of the best possible quality.

Strictly First Class in Every Way

Exaggerated Cruelty.

A well known gentleman took horse exercise daily, accompanied by a magnificent bloodhound, until he conceived an enthusiasm for cycling, when he altered the program by leaving the bloodhound at home and taking as his companion a fine dachshund.

The pair were passing through a village recently when a laboring youth remarked to his "pal:"

"If Oi wor proime minister Oi'd put a stop ter this 'ere bicyclin' business."

"Why?" queried the other.

"Cos it owt ter be stopped, if only for th' sake o' that dog as is a-puffin' along behind theer," rejoined the first speaker. "It ain't sport; it's cruelty to hanimals."

His companion disagreed and said he thought the dog benefited by the exercise.

"Exercise!" retorted the other scornfully. "D'ye call that exercise? You never saw that dog afore 'is master started bikin', did yer?"

"No, I didn't."

"Well," said the youth, "'e wor one o' th' finest bloodhounds you iver clapped heyes on, an' wot's 'e now? 'Is body's dwindled away to nowt, while 'is legs is worn clean darn to th' stumps. Oi repeat, it's cruelty ter hanimals."—London Bystander.

Got His Money's Worth.

A lady palmist was recently prosecuted, and an amusing incident was noted in connection with the case. One of the witnesses called by the police was an individual who did not appear to be overburdened with intelligence. During a smart cross examination defendant's counsel asked him:

"On first going into the room did you pay a shilling fee to the defendant?"

"Yes," was the reply.

"What did she tell you in return for the money?"

"Oh," said the witness, "she towld me lots o' things, some on 'em true, some on 'em half true an' some on 'em less."

"Now," continued the counsel after the laughter had died away, "this is the point I wish to get at: Was there any attempt at imposition? Did you lady impose upon you at all?"

"Oh, dear, no!" was the response. "I knowed it wor all gammon, so there couldn't be no imposition. Besides, it wor a bad shillin' as I guv her, to start with!"—London Tit-Bits.

Marriage In Picardy.

A Picardy custom, founded on the broad basis of common sense as well as the idea of complete partnership, is that which puts a new bride through a kind of examination in the trade of her husband. It may, of course, have become something of a burlesque, and the bride may purposely show less dexterity than she need. Still, the consideration of the wife as a helpmate is very clearly shown in the performance. If the young wife's husband be a farmer, she will be asked to harness a horse and cart and to harrow a small piece of land. If her choice has fallen on an ironworker, she must hammer a piece of iron; if on a miller, she must measure out wheat from a basket at the church door; if on a smith, she is supposed to be able to strike the anvil; if on a sailor, she has to clean and mend some netting, and so on with the other occupations. Evidently the keeping of an idle wife is not understood in Picardy.—T. P.'s London Weekly.

Whale and Elephant Meat.

There is something unpleasant about the thought of eating whale meat, but it is said that the reality is very palatable. Japan has quite a trade in canned and salted whale meat, and there is to be a campaign to educate the European peoples to like it. Some whaling companies have distributed from their headquarters samples of canned whale meat, and those who have eaten it describe it as tenderer than beef and much like it in taste.

Whale steak seems no queerer than Frankfort sausage made out of an elephant, which is what some German people have been eating. An enterprising butcher over there, hearing that an unruly elephant in the Ghent zoological gardens was to be killed, engaged the carcass. He made 3,800 pounds of sausage out of it and sold every pound at good prices.

Friends.

"Dear friends," said the philosopher, "are scarce items in this world. They are too few to be counted."

"What d'ye call a friend?" he was asked.

"A friend," he replied, "is one who would lend you money if you wanted it and to whom you would lend money—if you had it."—New York Times.

Mr. Manning's Grudge.

Mrs. Manning—Do you think it is right to let that Greyson fellow keep company with our Martha? Mr. Manning—No, I can't say that it is. Young Greyson is a nice chap, but I've a grudge against his father, and I don't care if the son has to suffer for it.—Exchange.

"Yes, I'm anxious to get my daughter off my hands, I'll admit."

"Then why don't you let her marry me?"

"What good would that do?"—Cleveland Leader.

Who would not have feet set on his neck let him not stoop.—Italian Proverb.

Household Hintlets.

Do not throw away old umbrellas. By removing the cloth cover and cutting it up in strips you can make a number of dainty neckties for your husband. The ribs properly twisted and woven together make a very good rat trap, and the stick when carefully polished will do for a cane to present to the clergyman at Christmas.

To keep freckles from showing get a small paint pot, quart size, and fill with a pink paint carefully matching the tone of your complexion and with a camel's hair brush paint each freckle out.

Young wives cannot be too often reminded that they should always greet their husbands with a smile. It is safe to say that there is nothing in the world that will more deeply irritate him than this, and it should therefore not be forgotten.

If your lamp wicks give out, a very satisfactory substitute can be made of Irish point lace or valenciennes, carefully wound round the wick holder. A knitted necktie will serve the same purpose, but is apt to burn fitfully and give out a pungent odor.—Harper's Weekly.

Judges on Circuit.

It was the genius and foresight of Henry I. that saw the necessity of creating a close connection between the central king's court and the local courts up and down the land. It was Norman and wandering, going where the king went. They were Saxon and stationary; hence to link them together in 1124 a special deputation of judges was for the first time sent on circuit in the country, of whom it is recorded that they "hanged so many thieves as never was before, being in that little while altogether forty-four men."

This vigorous administration of justice by royal authority gained for Henry the title of "the lion of justice" and paved the way for the permanent institution in his grandson's reign. These traveling judges were called justices-in-eyre—i. e., in itinere, on journey. Their head, the justiciar, is still seen in our title the lord chief justice. Henry II. in 1173 fixed these circuits at six—the home, midland, eastern, western, northeastern and northern, which correspond roughly with those that still exist.—London Standard.

None of That For Them.

They had been married only a month, and it was their first experience in seeking country board. After riding ten long miles in a rattling farm cart they arrived at the door of the farmhouse.

"And now, strangers," said the old farmer after he had asked about a score of questions, "I want to tell yeou right now that down here with us yeou be supposed to go to bed with the chickens." The young man whispered to his young wife, and then both climbed back on the farm cart.

"Boy," said the young man, his lips compressed with determination, "drive us back to the station."

The freckled lad grinned and whipped up the horse.

"You uns didn't seem to like the place?" he chuckled.

"No," said the young man. "We have often read about crowded farmhouses, but when it comes to shoving us off to the henhouse that is going a little too strong. I guess we'll stay in the city."—Chicago News.

What He Could Do.

During the South African war there was a young officer just from Sandhurst who was attached to General French's staff. The young fellow has himself achieved some distinction since then and shall be nameless. At that time he was fresh and fidgety and was always imagining a constant menace of attack by the Boers, whom he invariably pronounced "Bores." This pronunciation General French had in vain tried to correct, and it gradually got on his nerves. One day the young officer came to the general to report that he believed he could make out through his fieldglass quite as many as twenty "Bores" hid in the rocks above his camp. "Bores, you say?" inquired the general. "Yes, sir. Bores. Can I do anything, sir?" "Yes. Don't add to them."

A Serious Question.

"My dear Mr. Fallows," said the doctor, "I will admit that I am not quite decided as to whether or not yours is a constitutional disease."

"Hum! That so?" said the patient, with a heavy sigh. "And have I got to go to the expense of appealing to the United States supreme court to find out?"—Philadelphia Ledger.

She Rather Liked It.

"I don't mind Jack's slang," said one of the girls. "He is so clever in the use of it."

"How so?"

"Why, he sent me three dozen photos of famous beauties, with a card on which the only words were, 'You're another.'"

A Changed Girl.

"How is it that Julia is so jealous and quarrelsome? She used to have such a sweet disposition?"

"I know, but the past year she has been singing in a church choir."—Baltimore American.

Celery is never quite so good as when it is eaten within half an hour after it is dug. This is why the home grown product is so crisp and tender and so much enjoyed. The raising of celery is a simple thing, understanding a few points in connection with it, and more tables ought to be supplied with it.

The sooner the barnyard fertilizers are spread on the land after making the larger the value which will be realized from them. To do this work most effectively and to make the manure go as far as possible a spreader should be used. The success of many a manufacturing plant has depended upon the disposal it made of its byproducts. It is also true in the case of farm management in the handling of its chief byproduct, the stable manures. In any event, though neglect of them may not mean failure, the proper handling of them would insure a much larger measure of success.

MAY GIVE PENSIONS

Soo Road is Investigating Methods With View of Adopting Best.

Many Railroad Men in This City Are Interested in the Plan.

The Soo railway company has in contemplation the establishment of a service pension system for employees. Edmund Pennington, president says that the company, after giving consideration to the matter, has inclined favorably toward it, and has begun an inquiry into methods in operation, in the east principally, in which a few corporations that are large employers of labor have established the pension plan. Inquiry has also been started through the Minneapolis general offices into the age and length of service with the road of the employees, that there may be a statistical basis upon which a graded scale pension system may be based.

President Pennington, who has been a student of railroad problems for years, has watched with interest such moves, some still experimental, as have been undertaken in the United States for the betterment of condition of employees of railroads. Favoring the general idea of a system whereby a faithful employee who has given years of service may be assured of an income sufficient to provide maintenance in old age, Mr. Pennington has had in mind the voluntary establishment of such a plan on the Soo road.

In working out of a plan, he said today there should be, he believes the thought of the fostering of the spirit of thrift independently. Railroad management has encouraged employes to practice economy as have other corporations, and a pension system, he said, to be truly beneficial, should, if possible, be planned to increase the spirit of thrift that prompts the men to save money, and that in its application it should apply, if possible, more directly to employes whose incomes afford the least comparative opportunity for accumulation of savings, particularly to men in the less important positions, who have worked long and faithfully, and have in many instances raised large families.

Minneapolis is likely, when the plan is perfected, to present to the world something in the form of a railroad pension system that will be different from those now in operation. William H. Schutt of the Minneapolis general offices of the company, who is in New York, will supplement the accumulated information of Mr. Pennington by inquiry into the latest phases of the pension systems of the east. The plan the Soo Line will work out may not be announced for some time.

The United States Steel corporation, Chicago & North-Western, New York Central, Pennsylvania, and other roads, have systems in operation that follow the pension idea. The Canadian Pacific has a pension system that is supported by a fund that accumulates from year to year.

Minneapolis banks have systems operating by which employees are insured aid in case of misfortune and are given opportunity to save money. These are operating successfully, but they are not properly termed pension systems. The Soo will be the first of the railroads in the northwest to make the move.

Teach The Children To Save Money.

It is often and truthfully said that a penny saved is a penny made. The foundation of many of the greatest fortunes was begun by saving a penny. The habit of saving is one of the best that can be formed. Every child should be taught to save something every week. The satisfaction of counting these pennies, when the bank is emptied is one of the pleasures that we never forget; perhaps every one of us can remember the thrill of joy we had, when we emptied the contents of the bank on the table and counted and recounted this mountain of wealth; how eager we were to tell our little friends the amount of our great fortune, and raced with them in refilling the bank.

To bring this pleasure within the reach of every child and help the forming of the penny saving habit, Messrs. Scott & Bowne, 409 Pearl Street, New York, the manufacturers of Scott's Emulsion, are offering to send to any address, for 10 cents, a beautiful little Savings Bank; each bank contains a new Good Luck Penny. Send 10 cents and get one.

An Egg Trust in Meeker County.

The Litchfield Independent says that farmers of Meeker county may shortly be marketing their eggs thru a co operative association, selling to city retailers, gauranteeing the product to be strictly fresh, and obtaining a price of several cents per dozen higher than the ordinary market price. The plan is to have each egg seller designated by a number, and every egg will bear the number of the member of the association and the date the egg was laid. The plan is to have the eggs delivered daily the same as milk and cream at the creamery. By this plan the poultryman will get a fancy price for his product and the consumer will get what he pays for.

GOV. EBERHART ISSUES A PROCLAMATION

Calls a Conservation and Agricultural Development Congress to Be Held at St. Paul March 16, 17, 18 and 19.

Gov. Eberhardt yesterday issued the following proclamation:

That an era of new and complex development is opening in Minnesota there is no dout. The soil and climate of Minnesota are second to none, There exist within the borders of this state untold opportunities—for the development of farms, mines, forests, waterpower, reclamation of swamp lands and construction of country roads as well as the necessity for more railroad lines.

To determine by a congress of representive men interested in all lines of business and social endeavor, what the resources of this state are and how the rapid and intelligent developement of Minnesota may best be assisted, will contribute greatly to to the advancement of this commonwealth to the front rank of the states.

GOVERNOR EBERHART.

The developement of unused lands; conservation of soil fertility of lands now under cultivation; increase of production per acre on farms; careful handling of mineral resources to eliminate waste; preservation and prepetuation of the forests; scientific drainage of swamp lands; improvement of public roads; extention of industrial and agricultural education; study of the practicability of water power and the continuance of the best sanitary conditions to insure public health: are all subjects which must be considered and agitated in order to give force to a state wide movement for the development of Minnesota.

The time has come for a new era of pioneering. Men and women are coming into the West and Northwest as in the days of old, but they must come and expect to come without facing the hardships endured by the first pioneers. They will open the virgin regions of Minnesota, creating new wealth and at once contributing to public maintainance. How to assist these people to the advantage enjoyed by the older and more highly developed regions, giving them good roads, educational institutions, transportation facilities, mail routes, healthful surroundings, telephone lines and markets in which to buy and sell, is one of the problems which citizens of Minnesota may well consider in a meeting of representative men and women.

For many years parts of this state have been severely subjected to single cropping. Thousands of farms have been compelled to yield year after year the same crop until the soil is wearing out and profits have undoubtedly been reduced. These soils must be given back the elements of plant life or they will cease to pay dividends at the increased valuations.

While the state of Minnesota has vast timber and boundless mineral resources, agriculture is in condition to control in a large measure, the industrial activity of the people in towns and cities.

Only a little more than one third of the land in the state suitable for agricultural purposes is now under cultivation. These lands should be opened and handled so as to insure the best results to the tiller of the soil.

Another demand has followed this. The farmers should be given every opportunity to secure the knowledge of practical, scientific agriculture, the profits to be gained by corporation; the increase possible by creative and selective breeding of plants and animals. These things generally known and applied will result in immense improvements in production.

To develope and extend the dairy industry necessitates more general discussion and knowledge of stock freeding. Great progress has already been made in this state and if the work is encouraged and extended, Minnesota will have in ten years, a profitable market in other states and abroad for high priced cattle which combine milk and beef.

Good roads must be built to enable Minnesota producers to meet the competition of other producers in states having better transportation facilities, nearer markets and improved country roads. The cost of hauling our products from the farm to the market is excessive in comparrison with the railroad charge for hauling similar products and will remain in excess of the cost of wagon in other states unless we improve our roads. Practical intelligent work on the highways of the state will reduce the cost from a half to two thirds, broaden the scope of the farmer's market and add to the profits.

The source of many rivers, with countless lakes scattered over its broad domain, Minnesota has unquestioned opportunities for the development of water power. Discussion of these unharnessed streams and their possibilities by practical engineers is to be desired that the people may realize that it rests with these whether they shall have cheap power and at the same time conserve the fuel resources of the state.

At once one of the most healthy regions in the United States, the natural advantage undoubtedly needs guarding in the cities, in the homes and school houses. How best the public health may be preserved and improved is a question for wide discussion, which will have for a result general education of the people to desire and secure the most healthful conditions everywhere.

The impractical idea of taking a boy from the farm to teach him farming is now overcome by incorporating in the courses of the rural schools, the elements of practical, scientific agriculture and with the study goes industrial training for the boys and domestic science and art for the girls of the farm. The extension of these studies and how the system can be best fostered by consolidation of these schools, is a subject of the most vital importance and worthy the most earnest consideration.

Experience has shown that farmers institutes, the so called "short courses" and similiar meetings have had a wide influence, adding not only millions to the value of production, but improving the conditions of life. That the citizens of Minnesota should join in such a movement for conservation and agricultural development seems fitting, when the governments of earth have come to deem expenditures of time and money for research, discussion and agitation, looking toward the creation of a strong public sentiment for better living, more important than any other line of work.

Taking into account, therefore, these vital considerations for the welfare of the state, I hereby proclaim the holding of the Minnesota Conservation and Agricultural Development Congress, in the municipal auditorium in the city of St. Paul on March 16, 17, 18, and 19, 1910, and earnestly invite the entire citizenship of the state to participate in and cooperate in carrying out the plans for this gathering that its purposes may be fully realized.

Former Soo Engineer Here.

J. J. Hankinson, of Glencoe, was in the city Saturday. Mr. Hankinson was for a number of years the chief locating engineer for the Soo line, but is now engaged in the ditching business and has taken a contract to build a ditch in this county between the Clearwater and Red Lake rivers. Mr. Hankinson located the Soo line from Glenwood to Winnipeg and from Thief River Falls to Kenmare. He also made the preliminary survey from Thief River Falls to Duluth.

Can Suspend Service.

The fourth assistant postmaster general has issued an order permitting local postmasters to suspend rural free delivery services for a period of thirty days, when the carrier reports habitual neglect of roads by any patron, overseer or trustee. If the road is not made good in thirty days, the local postmaster is requested to recommend that the badly kept portion be permanently withdrawn from the route.

Detroit Up Against It.

Fertile Journal: At Detroit four saloons are running by grace of Indian Agent Johnson, while the railroad companies are under instructions to neither receive nor deliver liquors of any kind at that place. In that case how will the thirst joints now running replenish their stocks of booze? This Indian treaty business is harder to solve than a Chinese puzzle.

As Others See It.

Dairying is being forced upon Red River Valley farmers, because of damage to grain crops by excessive rains. Too bad about those farmers. Dairying will make them plutocrats and enhance the fertility of their soil.—Northwestern Agriculturist.

HELP THE FARMERS

Federation of Commercial Clubs to Establish "Demonstration Farms."

Every Main Agricultural District in Minnesota to Have One.

Following up the criticisms of present agricultural education, that it does not reach the men who most needed it, the the Minnesota Federation of Commercial Clubs at its third annual convention for the establishment of "demonstration tracts" in every main agricultural district of Minnesota where during the coming season farmers for many miles around will receive practical object lessons in planting tilling and harvesting, and in the newest and most advanced agricultural ideas that are applicable to Minnesota conditions. Experts are to be in charge of each of the tracts, and the profits will go to the owners of the land. The work is to be done without cost to the farmers as a step towards practical education in posting men too old to go to school, or lacking opportunity to do so, in how to improve their methods and get more out of the land.

The Federation has been at work on the new educational plan for many months. In each of the districts where tracts are to be located, active town and commercial clubs will assume general supervision of the work. The Federation will furnish experts drawn from the Minnesota Agricultural college, who will visit these tracts in turn, conducting all the farm operations with the rotation of the weeks in the planting and growing and harvest season. The local clubs are pledged to properly conduct the advertising of the work, to gather the farmers at the tracts and witness the handling of the work and to arrange on dates when experts conduct the work for general farmers meetings at which the experts will be quizzed by the farmers themselves on the why and wherefore of the methods employed and on farm problems and difficulties peculiar to the locality. At these meetings the expert will deliver practical talks on general farming, outlining the results of the experimental and other work along the lines of better stock, increased productiveness and better farming methods.

It has been my aim and wish for some time past to get hold of a theatre of my own and have had several opportunities to go out with respectable parties to start in in various towns but never fancied the idea of leaving this city, and as this chance came my way I cinched it by buying the Bijou and figure that I ought to have the best chance to make good in my own home town where I have lived for nearly six years and among people that I have associated with in that length of time. As to the show itself it will be run on strictly virtuous and clean basis, a place that there will be no disgrace for any man, woman or child to attend. As you all know, I have had nearly three years experience in operating a picture machine and I will guarantee that the pictures will be reproduced with the best effects possible. Highly soliciting your patronage and expecting one and all to attend my place of amusement every now and then, I am, yours for good entertainment,

A series of basket ball games between the high school divisions are played at the roller rink every week and some interesting contests are participated in. Last Tuesday evening the freshmen won the championship of the series by winning from the seniors by a score of 6 to 4, who in turn won from the sophomores by a score of 11 and 2. The girls of the freshmen and junior divisions also played a game, resulting in a victory for the juniors, the score being 9 and 3. To these games a small admission fee is charged to help defray the expenses for the rent of the skating rink as a gymnasium.

ORGANIZATION PERFECTED

Thief River Falls Co-Operative Company Organized Yesterday Afternoon.

Company to Have a Capital of Over $22,000 and About 150 Members.

The Thief River Falls Co Operative company was organized in this city yesterday afternoon at a meeting held of the subscribers to the stock. The company is organized under the auspices of the Right Relationship League and E. J. Van Horn, of that association, was here and delivered a very interesting and instructive address upon the Rochdale system.

The meeting organized by electing Peder Engelstad chairman and N. K. Nelson secretary. About 150 persons were present, there having been over 22,000 worth of stock subscribed for. Mr. Van Horn stated that of the 130 stores organized in this territory by him in the past four years, this started out with the largest capital and he did not see how it could be a failure.

The following officers of the association were elected:

President—Peter Engelstad.
Vice President—Math Barzen.
Secretary—Silas Torgerson.
Treasurer—T. L. Melgaard.
Director—J. O. Thorstad.

These officers will have the power to elect a manager of the store and will serve until the annual meeting which will be held in March.

As soon as an invoice can be taken, the stock of O. J. Schei & Co., is to be purchased and the new co-operative company will take possession.

School Notes.

A few promotions were made Monday, this being the beginning of the second semester. These students were those, who, by reason of high standing, advanced age or superior mentality, had worked beyond their grades.

The Central exhibit attracted many visitors last Thursday afternoon, the halls and rooms being crowded at times. The work shown was not specially prepared for the occasion, but was ordinary class production. The Knox pupils will present their exhibit in their building on the afternoon of Friday, Jan. 28th, to which all interested persons are cordially invited.

Five new pupils entered high school this week.

Mrs. J. M. Bishop lectured to the high school students on Yellowstone Park last Wednesday morning. The lecture was a vivid description of the beauties and wonders of this famous region and was listened to by the pupils with marked attention and interest.

It is the plan of the primary work in the city schools that the pupils complete the first three rooms in two years; that is, that they enter the third grade at the end of the second year in school. The brightest and most mature ones can accomplish this, but those entering at five, as too many do, or those suffering from physical disability or coming from families, where English is not the home language, should not be expected to accomplish the impossible or undesirable. Better a sound sure training in the fundamentals, rather than a crowding and cramming to force the little people into grades beyond their reach.

This week marks the beginning of the second half year. The high school program was announced Monday morning and classes and studies were changed accordingly.

Two sewing machines have been added to the domestic science room.

The basketball games on Tuesday evening resulted in the boys of the freshmen class winning from the other three divisions. The junior girls won from the sophomores by a score of 8 to 3. The boys' scores were freshmen, 6 and senior, 4; freshmen, 9 and juniors, 2; seniors, 11 and sophomores, 2. A large crowd attended the games which were directed by members of the faculty, and all contests were over by 9:20.

The freshmen class rendered an attractive program last Friday afternoon at three o'clock. It consisted of an address by Carl Nelson, class president, song, Anna Giller; class paper by Charlotte Rinker and Hannah Eggerud, editors; recitation, Blanch Newberry; essay on the English elections by Maurice Fossum; piano solo, Myrtle Rayson; dialogue by several of the class members.

The Intelligent Mule.

"Some people think mules haven't much intelligence, but I know they have," was the way a commercial traveler interrupted a story teller. "Now, take the town I come from. While I was home on a visit last year the place was all wrought up over the systematic stealing of flowers from the graves in our leading cemetery. The thing had been going on some time, and the people were shocked, of course. Finally a guard was posted and the thief captured, and the thief was a mule.

"It didn't take long to get at all the facts. It seems that a certain woman living near the cemetery had held up the mule's owner, who was beating the animal, prosecuted him for cruelty, then bought the mule and turned it out to pasture. The mule was so grateful to the woman that every night it would jump the pasture fence, go into the cemetery, pick up the freshest bunch of flowers it could find, carry them to the woman's house and deposit them on the front stoop, where she would find them in the morning. Now, when you talk of intelligence in animals"—

"Good night," said the man whom the commercial traveler had interrupted.—New York Globe.

The Top Hat.

Tall hats, "pearkin up like the spire of a steeple a quarter of a yard above the crowne," as a sixteenth century writer describes them, were known in the time of Elizabeth, and the Puritans affected them until they merged into the old fashioned beavers of our great-grandfathers' days. Top hats of silk appeared first in Florence about 1500, and twenty years later silk hats with felt bodies were introduced into England. About 1840 the French silk hat was placed on the market and at once adopted in the familiar "chimney pot" shape. There were several varieties of it, such as the Wellington hat, with the yeoman crown; the Anglesea hat, bell shaped at the top, and the D'Orsay hat, with ribbed silk binding and a big bow. The color also varied. Thus the Earl of Harrington started a craze for green top hats by wearing one in his garden with the idea of not frightening the birds. He also tested his silk hats by standing upon them. The top hat, however, was never so favored by any great personage as to account for its general adoption.—London Answers.

Heard In a Restaurant.

"Say, waiter, I'm in a hurry. What can you give me for breakfast?"

"Can't give yer nothin', but yer kin git ham an' eggs for a quarter."

"Well, give me two poached eggs on toast."

Calling, "Adam and Eve on a raft."

"And, say, waiter, by the way, have the eggs turned."

Calling again, "Wreck 'em!"

"Oh, say, waiter, how long will my omelet be?"

"About eight inches, I guess."

"Waiter, why don't you put a button on that apron?"

"Asked the old woman to sew a button on last night. She couldn't find one, so she sewed up the buttonhole."

"See here, waiter, don't take that plate away with the apple peeling on. I believe the peel is just as wholesome as the fruit and, in fact, contains more nutriment. The very idea!"

"Well, why don't you live on pineapple skins?"—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

The Speed of Light.

Light holds the record for high speed among all moving things that have been measured. It travels at the rate of 328,028,800 yards a second. This is faster than thinking, even by the most quick witted person. Let any reader try to think the simplest thought and then with the aid of a stop watch note how long it has taken him to think it. He will then be able to understand how slow his mental operations are compared to the speed of light.

A Bit of a Bull.

The following entry was discovered the other day in the complaint book of a Melbourne club, which numbers several Irishmen among its members:

"The hot water in the lavatory today was quite cold, and there was none of it."

It was in the handwriting of a well known doctor.

Obeyed Him.

Mr. Newlywed—So you've been buying more useless truck! We have absolutely no use for those curtains. Have I not told you to stop buying things just because they were cheap?

Mrs. Newlywed—Yes, my dear, and I've obeyed you. Those curtains were not at all cheap.

TWO UGLY ANIMALS.

Those Big Pigs, the Rhinoceros and the Hippopotamus.

THEY ARE HARD TO CAPTURE.

Getting Away With One of the Colossal Brutes Makes the Work of Trapping the Big Felines Seem Like Child's Play—Methods of the Hunters.

Trapping the big felines is child's play compared with the work of capturing those lumbering, colossal animals of the "big pig" family, the rhinoceros and the hippopotamus.

Too stupid to tame or to break to a halter and too heavy to transport through hundreds of miles of wilderness, it would take a man half a lifetime to bring one of these five to six thousand pound creatures out of a jungle into civilization. Therefore the expert's only chance is to find a cow with a calf and to capture the young one.

Compared with the alert, grim exterior of the felines, there is little in the appearance of a phlegmatic, ponderous pig like a rhinoceros to indicate its real ferociousness. There is hardly a wild animal in existence which is more dangerous than this rarest of all our menagerie captives. Awkward as the great creature appears when at rest, once aroused it dashes through the densest thicket with the irresistible speed of an express train.

To catch a rhinoceros the trapper proceeds with preparations much as would an explorer bound for a two or three year expedition in the interior of an unexplored continent, for the difficulty confronting him is the threefold one of first penetrating a thousand or more miles into the interior; second, of finding not only a rhinoceros, but a rhinoceros cow with a calf old enough to capture, and, lastly, of transporting his prize across hills and mountains and plains, over rivers and ravines, across swamps and through forests to civilization.

Skirting swamps and rivers, the men are ever on the lookout for the deep, round spoors, like a pie plate driven into the mud, for in this wet ground the rhinoceros loves to wallow. Frequently five or six months elapse before the tracks of a cow and a calf are picked up.

Noiseless and from well to leeward, the trapper and his men gradually steal nearer until the cow and the calf are inclosed in a circle. From ahead, out of the maze of cane and creeper, sounds the uneasy stamping of the cow. With a half snort, half grunt, in an instant the rhinoceros is all attention. Head raised and nostrils sniffing, she searches the air steadily. At sight of one of the savages the cow dashes with the speed of a race horse at the man, charging the human decoy, and at that instant the trapper's rifle is heard, and her furious charge is over, provided the bullet reaches the heart by striking just behind the left foreleg—the only vulnerable point in the inch thick armor with which the beast is clad.

Now and then it happens that the trapper fails to kill in time—his gun may miss fire, intervening trees may interfere or the marksman may miss his aim. Then the life of the decoy depends upon his own agility. To run to one side before the rhinoceros is almost on top of him would be fatal, for the swift brute would overtake him with a few bounds. His only hope is to wait until the deadly horn is almost at his feet and then, with the swiftness of a mongoose dodging the aim of a cobra, to leap to one side while the ponderous creature, unable to turn short in time, dashes onward under its own impetus. Twice, three times, a clever native hunter will dodge in this way, giving the trapper ample time to bring down the rhinoceros.

Then comes the tracking of the frightened calf, which has fled at the first sign of trouble, and soon it is pushed, prodded and shoved up a bridge of log skids into a cage of the bullock cart.

But even more dangerous is the trapping of the hippopotamus, for, although in itself the "rhino" is a more savage antagonist than the "river horse," the trapper hunts the former on land and brings down at a safe distance, whereas in the case of the hippopotamus he must fight in the same primitive fashion that savages have used for ages. Hand to maw, as it were, he must engage this two ton monster while standing in the bow of a frail canoe, for the hippopotamus, as its name, the "river horse," means, is a land and water animal and must be harpooned and brought ashore before it expires, otherwise it would sink at once to the bottom of the river, the coveted calf escaping among the other hippopotamuses instead of following the stricken cow to shore, so that the youngster may be caught.—A. W. Rolker in St. Nicholas.

The Blue Danube.

The Danube still retains its ancient splendors. The Rhine is the river of vine clad, sunny hills, ruined castles on rugged crags, mediaeval history and modern glory in war and in peace, a river bright as the warble of a bird in the wood. The Danube hills carry immense, almost untouched, forests, higher and grander than the heights of the Rhine. In the midst of this rich, deep green verdure hugely white mountains break in on the eye. There are many wayside chapels, too, on the banks. In solemn, awesome, majestic beauty the Danube far excels the cheery, pretty Rhine, and it must be called a pity that so few American travelers take a tour on this indescribably superb river.—Omaha Bee.

Big Land Deal.

Col. F. E. Greene of Stephens has just closed the biggest real estate deal in the history of Marshall county. He has sold the bonanza Wheeler & Culbertson farms in town of Augsburg, comprising 36,000 acres to John D. Henry of Hallock for a consideration of $214,500. The farms, there are two of them, are in a high state of cultivation and contain some of the best land in the county. It is the intention of the new owner to subdivide the farms into smaller ones and sell same to actual settlers.

The passing of Wheeler & Culbertson farms mark an era in the history of the county. They were established in the early days and the name is as familiar as household words to the early settlers. Hundreds of the early settlers in the county found employment on said farms and were enabled to earn ready money for the keeping of themselves and families while they were developing their own homesteads. The country now needs 160 acre farmers more than anything else.

A RUSSIAN PRISONER.

Experience of a Man Who Was Chained to a Wheelbarrow.

In writing of the Schluesselburg prison in McClure's Magazine David Soskice tells of a prisoner who was chained to a wheelbarrow:

"Schedrin had been condemned to hard labor in the convict mines of Siberia and for an attempt to escape from there had been sentenced to be chained to a heavy wheelbarrow. When the order came for his transfer from Siberia to St. Petersburg no conveyance could be found large enough to contain him, the wheelbarrow and the convoy of gendarmes. Yet, as the wheelbarrow had become a part of the prisoner, the gendarmes were afraid to leave it behind. It was therefore decided to place Schedrin with his convoy in one cart and the wheelbarrow behind in another. For several months, day and night, Schedrin and the gendarmes galloped through Siberia upon a troika (a three horsed cart or sledge), while another sped behind them upon which the wheelbarrow reposed, causing the deepest amazement among the peasants in the villages through which they passed. Upon the arrival of the prisoner in SS. Peter and Paul he was once again chained to the barrow, and only after he had been six weeks in the Schluesselburg was he finally detached from it and given freedom of movement within the narrow confines of his cell.

"'When they unchained me,' said Schedrin subsequently, 'I could not get enough movement. I wanted to run and run, and it seemed to me that I could never stop. How strange it is that men who can enjoy perfect freedom of movement never realize the wonderful happiness that is theirs.'"

HENRY CAVENDISH.

A Recluse, He Lived Far From the Madding Crowd.

Henry Cavendish, the famous natural philosopher and chemist, was a recluse who astonished England.

A son of Lord Charles Cavendish and a nephew of the third Duke of Devonshire, possessed of enormous wealth, the subject of universal admiration because of his scientific attainments, he preferred the solitude of his study and the company of his books to the pleasures society could offer him.

For many years he lived at Hampstead in a large, roomy house, attended by a number of female servants, who, however, were strictly enjoined to keep out of his sight. If a domestic by the merest chance came into the presence of Cavendish she was instantly dismissed.

Every morning the philosopher would leave a note on the hall table naming what he wanted for dinner. No one saw him place the note there; but, accustomed to the strange customs of the establishment, the meal would be prepared, and only the remains of the repast signified the presence of the master of the house.

When Cavendish died in 1810 he left behind him nearly a million pounds sterling, besides a lasting reputation as a scientist and writer on natural philosophy.—London Telegraph.

Chrysanthemums.

Chrysanthemums stand fourth in commercial importance among flowers. Only the rose, the violet and the carnation surpass them, and that chiefly because the chrysanthemum season is so short, while the others can be had from the florist nearly the whole year round. Greece gave us the name. Chrysanthemum means "golden flower." But the name was invented long before the big butter yellow globes were known in the occident. It referred to the prevailing gold in the small varieties that were known. Strangely enough, the first chrysanthemum brought into Europe was not gold, but purple. It was a small flower about two inches across, shaped like an aster. Somebody took it to Europe from China in 1790—and, presto, the modern history of chrysanthemums was begun.—Argonaut.

Why He Could Beat McGregor.

Alexander Ure, the lord advocate of Scotland, is a keen golfer, and he has a good store of golfing tales. These he is always ready to relate, even if they tell against himself.

Playing on a certain course in Scotland, he remarked incidentally to his caddie: "By the way, I played a round with Todd McGregor the last time I was here. Grand player, McGregor!"

"Aye," said the caddie, "but ye could bate McGregor the noo."

"Do you think so?" exclaimed the gratified lord advocate, being well aware of McGregor's prowess.

"Aye," drawled the caddie. "McGregor's deid."—Golfing.

How Customs Vary.

She—In some parts of Australia when a man marries each of the bride's relatives strikes him with a stick by way of welcome into the family. He—Yes, and in many parts of America when a man marries each of the bride's relatives strikes him with a loan by way of welcoming him into the family.—New York Times.

The Glad Hand.

"What do you mean by the glad hand?"

"Anything," answered Mr. Bloochips, "that will beat three of a kind."—Washington Star.

The Monkey and the Pie.

An Indian faker had a monkey that he had brought up from babyhood, says an English writer. The pair were fast friends, the monkey being a faithful attendant on his master and as good as a watchdog. One day the faker made a pie for dinner and left it to cook on a charcoal fire while he went for a walk. As the cooking proceeded the savory smell was too much for the monkey. It raised the crust and tasted the chicken. Finding the food very tasty, it ate more and more until nothing but the crust remained. Then it remembered its master, who would shortly return hungry and ready to enjoy his meal. What was to be done? The sharp eyes of the monkey detected some crows not far away, so without loss of time it lay down on the ground as if dead. By and by a crow came along and pecked at the monkey, which seized the bird in a twinkling, strangled it, stripped off the feathers, placed it in pieces in the dish, covered it over with the crust and then contentedly awaited the return of the faker, to whom the whole incident was related by an eyewitness.

Left Handed Vituperatives.

Most counties in England have their idiomatic expressions to denote left handedness, and they are often prefixed to the unfortunate left handed child's name. In London the term is kack handed, the word being also equivalent to awkward. In Lancashire it is k-pawed, in Yorkshire gallock or gawk handed, an expression dating back to at least the seventeenth century. In Derbyshire are used the terms keg handed, cork handed and corky handed, while in the Teesdale district cuddy handed is common and in Nottinghamshire, wallet handed.

In the south of England special terms to denote left handedness are also found. In Dorset it is scrame handed and in Devonshire coochy handed. In Scotland we find gawk handed and in the west cawry handed. In Ireland a left handed man is called a kithogue. Tim Healy used this word in a speech at East Wicklow, in which he said that Mr. O'Kelly could fight with his left hand and had already given his opponent some "kithogues" that would spoil his political beauty during the contest.—London Chronicle.

Bursting Balloons.

The greatest danger of a high ascent in a balloon is concerned with the changing density of the atmosphere. On the ground the atmosphere presses on the balloon with a weight of about fifteen pounds for every square inch of its surface. As the balloon rises, however, the air grows thinner and its pressure becomes in consequence less and less. As the pressure of the outside atmosphere decreases the balloon expands, and if the ascension is made too rapidly or without sufficient care the gas inside the silk envelope will expand until the balloon bursts. But the bursting of a balloon in midair is by no means necessarily a fatal catastrophe. Every balloon is provided with a "ripping cord" which, when pulled, cuts a long rent in the envelope out of which the gas speedily escapes. The silk bag is then carried by the air into the upper portion of the netting, where in the majority of cases it forms a parachute and brings everything safely to earth.

Doubtful Praise.

Mr. Faxon was the oldest patron of the "select boarding house" in which he lived, and his landlady sometimes referred people to him for a recommendation of her table. His wish was to praise the food highly, as he could conscientiously do, but one day he overstepped his mark.

"I'm dyspeptic, sir," said a man who had gone to Mr. Faxon to make inquiries about the boarding house, "and my food has to be simple and well cooked—no high seasoning, no indigestible compounds."

Mr. Faxon looked at him with a bland and reassuring smile.

"My dear sir," he said in his most impressive manner, "you need have no fears. All I have eaten in the ten years I have been under Mrs. Brown's roof would not interfere with the digestion of the most delicate baby, sir, in the land."

When Lovers Watched the Corpse.

Most curious of the old time superstitions of New England was the custom of requiring lovers to watch the corpse. It associated the hopes of marriage with the silent vigil, was poetic and has only disappeared from the oldest towns within a generation. No obligation of the social conscience was more scrupulously regarded than that a dead body should never be left alone at night. In the earliest days the solemn watchers were old men and women, deacons, selectmen, but as the colonies grew honest lovers with plighted troths were frequently selected for these long vigils.

"Your political antagonist is calling you every name he can think of," said the agitated friend.

"Don't interrupt him," answered Senator Sorghum. "It is better to have a man searching the dictionary for epithets than going after your record for facts."—Washington Star.

BY JOHN W. EASTMAN
ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.
PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

The new King of Belgium starts in with a salary of only $660,000, but that gives him an incentive to do his best and earn a raise.

The death of William Robertson, superintendent of the state agricultural school at Crookston, will be considerable of a blow to agricultural interests of the northwest. Mr. Robertson was a very practical man and had he lived would have made the Crookston school a great success. It is to be hoped a good man will be secured as his successor.

The contest for the Republican nomination for state auditor is going to be quite a spirited one. R. J. Wells, of Breckenridge, A. W. Thompson, of Filmore, and Hugh R. Scott, of Minneapolis, are in the field as candidates, and State Auditor Samuel G. Iverson will seek a re-nomination. As Mr. Iverson has made the best auditor the state has ever had, the chances are greatly in his favor of winning out.

George F. Authier, the political writer for the Minneapolis Tribune, keeps State Senator A. D. Stephens, of Crookston, in the spot light all the time. Recently he had Mr. Stephens a candidate for governor and later elected him United States senator to succeed Moses E. Clapp. Now he has him a candidate for congressman against Halvor Steenerson. The finish will probably be state senator from Polk county.

PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT FOR REFORESTATION EXPLAINED BY FORESTRY COMMISSIONER.

On the eighth of November next the electors of Minnesota will have a chance to make an X on a separate pink ballot opposite the proposed constitutional amendment for an annual tax of one-fifteenth of a mill on each dollar of taxable property (equal to seven cents on each thousand dollars) for reforestation. To adopt the amendment requires a majority of all votes cast at the election. The elector will probably first vote for the several candidates for state offices, members of the legislature, county officers and representatives in congress, whose names will be on another ballot, and he may feel too much in a hurry to stop to vote for this amendment. Besides, there is a natural feeling in every one to vote against an increase of taxes. So, in spite of all the talk for reforestation, this amendment is liable to fail.

If the amendment be adopted, there will annually be raised about $72,000, which the forestry board can use in the purchase at not over $3 per acre of forestry land and in planting it according to forestry principles. Naturally, land at that price will be mostly sandy and only fit to produce pine trees. The experience of Germany shows that pine planted on such land will, on an average, yield 18,000 board feet per acre in eighty years, at which time the trees will be about twelve inches in diameter breast high, and that the investment will net three per cent compound interest. The present generation will get the benefit of most of the $72,000 yearly in payment for labor. Future generations will get the timber, and the public generally will derive benefit in the increase of wealth, in increased beauty of scenery, improvement of climate, soil, water-flow and covert for useful game. Good roads go with forests. The European state forests are health and pleasure resorts for the people.

Since its first settlement the population of the United States has increased at the average rate of eighteen per cent every ten years. At the same rate it will in eighty years be 320,000,000.

It is very seldom that individuals will plant forests when they have to wait eighty years for a crop. The state must do it. Of the present cut-over pine lands in Minnesota only about five per cent have become well restocked with valuable kinds of timber. It would take centuries for nature alone to restore our forests. Nature has a better chance to renew forest in Prussia than in Minnesota; yet Prussia plants fifty thousand acres of forest annually.

The question is sometimes asked, why should the state buy land when it now owns land? The land which the state owns is school and state institution land, which, according to the constitution, must be offered at public auction—the school land at not less than $5 per acre, and the state institution land at not less than $3.75 per acre, the proceeds to go into permanent funds. Besides, the most of the state land will be utilized for agriculture.

As a source of leading industry the Minnesota forests will be exhausted in a dozen years. The state should begin reforestation.

How will your county vote on this question? Which shall be the banner county for reforestation? I ask that public-spirited people in each precinct in the county who will give the matter proper attention.

R. F. D. No. 1.

The Johnson young folks gave a party to a number of their friends last Saturday evening. A ripping good time is reported by those present.

"Some will come on Saturday night,
And some will come on Sunday.
If you give them a right good chance
They won't go home 'till Monday."

Mr. Lunde is extending his visit here for some more good times.

M. Rust, Sr., spent a few days of last week at the Falls, where he attended the conventional meeting of the Lutheran Free Church.

Miss Julia and Ole Rodegaard spent Sunday evening with the Rust folks.

Mr. Boembe from Strip made a flying trip to C. E. Aus last week.

Miss Oline Rust returned from Crookston Tuesday.

A Shoebox Social will be held in the Dimmen school house on Friday evening, the 21st of January.

Outlook Is Bright.

J. H. Griffin, traveling freight agent for the Great Northern, spent Monday in the city attending to business matters.

Mr. Griffin looks forward to a most prosperous year in the Northwest. He believes that with the wealth the farmers possess, owing to the high price of all commodities, which they raised during the past crop year, there will be plenty of money in circulation and all branches of business are certain to prosper.

Mr. Griffin, who keeps a close tab on conditions, and whose position traveling about gives him an excellent opportunity to keep his finger on the Northwestern financial and business pulse, is very optimistic and he has sized up the conditions in the past very accurately and his present forecast will therefore have considerable weight.

A PADEREWSKI STORY.

The Great Musician's First Important Engagement In Paris.

Paderewski's first really important engagement as a pianist was in Paris. He was engaged to play in the drawing room of a lady famous for her musicales, and his fee, which seemed to him enormous, was $20. He managed to persuade the humane agent to pay him in advance, and when Paderewski had redeemed his dress suit from pawn and paid for shoes, gloves, tie and other essentials he had no money left for cab hire, so he was forced to walk to the scene of his engagement.

The music loving audience inspired him. He played with feeling, passion and mastery of his instrument as never before. His success was instant and unmistakable. The poor player had suddenly become the lion of the hour, his dream had become a reality, and fame and fortune were assured him.

At last after disengaging himself from his admirers he turned to leave, when his hostess, remembering with regret the smallness of the fee for so marvelous a performance, offered him her carriage for his return home. But Paderewski's pride came to the rescue. In his courteous yet reserved way he made a formal bow, and, saying, "No, thank you, madame; my own is waiting," he stepped out for his long walk homeward.—Pearson's Weekly.

SCARED THE OLD SAVAGE.

Ruse That Saved Dr. Felkin From King Mtesa of Uganda.

When the well known African traveler Dr. Robert Felkin was staying with the bloodthirsty King Mtesa of Uganda many years ago the king, out of gratitude for his visitor's medical treatment, wished to cut off his head. On Dr. Felkin representing that the treatment was not finished and that if interrupted it would cause Mtesa's death the latter granted him a reprieve until he was quite recovered. Then, however, nothing availed, and the execution was determined upon.

Emin Pasha, who was a friend of Dr. Felkin, had instructed him most accurately about the state of affairs in Uganda and the court of King Mtesa and had revealed to him an important state secret—namely, where Mtesa's powder store was hidden. Dr. Felkin remembered this at the right moment and as a last resort threatened that if Mtesa killed him he would bring down a flash of lightning upon his powder store. Mtesa replied incredulously, "Tell me where it is," whereupon Dr. Felkin whispered in his ear, "It is concealed under your harem."

Mtesa turned pale and allowed Felkin and his companions to live. The "lightning maker's" authority increased when next day a flash of lightning happened to strike near the harem.

Fooled the Town.

University students have long enjoyed a reputation as practical jokers, but there has been nothing quite so successful as the famous sultan of Zanzibar hoax of some years ago at Cambridge. One day the mayor of the town received the following wire from one Henry Lucas, Hotel Cecil, London: "The sultan of Zanzibar will arrive at Cambridge at 4:27 for a short visit. Could you arrange to show him buildings of interest and send carriage?" The mayor rose to the occasion, and in due course four dark complexioned gentlemen with turbans and voluminous trousers arrived at Cambridge. The mayor and corporation entertained them right royally, but to their chagrin they discovered a few hours later that the interesting orientals were simply a quartet of undergraduates who had played an immense practical joke upon the town.—London Spectator.

The Seat of Punctuation.

At the time Colonel Roosevelt was carrying on his simplified spelling movement in Washington there was a meeting of educators at Battle Creek, Mich., and they visited the great sanitariums there. They were shown through, and particular stress was laid by the guide on the success that attended operations there on enlarged and diseased colons, it being claimed that here was the seat of most disease. There was a banquet that night, and one of the visitors opened his speech like this:

"Washington, as we all know, is the seat of spelling reform; but, I take it, Battle Creek is bound to be the seat of punctuation reform, for, as we were told today, you come here with a colon and you depart with a semicolon."—Saturday Evening Post.

A Duke at Church.

There was a certain old duke who used to sit up in the left hand gallery with his duchess, believing himself to be incog. One Sunday a too officious steward, on seeing the old nobleman take a back seat, hurried up to him and said, "Will not your grace have a better seat?"

"Come along, Maria!" said the old duke. "We're discovered!" And he immediately walked out with the duchess and never showed his face inside the church again.—London Tatler.

Lady Passenger's Log.

It was blowing rather hard, and there was a nasty sea on an hour and a half before the first breakfast bugle. An officer of an ocean liner hurried along the passage between the staterooms, and a timid voice called to him:

"Oh, Mr. Officer, please stop!"

He turned and saw a dear old lady with a wrapper thrown around her peeping through her half open door.

"Yes, madam," said the officer.

"Mr. Officer, please would you call this a gale?" asked the old lady anxiously.

"Oh, no, madam! There's not the least danger, I assure you."

"Well, is it half a gale?"

"Not even half a gale, and this is such an excellent sea boat that you needn't worry a bit," explained the officer.

"Well, what would you call it, please?" said the lady, steadying herself as the vessel rolled.

"Just a fresh nor'west breeze, madam, with a cross sea running. But, really, there's nothing to fear."

"Thank you so much. I just wanted to get it quite right in my diary, you know."—New York Times.

A Chinese Superstition.

Fengshui is the Chinese superstition that determines good site or locality, and if a town on the Yangtze has not a good fengshui trade will not come to it, and it will be ruined. A town named Pelshih had its pagoda in the wrong place—not far enough down the river—and the result was that all traffic which should have come to it was swept past, Pelshih being left out in the cold. The people pulled down the pagoda and built another one in the supposed right spot, as nothing would convince them that the depression could arise from any other cause than that of a bad fengshui.

The city of Wanshein, on the other hand, has a perfect fengshui, two fine pagodas, and is very prosperous. But the fact that Wanshein is situated in a fertile valley, where wheat, barley and the poppy flourish abundantly, while Pelshih is barren and miserable, does not concern the inhabitants so much as the fengshui site. This remarkable idea in the Chinese mind is only one of thousands like it.

The Conductor.

I had been suffering with a severe cold for several days, and was so hoarse, I could not speak above a whisper. Nov. 16th, I met one of Dr. Warner's agents on my train, he handed me a bottle of the White Wine of Tar Syrup, and one hour after taking the first dose my hoarseness commenced leaving me. In twenty-four hours my voice was quite clear and natural and my cold was cured. It is the best remedy, I ever saw.

Respectfully,
Conductor Warren,

Liquor Men Plan to Fight.

Crookston Times: It is understood that a meeting is to be held in Crookston within a week or ten days of representatives of all the cities and villages on what is known as reservation territory, and in which saloons have been closed by order of Johnson, and to which all railroad companies have issued orders to agents to refuse shipments of liquor of any kind, and to which agents of the road have been ordered not to consign such shipments, with the object in view of raising a big fund and carrying the fight to the court of last resort.

They will receive substantial aid from the wholesale liquor houses and breweries which ship to the territory affected and the fight will be a bitter one by which the towns will be represented by the best legal talent obtainable in the United States.

It is understood that some advice from high authorities has already been received and the opinion given that the stand taken by the government will not be sustained by the Supreme court of the United States. The first steps decided upon will be watched with intense interest thruout this section.

One of the World's Greatest Remedies.

Mr. S. P. Mason, of Markle, Ind., writes:—I have been in the drug trade twenty years and have handled your White Wine of Tar fifteen years. I have never sold a remedy that equals it. Fifteen years ago, I bought a bu of this medicine from your agent. The first bottle I put out was for Asthma in the case of Jas. Ledbetter of this town. The Dr. said he could not live. One bottle of Warner's White Wine of Tar cured him and he is still living. I think the world should know more of this wonderful remedy.

Beware of the barb wire fence fiend who put the lightning rod shark in the rear. He proposes to the farmer to put up an eight wire fence at eight cents per foot. This seems so cheap the farmer usually signs the contract, and when the bill comes in, which it is sure to do, the deluded farmer finds that he has agreed to pay eight cents per foot for each wire. When the scheme works he has to surrender his farm in part payment and give his note for the balance. Hence we say beware.—Ex.

May Secure Survey.

Reliable information comes from Washington to the effect that Representative Steenerson, who, with Mr. Hanna, of North Dakota, is urging legislation for a survey of the Red River of the North with a view to the construction of reservoirs for the prevention of floods and the improvement of navigation, has received assurances from the members of the committee that the provision will be inserted in the river and harbor bill now being prepared.

Band Benefit at the Bijou Tonight.

The McGuire concert company of Irish entertainers has been secured to appear at the Bijou tonight for the benefit of the local band. This able company has been secured under a heavy expense and it is the desire to see every citizen who has the welfare of the city and the band at heart to turn out and help to make the program a success and to swell the band treasury. The McGuire company is composed of foreign artists who have appeared in all the principal cities of Europe and who are now on their first American tour. Miss Eileen McGuire in her Irish songs stars the company, and is ably supported by Miss Lucy Webbling, entertainer, and Mr. Walter McRaye, humorist, in a repertoire of charming comedy sketches.

Of Course There's Something Wrong.

Red Lake county advertised for bids for the county printing, the same as is customary in other counties, but evidently the advertising was merely a blind, as the Red Lake Falls Gazette got the contract at 60 cents and 30 cents, while the Thief River Falls News offered to do the same work for 25 cents and 15 cents. Must be something wrong in Red Lake county.—Bemidji Sentinel.

The action of the county dads in letting the county printing shows that they have no intention of trying to serve the people and the tax payers, but it was to hell with the people we are running the business. Well that's what old King George said but he got put out of business on July 4th, 1776.—Sunbeam.

How's This for Minnesota?

Mrs. J. D. Hall of Reynolds reports a brood of chicks hatched at her place New Year's Day. The little strangers are standing the weather conditions very nicely and by the time the old biddies down in the southern part of the state get busy with their broods, the Todd county contingent will be crowing a welcome to them—that is the male members of the Todd county arrivals. They all have to go some to come up to old Todd.—Long Prairie Leader.

FARM ORCHARD AND GARDEN

NO GROUND FOR DISCOURAGEMENT.

Just because the Missouri, Michigan or New York orchardist reads of fruit returns from the mountain and Pacific coast states far surpassing any he has been able to secure is no reason why he should throw up the sponge, if he feels inclined to do so, and grub out his trees. Rather should he take account of the careful methods by which the western fruit ranchman is able to secure such high returns—namely, painstaking handling of the soil, great care in pruning and spraying, costly thinning, which insures fruit of a proper size, and lastly, and as important as any factor, co-operation in the matter of packing and marketing. Many a New England orchard has been rejuvenated and made immensely profitable by the employment of scientific methods in caring for it, and many another may be made a large source of revenue if handled in the same way. Nearness to market is another factor decidedly to the advantage of the eastern apple grower, as it costs about 90 cents a bushel to land the bushel box of fancy fruit from the Pacific coast in New York or Boston. Let eastern orchard owners make their orchards a primary instead of a second or third rate consideration and give them the attention that the western ranchman does his and they will be surprised at the results.

A NEW MEXICO QUERY.

A lady reader of these notes living near Mountainair, N. M., writes inquiring if strawberries will grow and do well in the rich chocolate soil of that section and if they will need covering during the winter. While the writer is not acquainted personally with the section in question, two or three general statements may be made which will be helpful. In the first place, chocolate soil is usually as rich in fertilizing elements as any other and would seem to be all right for the strawberry. A more important consideration would be sufficient moisture to insure the growth of the plants and the maturing of the fruit, and this would have to be supplied by ditch at needed times if the rainfall were not sufficient. Cultivation should be given often enough to keep the soil mellow and to conserve the moisture. If during the months when the plants were dormant the mercury did not go lower than 10 above zero, the bed would hardly need covering. However, in this connection it is well to keep in mind the fact that it is not degrees of cold that kill berry vines, but alternate thawing and freezing, and local conditions would determine to quite an extent the probable danger from this source.

BLOOD TOLD.

That blood will tell, even in the raising of corn, was nicely illustrated in the case of an Iowa grower who paid $5.35 per bushel for his seed at the time of the corn contest at the State Agricultural college. To prove to his own satisfaction the value of pure bred seed over the best seed selected from common corn, he planted the pure bred seed—Reid's Yellow Dent—in rows alongside the other corn. Both plots had the same stand and received the same cultivation and care. At husking time the pure bred corn yielded at the rate of seventy-one and a half bushels per acre, while the scrub corn gave a return of fifty-nine bushels, a difference of eleven and a half bushels per acre. Since a bushel of corn will plant seven acres it is quite clear that this amount of seed would produce an increased yield equal to seven times that on one acre, or eighty and a half bushels. If this corn was worth 50 cents a bushel, the bushel of seed was worth in crop returns $10.25 more than the common corn. It would be well for the corn grower to have instances of this in mind when he pays a long price for good seed corn next spring.

THE EVERLASTING RAT PEST.

Considering the enormous loss from the rat pest, placed at $100,000,000 annually in this country alone, every farmer and householder should do all in his power by means of traps, poisons and any other devices to reduce the number of the rodents to a minimum. That the war against them should be unending is indicated from their remarkable prolificacy, the adult female producing an average of ten young ones to the litter and from three to five litters in a season. One of the best methods of slow poisoning is one part of barytes mixed with eight parts of cornmeal and stirred into a stiff dough and portions of it placed where the rats will get hold of it. This has an advantage over strychnine or arsenic in that after getting it the rats have time to leave the buildings in which they happen to be in search of water. Cage and guillotine traps, cats and rat terriers are also effective aids in the work of destruction.

One's real rating as to character is as often indicated by the kind of eggs he turns in at the country grocer's as by the enrollment of his name as a member of the nearby kirk.

In buying pure bred cattle it is well for the purchaser to insist on a guarantee of freedom from tuberculosis and from infection with contagious abortion. There are other ailments he may steer shy of, but these are chief as well as most common.

Strictly used, the word "thoroughbred" refers to a definite breed of horses—running horses—and not to thoroughness or purity of breeding. In the same way the phrase "standard bred" refers to a breed of trotting horses. The word "pure bred" is properly used in referring to any breed of animals or fowls that is full, or pure, blooded.

There are sections in Idaho where the weather is so clear and the air so dry during the season of ripening and following that some growers make a practice of allowing blackberries to remain on the vines and evaporate in the sun. When sufficiently dry the canes are cut, run through a sort of thrasher and the dried fruit cleaned and packed.

The fellows who trusted to luck and left their potatoes undug until Oct. 13 last season had an experience they will not soon forget, as hundreds of thousands of bushels through all the northern states were ruined and rendered unmarketable by the cold snap of that date. With no starch factory or denatured alcohol distillery at hand they proved in many cases a total loss.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars that are squandered annually in wildcat investment schemes and blue sky enterprises could be saved for the investors if before letting loose of their money they would get an honest opinion as to the reliability of such concerns from a home banker. It would mean a few cents tied up in postage, but this would be a mighty cheap way out.

In view of the fatal freeze of Oct. 12 and 13, it will be necessary to set an earlier date than Oct. 15 as the limit within which one should select his seed corn. If Sept. 20 were the time chosen and every corn grower went into his best field and secured the soundest and earliest maturing ears and had them hung up to dry by that time and saw to it that they were properly stored during the winter months, the seed corn problem would be reduced to a minimum through all the northern part of the corn belt.

The housewife who is on her feet so much of the day throughout all months of the year should learn a lesson from her husband, who not only rides when mowing, raking, reaping and plowing, but even takes it easy by rigging a riding gear to follow his harrow. This idea she may put to good account by purchasing a light fifty cent stool, two feet high, and having it handy to sit on when doing work at which she would otherwise have to stand. In the course of a long day a good deal of energy may be saved in this way.

It would make the farmers of those states where the rainfall was very heavy during November and where the country roads were rendered well nigh impassable for weeks gasp if they could see figured out in dollars and cents the actual loss they sustained in the single item of increased expense in hauling their produce to market. In many localities it was impossible to stir at all, while in others but a small jag could be moved, and four horses were often required to do this. It seems strange, with agricultural products representing so large a value, that rural dwellers take so slight an interest in a question that in the aggregate means a loss of millions of dollars to them annually.

As with a child, the time for doing most effective work in shaping the character and type of a tree is at the start. For this reason it is better to purchase fruit trees that are a year old rather than two or three years. The low head, which is so highly prized by most orchardists, is best secured by cutting the young tree back to from eighteen inches to two feet the same season it is set. This induces the growth of sturdy lateral branches and gives the trunk a stocky character that is of great value in succeeding years. Whether the tree should be given the vase shaped open top or the round and more close growing top will depend to a great extent upon the climatic conditions prevailing.

There came to the writer's attention the other day the instance of a creamery patron who thought he would get rich more quickly by mixing melted tallow in the can of cream from which the driver's sample was taken, thereby increasing the test of the cream nearly 100 per cent. This went on until the suspicions of the buttermakers and directors were aroused by the presence of the cold, unmixed tallow left in the strainer at the creamery. One day a two quart sample of the doped cream was turned over to the state pure food inspector, who sent it to a chemist for analysis, when 60 per cent of the fat it contained was found to be plain beef suet, amounting to a pound and four ounces. With this as a starter suit was instituted and a fine of $50 and costs levied. A little later the directors of the creamery compelled the offender to pay back $400, the amount estimated that he had received as a result of the false tests. As it turned out it proved to be high priced tallow, and it is clear that the game was not worth the candle.

The very poor are thrice handicapped in that scarcity of food is usually accompanied by shortage of fuel and thinness of clothing.

A hot soapstone wrapped in a flannel cloth and put in the foot of the bed in a cold room is worth at least 25 cents per application and is about the only thing that makes life endurable in a below zero country.

The discovery a few years ago of large deposits of lignite or semi-formed soft coal in the Dakotas and the more recent manufacture of it into bricks or briquets give much promise to the Missouri valley country as a future manufacturing and industrial center.

The frost of winter cracks the water pipes, nips the vegetables stored in bin and cellar and kills tender fruits not well protected, but the service it performs in disintegrating and loosening the soil of the field and making it easy for the plowman to handle is beyond calculating, more than offsetting the harm it works.

While a majority of folks hanker for a larger measure of leisure than is theirs, the truth is that more people die from too little exercise than overwork after they reach the age of forty-five. Every person who can stand on two feet and move his hands is better off if he has some regular work and exercise, if it isn't more than walking.

A Wolf river apple weighing twenty-five ounces and measuring sixteen and five-eighths inches in circumference took first prize for size at the Spokane national apple show. A Spokane Beauty weighing forty-one ounces and measuring seventeen and one-eighth inches in circumference was exhibited, but it was disqualified because of bruises received in harvesting or packing.

Added to the fact that most corncribs are built too wide and without chance for proper ventilation is another cause which is responsible for the spoiling of much corn in the cribs during seasons like the past, when the ear does not dry out properly before husking, and that is a slipshod job of husking which leaves much silk and husks on the corn as it is cribbed, serving to still further prevent proper circulation of the air.

Hood river apple growers received the highest prices for their 1909 crop than for any yet recorded. They were bought by Steinhardt & Kelley of New York city and were handled through the local apple growers' union. Best Spitzenburgs brought $3.25 per bushel box, fancy Newtowns $2.25 to $2.40, fancy Jonathans $2, fancy Baldwins $1.90 and fancy Ortleys $2.25. The choice fruit was sold to Portland dealers at from $1.75 per box and less.

The grand champion fat steer of the 1909 international was King Ellsworth, a two-year-old pure bred Angus shown by the Kansas Agricultural college and weighing 1,750. The same animal was exhibited last year, when he weighed 1,400 pounds. His ration the past year has been corn, bran and oilmeal, with alfalfa hay. In the car lot exhibits the Shorthorns had the best of it, not only winning the championships in the fat and feeding classes, but the grand championship carload, the first time in the history of the big show, the prize bunch being a carload of yearlings.

It is probably safe to assume that if the true status of all dairy herds in the country could be known tuberculosis would be found one of the greatest sources of no profit cows. The dairyman who applies the tuberculin test to his herd and eliminates affected animals not only does the public a service by disposing of hotbeds of disease, but in the long run puts dollars in his own pocket. Should he add to the tuberculin the Babcock test, to tell him what his cows are doing along the line of butter fat production, he will be able to spot every undesirable individual in the herd.

Experiments which have been recently conducted by the agricultural department show that fruit like oranges, grapes and apples may have their life considerably extended by cooling to a temperature of 40 degrees before shipment. Normally fruit is picked and packed under warm conditions and, while it cools during shipment, does not cool rapidly enough to prevent the rapid ripening of some fruit and the decay of other fruit. It seems clear that this precooling will not only extend the area over which such fruit may be shipped, but it will improve its quality and reduce the amount of ice required in refrigeration.

Farmers' bulletin No. 380, published by the bureau of plant industry, treats of loco weed poisoning and has been issued largely in response to demands of ranchmen of the western plain and Rocky mountain states where the loco weed is found. While investigations into the matter have not been completed, some of the findings are of definite and practical value. The bulletin states that of the two varieties of loco weed, purple and white, the former, although the more poisonous, affects horses almost exclusively, as cattle and sheep rarely eat it. The white is eaten by all three animals and produces disease in all of them. The worst effects of the disease are noticed in animals which acquire a taste for the weed and eat it when other herbage is abundant. Locoed animals may recover under careful feeding and by being kept on a range from which the weed has been eradicated. The cure is hastened by the use of Fowler's solution for horses and strychnine for cattle. Loco weeds may be eradicated from fenced pastures by cutting the plant below the crown buds.

The fewer of these thirty cents on the dollar investment schemes a fellow ties his hard earned money up in, in the vain hope of making fabulous returns, the more quarters he will have at the end of the year.

The cotton crop of 1909, while not the largest on record, is likely to prove the most valuable, with lint fetching 13.7 cents per pound on the farm and cotton seed worth about $25 per ton. At these prices the crop will be worth about $850,000,000 to the growers.

The Massachusetts state board of health has made some investigations into the somewhat mooted question of the relative keeping quality of drawn and undrawn poultry, and its verdict is that if the entrails are so drawn that none of their contents are spilled inside the body the bird keeps better than in the undrawn state.

The history of Berkshire hogs goes back 125 years, the progenitors of the popular breed being described as large in size and of a sandy or brownish color spotted with black. The present day type is black, with white in face, on feet and end of tail. The first importation of Berkshires into America was made by a New Jersey breeder in 1832.

The first prize in the students' judging contests at the international fat stock show held at Chicago in December went to the team from the state college at Ames, Ia., who had 4940 points to its credit. The Ontario team won second place with 4741 points, the other college teams taking part ranking in the following order: Ohio, 4722; Nebraska, 4661; Missouri, 4622; Kansas, 4603; Texas, 4435. The Iowa team won first on cattle and hogs, Missouri first on horses and Ohio first on sheep.

According to Secretary Wilson's annual report for 1909, the American tea crop consisted of 12,000 pounds and was grown in South Carolina in co-operation with the department at Washington. The experimental work attempted on a small scale at Pierce, Tex., has been abandoned owing to unfavorable climatic conditions. The proposition the department officials are up against in the production of tea is the 15 to 20 cent wage paid to tea pickers in the orient. Unless machinery can be devised to do the work there done by hand the tea growing business will have to be given up.

Azoturia, a disease of the horse family that yearly takes off thousands of valuable individuals, is directly due to overfeeding with nitrogenous foods, like clover and alfalfa, and lack of regular exercise. The illness is brought on by an overloading of the circulatory system with unoxidized nitrogen drawn from the liver, where it accumulates. While there are cures for the disease, it is easily prevented by reducing the nitrogenous ration—the feeding of timothy and clean straw, instead of clover and alfalfa, and feeding a light mixed ration of corn and oats. Another help for the horse which does not have regular work is the run of a paddock, where it will get exercise enough to keep in good condition.

J. G. Imboden, a leading Illinois cattle feeder, in a recent address before the Corn Belt Meat Producers' association advised his hearers as feeders of cattle to buy the common kinds of steers rather than high grades, as they would be able to get them at about their own prices since in the case of the grades the owner had too much to say about the price he received. While not intended as such, there seems to be a very excellent argument here for the cattle raiser to produce the grade and high grade steers rather than the scrub, as the call for them is so strong on the part of buyers that there are never enough to supply the demand. This means that the price for this class of steers will always range high.

Whether part of a preconceived scheme or not, it is observable if one looks into the situation at all that our system of national economy, especially as regards transportation and manufacture, seems to be so adjusted as to give the transportation companies of the country the longest possible hauls on raw and finished products. A few illustrations come readily to mind. Cow hides are shipped largely to New England in the raw (one freight charge) and then shipped back all over the west in enormous quantities (another freight charge). The wool product of the great west crosses the continent to eastern mills largely, and when made into blankets and garments is shipped halfway across the continent to reach its consumers (two transportation charges). Instead of the New England states producing all the butter that they use, the bulk of it is shipped from the Mississippi valley, the freight charge being reduced so low that thousands of the hilly farms of the east have been abandoned because of the western competition, but the transportation company gets the freight. And so the list might be enlarged, including Texas onions and vegetables shipped to New York and Chicago, Pacific coast fruits, etc., those near big markets being knocked out by cheap freight rates granted to those living at a distance, and yet through it all the railroads securing a big slice of the proceeds for getting the product, whatever it may be, from producer to consumer. The development, which is certainly an interesting one, is on the increase, but whether best for the largest number of people in the long run remains to be seen.

SWEDISH RELIGIOUS AFFAIRS

State Church Is Coming More and More to See the Value of the Sunday School as a Feeder to the Church and Authorities Are Paying More Attention to the Children Than in Many Years Past.

SWEDEN.

Says a writer on Swedish church affairs: "The state church is coming to see more and more the value of the church, and the authorities are paying more attention to the children than in years past. In many of the churches the minister himself teaches a class besides acting as superintendent, in the work. Since the attempt of Lektor Waldenstrom to have religious instruction eliminated from the common schools, the question of religious instruction has become a very live one in the country. It will have the effect of calling attention of parents to the teaching, and it may be that wrong teaching and aesthetic teaching will be eliminated.

Prince Carl's new villa at Fridhem near Kolmorden, has about been completed. The villa is a three story building of wood, with a high, brown roof, covered with black brick. The facade, which faces southeast, is elevated by means of two balconies and in the middle section by a beautifully arranged terrace. Shortly before Christmas, the expensive furniture arrived and last week the prince and princess were to occupy their new home for the first time.

At a meeting of the Church Board management in Sweden some time ago a motion to establish a course in Sociology for ministers was lost after a short debate. Another motion to arrange an annual meeting of the clergy in each diocese and to revise the hand book on ministerial acts with reference to communion of the sick was also voted down. These matters are therefore, to remain as they have been heretofore in the church of Sweden.

An international tuberculosis congress is to be held in Rome in 1911 and the chairman of the organization Guido Bacelli, has issued invitations to the nations to send delegates. Sweden will have a representative from the National Anti-Swedish Tuberculosis society, which has appointed a committee to have charge of the arrangements for Sweden's participation in the congress.

During the years of 1902 to 1906 there were 3,787 suicides in Sweden. Of these there were 3090 male and 697 female. Nearly all of the male suicides were married men. While the percentage of suicides is small compared to that of the United States, it is still too large by far. It is a strange thing too that the percentage of male suicides is always larger than that of females.

A week ago there was a terrible storm in Stockholm. Roofs were blown off from houses and telegraph and telephone wires were torn down by the wind in nearly every section of the city. The storm which was accompanied by rain and snow was the severest which has been encountered in the Swedish capital for many a day.

Count Claes Lagergren, the only Swedish papal chamberlain to the pope in Rome, departed for the "holy city" the other day after spending a few weeks visiting friends and relatives in his native land. He is of course a strong Catholic and has become thoroughly Romanized.

The United States pension bureau paid out in pensions to former soldiers of the Civil war, who are at present residing in Stockholm, a sum of 20,000 crowns, during the past year. There are about the same amount in United States pensions expended in Gothenburg.

The rumor that the Duke of Connaught, father-in-law to the Swedish crownprince, will be appointed governor-general of Canada, has been received and commented on with universal satisfaction all over the country.

NORWAY.

There have been so many conflicting dispatches from Paris regarding the condition of Bjornstjerne Bjornson it is difficulty to know just whether he is better or worse. The Norwegian papers all admit that his health is broken and that he cannot hope to live very long. Parisian papers take a great deal of interest in Bjornson, referring to him as the "Norwegian Hugo," and publish daily bulletins regarding his condition. During his illness, however, he is showing astonishing lucidity of mind and cheerfulness of disposition. He is prone to make many little jokes on subjects of daily life, but is forbidden by his physicians to talk politics and discuss social questions.

There died in Christiania the other day a very benevolent woman, who during life gave away thousands and thousands of dollars to deserving poor. When she died she left a will which decreed that her entire fortune, which amounted to over 600,000 crowns should be devoted to charitable purposes. Of this sum she donated 300,000 crowns to merchants who had failed in business in Christiania. The other 300,000 crowns will go to various charities which will be of direct benefit to the poor.

Secretary Rygg of the Norwegian statistical bureau in a recent issue of the "Morgonbladet" makes a comparison between Norway's and Denmark's net indebtedness to foreign countries. According to Danish official statistics, Denmark has a stationary net indebtedness of 526,000,000 and 48,000,000 crowns of debts, which are kept in circulation. The stationary debt of Norway amounts to about 700,000,000 crowns. So far as the "moving" debts are concerned, Norway is thus a little better off than Denmark.

The church people of Norway are at present especially agitated over the separation of the church from the state. It seems, there are three parties: Those who wish to retain the State church; those who would only have a free church; and those who would have both and allow each person to select which he prefers.

The great Holmenkollen Ski turnament will take place Feb. 17, to 21. Great preparations are being made for the event as representatives from several foreign nations are expected to attend. It is the great carnival of the winter season and people from the country flock into Christiania and out to Holmenkollen to see the sport.

The school children of Arendahl have in the space of less than two years placed a sum of 10,600 crowns in the saving's bank of that little city. This shows what even children can do when they are taught to cultivate the spirit of "saving the pennies."

DENMARK.

A recent Copenhagen dispatch says: Popular anger has been excited here by an apparently authenticated statement that one of the university professors was aware, before Dr. Cook was honored here for his alleged discovery of the north pole, that Cook had been detected swindling in money matters in Greenland as early as in 1894. The professor is said to have kept the matter secret so as not to prevent the university from conferring a degree on Cook. The university's committee is still investigating Cook's original notebooks. It is stated they have been found to contain suspicious recent corrections. The question is discussed whether the committee will investigate Commander Peary's papers. Professor Salomonsen says the question has no practical interest, as Peary is not likely to submit his papers to th committee, fearing the result. Professor Stroemgren, on the contrary, expects the papers to be submitted to the committee.

In the country districts people are co-operating in buying feed stuffs and in marketing eggs for export, and there are at present thirty co-operative bacon factories; but in the line of co-operative stores everything is concentrated in the cities. There are 1,200 co-operative stores in the country, with 180,000 members, but only two per cent of them are outside the cities and towns. They do an aggregate business of $13,500,000 a year. In Denmark the first co-operative dairy business began in 1882, and now there are 1,085 in the kingdom, with 158,170 members and an anual production of 176,000,000 pounds of butter. The milk supply of the co-operative dairies amounts to 85 per cent of Denmark's total.

A century ago, the Danish people were among the poorest people of Europe. According to one of the newspaper correspondents, their per capita wealth exceeds that of France, Holland, Norway, Sweden or any other country on the continent. This great advance is but an index of an equally great increase which has taken place in their popular industrial intelligence and efficiency, and also of the development of a fine national spirit and social morality.

The recent Aarhus exposition which was so widely advertised and which drew thousands of visitors from foreign lands, was not a success from a financial standpoint. It is now learned on good authority that the exposition was run at a total loss of 200,000 crowns.

There has been a great deal of sickness in Copenhagen during the past month and physicians have been very busy. There is also much suffering among the poor and the charity associations have their hands full.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

Nine lives were lost and six persons injured in one of the worst storms that ever visited New York city. The total snowfall when the skies cleared was 14½ inches, second only to the blizzards of 1899, when 15½ inches fell, and of 1888, in which Senator Roscoe Conklin lost his life, when 20.9 inches fell.

Another tragedy of the sea has been written into the record of marine disasters on the North Pacific coast through the loss of thirty lives in the wrecking of the iron steamer Czarina on the north spit of the Coos Bay bar. Only one member of the crew of thirty-one escaped with his life.

Advices from the flooded district of the San Pedro, Los Angeles and Salt Lake route show that ninety-three miles of track are gone and that the road is, in fact, practically washed out in long stretches. It is estimated that it will cost $14,000,000 to rebuild the line.

Mrs. Julius Deutsch and her two-year-old son were burned to death at Janesville, Wis. Mrs. Duetsch poured kerosene oil on the fire in the kitchen stove to make it burn more rapidly, when the flames shot out and enveloped her and her child.

Fitzgerald to again fill the mayor's chair, this time for a four-year term, giving him 46,968 votes and a plurality of 1,494 over his nearest opponent. George A. IN MINNESOTA RATE CASES

State Contends That Great Northern Is Overcapitalized.

That the Great Northern railroad is overcapitalized many millions of dollars is the contention which the state, through Attorneys E. S. Durment and E. T. Young, sought to establish in the hearing now being conducted in the freight rate cases before Charles E. Otis, master in chancery, at St. Paul.

The principal witness was C. W. Hillman, an expert accountant who has been employed by the state to go over the books of the Great Northern for the purpose of ascertaining, if possible, the actual amount of money which was put into the building of the road and the acquiring of its properties and also to show some of the procedures in the matter of bookkeeping and its method of handling and treating various matters.

Among the points brought out in Mr. Hillman's testimony was his showing that the actual cost of the St. Paul and Pacific when it was bought up and reorganized as the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba, the road which afterward became the Great Northern, was, in round figures, $10,000,000.

Yet the first entry on the books of the Manitoba road, after its reorganization, was the cost of the old road, which was placed at a little less than $31,000,000, a sudden increase of about $21,000,000.

SENT TO PRISON FOR LIFE

Frank Sadler Sentenced for Murder of Lawrence Ropre at Ely.

Frank Sadler, convicted at the last term of district court for the range at Virginia of murder in the first degree, was sentenced by Judge Hughes in district court at Duluth to confinement in the state prison at Stillwater for life.

Sadler was convicted of killing Lawrence Ropre at Ely on Aug. 8.

Sadler, Ropre and several other men had been drinking at the boarding house of Frank Bergant. There were some words between Sadler and Ropre and shortly after Ropre left the house, Sadler having preceded him. Later on Ropre was found lying on the ground with a gaping cut in his head and Sadler standing by. Sadler had no weapon in his hand, but an axe was found near the place.

Ropre died and Sadler's conviction on circumstantial evidence followed.

THREE SAVED FROM DEATH

Mrs. Galanter, Babe and Maid Snatched From Burning Home.

Michael Wiseman, business partner of William Galanter of Paynesville, saved the lives of Mrs. Galanter, her infant son and a young maid.

Fire starting from a defective flue partially burned the residence occupied by the Galanters. Mr. Galanter was not at home, but his partner, who was attracted by the glare from the flames, dragged out Mrs. Galanter and her babe. Both were severely burned about the head and face, but will recover.

Re-entering the house Wiseman found the maid servant, Miss Minnie Welk, and also succeeded in getting her to a place of safety. She, too, was severely burned, but will live. Wiseman was slightly injured.

BUT NOT ON THE SAME DAY

Pinchot and Ballinger to Talk at Minnesota Conservation Congress.

Richard A. Ballinger, secretary of the interior, and Gifford Pinchot, former chief forester, are coming to St. Paul, but not on the same day. Both men have accepted the invitation of Governor Eberhart to attend the Minnesota conservation and agricultural development congress to be held in St. Paul March 16, 17, 18 and 19.

The announcement was made by the governor at a meeting in Minneapolis where he, as president of the congress, spoke to the editors of agricultural papers and the newspapers published in foreign languages.

Secretary Ballinger will speak the first day of the congress and Gifford Pinchot the last day.

WOMEN NARROWLY ESCAPE

Fire at St. Paul Causes Damage of About $100,000.

The American House Furnishing company at St. Paul was damaged to the extent of probably $100,000 by fire.

There were several narrow escapes and one woman collapsed while being carried from the fourth story of the building, but no one was seriously injured.

After the firemen had worked with the fire for more than an hour the flames broke out afresh and there was danger of the walls falling, particularly the east wall. The Pullman buffet, next to the American building, was in danger of being crushed under this wall and the occupants were ordered out.

DECIDES RED OIL IS LEGAL

Minnesota Supreme Court Sustains District Judge on Test Case.

"Red oil" may still be sold throughout Minnesota to be used for illuminating purposes. The state supreme court decided the appeal to the case of the Bartles Oil company of St. Paul against H. J. Lynch, state oil inspector. The inspector undertook to stop the sale of the red oil on the ground that the coloring matter is an adulteration, and might be used to conceal evidence of inferior quality. Mr. Lynch was overruled by the district court, and now by the supreme court which says that coloring matter is not necessarily adulteration.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

It is not the retailer, but the large manufacturer that is responsible for the high cost of living, according to W. E. McEwen, state labor commissioner. There is still competition between the retailers, as well as between laborers, so the profits of the former and the wages of the latter are kept down, but almost everything they buy is controlled by a monopoly price.

According to figures furnished the state tax commission by the auditor's department the saloons of Minnesota paid into the state treasury $2,600,950 in 1909. The number of saloons contributing this amount to the various municipalities is 3,513 and the license exacted from each varies from $500 to $1,600 a year.

The annual meeting of the Minnesota Probate Judges' association was held in Duluth last week. Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, J. B. Middlecoff, Duluth; vice president, R. A. Watkins, Carlton; secretary and treasurer, A. F. Klasen, St. Cloud.

Coal has been found near Lincoln, in Morrison county. Several farmers living in the northern part of the county uncovered coal on their places and further investigation has revealed the fact that the supply seems to be large in the hilly country between Lincoln and Motley.

The stand of Governor Eberhart against capital punishment was endorsed by forty of the eighty-five county sheriffs of Minnesota, who were present at the eighteenth annual meeting of the State Sheriffs' association at St. Paul.

The Minnesota representatives in congress have been requested by the German Roman Catholic Central society, with headquarters in St. Paul, to support legislation looking towards the extirpation of the "white slave" traffic.

Dr. Charles M. Jordan, for eighteen years superintendent of the Minneapolis public schools, has been re-elected by the board of education for three years at an increased salary.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Morris Watson, nineteen years old, was fatally shot near Redwood Falls. He and Ed Kromer took guns with them when they went after some hay and, seeing some prairie chickens, began firing from the hayrack, which frightened the horses. Kromer fell backward and his gun hit the rack and discharged the remaining load into Watson's left shoulder.

Amel Scheurer, who recently sustained severe frost bites while spending a night in a woodshed in Kasota, where he was employed in railroad work, is recovering in a Mankato hospital, although it was found necessary to amputate both feet, portions of every finger and to remove an abscess from his back.

The case against Mr. and Mrs. William Schwandt, two of the four indicted at Mankato for the murder of H. J. Ledbeter, was dismissed by Judge Pfau on motion of the county attorney on the ground that there was no evidence to connect them with the crime.

Driven almost to insanity by business troubles and continued illness Franklin Bertram, sixty years old, entered the bathroom at his home in St. Paul and, standing in front of a mirror, put a revolver to his temple and sent a 32-caliber bullet into his brain, dying instantly.

The Farmers' elevator, on the Farmers' Grain and Shipping company's railroad at Olmstead, has been destroyed by fire. The fire, it is said, caught from a hot box. There were about 8,000 bushels of grain in the building.

Dolla King of Caledonia, this state, a waitress at the New Central hotel at Redfield, S. D., committed suicide by taking carbolic acid. No cause for the act is known. She had been employed at Redfield about three months.

A daughter of Henry Kahl of Pipestone allowed her baby sister to fall from her arms, striking on its head on the floor. The accident resulted in contusion of the brain and the little one died a few hours later.

Walter Whitehead, the Duluth negro pugilist, who was stabbed by Ralph Jones, another negro, some days ago, is dead.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

George W. Batchelder, aged eighty-four years, is dead at Faribault after a lingering illness. He was one of the oldest pioneers of the state, reaching Faribault on foot in 1855. He was a native of Vermont. He was elected to the state senate in 1872 on the Democratic ticket and served two years.

Mrs. J. W. Soule, mother of Mrs. Orier M. Orr of St. Paul and one of the early pioneers of Rochester, is dead at Rochester. Although nearly eighty years of age Mrs. Soule was in fairly good health until a few days before the end, when she suffered a stroke of paralysis.

William A. Van Slyke, one of the most prominent of the remaining old settlers of St. Paul, is dead, aged seventy-six. Mr. Van Slyke had suffered from an affection of the heart for a year or more but had been confined to the house for only two weeks.

James M. Dean, who started a nursery in New Canada, Ramsey county, forty-six years ago and had resided there ever since, is dead at the age of eighty-six years.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

UNDERWOOD WINS CONTEST

Elected President of Minnesota Agricultural Society.

The plan proposed by State Librarian John King resulted in the election of J. M. Underwood of Lake City as the new president of the State Agricultural society, at the annual meeting of the organization at St. Paul, and J. J. Furlong of Austin, until recently first vice president of the society and Mr. Underwood's strongest competitor in the race, retires from the board of managers.

The election of Underwood came as the finish of a hot fight which has interested the whole state and the way in which King and other Underwood supporters pushed through the decisive stroke will be handed down in the traditions of the Agricultural society.

Close observers of events believed that Furlong had the best of the situation and even when the meeting was called to order there seemed to be reason for the confident predictions of his managers. There were the votes of contested delegations, including thirty votes, hanging in the balance, however. These delegations represented ten societies whose right to participate in the proceedings had been called in question.

Mr. King conceived the idea of voting on these societies separately and by viva voce vote and the idea was put through. The first motion was declared carried and the second. As fast as the delegates from the societies were admitted they joined in the vote for the remaining applicants and the whole ten were voted in really before many of the delegates realized just what was going on. In the bunch of voters thus admitted there were enough to swing the balance of power and Underwood received 163½ votes to Furlong's 156. Mr. Furlong moved to make the vote unanimous, which was done. The other officers elected are:

First vice president, C. M. Griggs, St. Paul; second vice president, E. P. Stilwell, Minneapolis; members of board of managers, F. W. Murphy, Wheaton (re-elected); C. T. Craig, Duluth; W. W. Sivright, Hutchinson; T. H. Canfield, Lake Park.

Death of St. Paul Recluse Reveals Life of Miser.

Papers indicating that J. C. Lounsberry, the aged recluse who was found dead in his room at St. Paul, was probably worth considerably more than $100,000, that there was some dark secret in connection with his life and that he had fears that he was about to be killed were found by Fred Carpenter, secretary to Coroner D. C. Jones, when the man's trunk was searched.

That the man was a miser and that his manner of living was like that found in many characters of fiction, but seldom seen in life, is shown by the agreement he made with Mrs. F. Foulk, his landlady, when he took the room last September.

"I will take the room and pay promptly for it if you will never pass the threshold or let any one else pass it," he told her.

Lounsberry enforced this rule rigidly, even making his own bed, doing his own washing and mending and slipping in and out of the room at odd hours day and night as though afraid some one might see inside.

Entries in notebooks, of which a trunk almost full was found, showed that he lent money in sums ranging as high as $15,000 and that he held notes on some of the largest business firms in Minneapolis and St. Paul.

Members of these firms, when questioned, said that they knew little of his life, except that he was a queer character and was regarded as a miser.

FATAL WRECK NEAR DULUTH

Fireman Dies Under Wheels of Engine in Collision.

In a head on collision between a light engine and a freight train on the Northern Pacific line near Smithville, a suburb of Duluth, one man was killed and another seriously injured.

Morris Hedberg, a fireman, twenty-three years old, was killed outright, his body being horribly mangled under the wheels of the engine. Joe Lampert, another fireman, escaped with his life. He received a number of painful bruises. It is thought that a misunderstanding of signals is responsible for the wreck.

Educator Dies on Train.

Professor William Robertson, superintendent of the Crookston experimental station of the State Agricultural school and head of the Crookston School of Agriculture, who was on the way from Crookston to St. Paul to attend the meeting of the State Agricultural society, was found dead in his berth on Great Northern train No. 3 when it reached Minneapolis. Mr. Robertson was about fifty years of age.

A CABBAGE SNAKE QUERY.

A lady reader of these notes living near Massillon, O., writes making inquiry if there is any ground for the impression existing in some localities that the cabbage snake or worm is poisonous, or, rather, if cabbages inhabited by them are such, she having found one twelve inches long coiled up in a bunch about as large as a hickorynut. There was quite a stir over this matter three or four years ago, and enough was published in the papers so that the cabbage growers of the country lost many thousands of dollars. With a view to getting at the truth about the matter the agricultural department at Washington made a thorough investigation at the time and reported that there was no connection and could be no connection whatever between the presence of these long white worms in cabbages and the illness or death of persons eating them. The probabilities are that if deaths ever did occur from eating cabbage they were due rather to the fact that the cabbages had been sprinkled with paris green after they had begun to head or were stale when eaten, ptomaine poisoning resulting from the process of decay which had already set in. It is true that the mere idea of one of these snakes being in a cabbage and being boiled up with it is calculated to upset one's stomach, but that it produces a poison is entirely beyond the range of possibility. If our inquirer is of an investigating turn of mind she may demonstrate the truth of the above claims by boiling the snake up in some milk and feeding it to a kitten. Should there be any truth whatever in the poison theory the kitten will show the effects of it. If the kitten is not affected it is safe to conclude that a child or grown person would not be.

A SEVERE CRITICISM.

There has been much criticism recently of the method which is followed by the government in the disposal of public lands, which requires the would be homesteader to travel hundreds or thousands of miles to register for a drawing when hardly one person in 800 can possibly be successful. One of the severest critics of this system in vogue is President Hill of the Great Northern road, which has been benefited to the extent of millions of dollars in car fare through the transportation of folks to these land drawings. In speaking of the Flathead Indian reservation drawing in western Montana, Mr. Hill says that less than 2 per cent of the people who registered had a chance to draw any land at all, while a good share of the claims which were thrown open to entry were well nigh worthless. He concludes: "I have met lots of people who gave up good positions in the east and went out there, only to be bitterly disappointed. The thing is entirely impracticable and on the order of a swindle to take the people's money away and give it to the railroads." In view of such a condemnation as this, coming as it does from a beneficiary of the system at present in vogue, it would seem that Uncle Sam might well see his way clear to devise a more just and less expensive method of disposing of his public domain.

A CLAM HATCHERY.

The pearl button manufacturers of the country feel much pleased over the prospect of the clam hatchery which is to be erected at Fairport, a little town near Muscatine, Ia. The work is to be in charge of officials of the bureau of fisheries and will cost about $60,000. The plant will consist of buildings, pumping station and laboratories, and sixty acres of land, the greater portion of which is sloping and will be cut up into a series of some fifty terraced ponds, the water being pumped into those on the higher level and gradually seeping through to those below. So closely have the American streams in which clams abound been dredged in the past few years that the supply bids fair to become exhausted unless precautions are taken to protect and propagate them artificially.

GOOD LIME FOR LAND.

Replying to a query relative to the application of the limestone byproduct of beet sugar factories to sour or acid soils, the Illinois experiment station states that such product will be as valuable for this purpose as finely ground limestone, provided the burnt lime used does not contain too much magnesium, which element should not exceed 5 or 6 per cent. Where it does not contain magnesium in excess it has some advantages over natural ground limestone in that it contains much of the phosphorus of the sugar beet, together with considerable quantities of organic nitrogen from the protein and albumenoid compounds of the beets.

The great agricultural labor of the coming years will not be devoted to developing virgin lands so much as conserving and restoring the fertility of soils already under cultivation.

The danger of vegetables in the cellar freezing on the severest nights may be reduced by having a tub or two or three pailfuls of water there. Water is more susceptible to the action of frost than vegetables and will therefore freeze first.

Owing to the fact that very many of the Danish cows are tethered while at pasture, their owners drive the water to them instead of driving the cows to water, as is customary in America and some other countries where larger pastures are the rule.

There is probably no factor in the winter feeding of the flock of poultry that has more to do in getting results in eggs than in making the hens scratch for what they get to eat. A loafing hen stuffed chiefly with corn never has laid to speak of in the winter or any other time and never will.

The fact that a fellow names his farm is no proof that he is boastful or stuck on himself, but simply that he considers what he is doing sufficiently worth while so that he is not ashamed to have the public know to whom the place belongs. If a fellow doesn't believe in naming his farm, there is doubtless a practical reason for it that is not far to seek.

The 1909 corn crop is far and away the most valuable ever raised, its worth being placed at $1,720,000,000. While in quantity it is less than the crop of 1906, there was still a total of 2,767,000,000 bushels, which is 3.5 per cent greater than the average for the past five years. The value of the 1909 crop exceeds by 36 per cent the value of the crops for the past five years.

Careful investigations which have been carried on in California in connection with the pear thrips show that from 70 to 73 per cent of the thrips may be destroyed by means of deep plowing in the fall and from 90 to 97 per cent of the remainder by proper spraying under high pressure in a downward direction with a combination spray of dilute tobacco extract and distillate oil emulsion.

The grower of spring or hard wheat on land worth $50 an acre, with a yield that the past year averaged but fifteen bushels per acre in the spring wheat belt, is up against a practical proposition—namely, his returns at prevailing prices after expenses are paid don't leave him a fair return on his investment. He must either raise a variety of wheat that will yield more bushels to the acre or quit raising wheat altogether except in a three or four year rotation.

Every housewife should be in possession of "Care of Food In the Home," a very practical bulletin (farmers' No. 375) by Mrs. Mary Hinman Abel and prepared under the supervision of the office of experiment stations of the department of agriculture at Washington. The publication contains a world of information about a great variety of subjects, while the subject matter is tersely put, and to the point. It may be had free by applying to one's senator or representative at Washington.

One of the chief drawbacks to sod in the orchard or a mulching system which involves a lot of dry litter about the trees is the danger from fire, especially in the spring, when things have dried out by warm winds and before the green herbage starts. Where it is deemed best for any good reason to keep an orchard in sod this fire danger should be guarded against by having a strip plowed around the orchard, which will stop a fire originating outside, while occasional furrows in the orchard will prevent the spread of a fire from one part of the orchard to another.

It is strange that the stock judges at the big shows don't insist that animals outside of the fat steer class ripe for slaughter should come before them for honors in normal breeding trim instead of the overstuffed, fat and logy condition which characterizes so many animals in the show ring. Especially is this true of the heavier breeds of cattle, which have to be stuffed and polished for weeks and put into an unnatural condition in order to fit them for exhibition. The harm in the system lies in the fact that it gives a wrong impression and leads many a breeder to believe that unless an animal has mountains of fat on it it is not well bred, which is as far as can be from the truth.

John Sundberg of Iowa, whose record of producing 155 bushels of corn per acre the past season was mentioned in these notes, will have to take a back seat for Mr. Batts of Wake county, N. C., who the past year raised 226 2-3 bushels on an acre of ground, as certified to by the state commissioner of agriculture and the chairman of the Raleigh board of trade. This corn would not rank high as viewed by corn show standards, but it delivered the goods—the shelled corn. The variety was Cocke's Prolific, which on the acre in question averaged four ears to the stalk, some stalks carrying as many as eight ears. The blue ribbon for the highest yield in 1908 was carried off by a grower in the same county, with 181 bushels.

Mastication.

"The body is a manufactory," said a doctor recently. "It has to manufacture bone and blood and muscle and brain out of bread and butter, eggs, beef and milk, and a wonderful process it is. Now, the first part of the process takes place in the mouth, and, as in most factories, the first is the most important. If a wrong start is made, everything that follows is put wrong. If the food isn't well masticated and mixed with the saliva, the stomach, the liver and the intestines are thrown out of gear; consequently most of the more advanced doctors are paying a great deal of attention to the condition of their patients' teeth. They know, to garble Shakespeare a bit, that 'good digestion waits on mastication, and health on both."—New York Tribune.

How Letters Strike Our Eyes.

Roman letters of various sizes are commonly called into request by oculists in testing vision. Recent experiments show great differences in the ease with which the various letters are recognized by the same person. T is especially difficult of recognition and is apt to be mistaken for Y. By a similar optical illusion the angle of L is rounded off, making the letter resemble a reversed J. V is the easiest of all letters to recognize, and O presents little difficulty. K is more easily recognized than H, which resembles it closely, and both N and Z are easily recognized. A is easily guessed at from its general form, but is difficult of positive recognition, including distinct perception of the horizontal line. E and F are among the most difficult of all letters.

TELLS ABOUT DRAINAGE

Allen W. Clark, of Fram, Writes an Interesting Letter to a Prospective Settler.

Gives Some Facts About the Big Drainage Scheme in Eastern Marshall County.

Allen W. Clark, of Fram, who is taking such an interest in the development of Eastern Marshall county, and is the father of the big ditching operations soon to be completed there, has written an interesting letter to a prospective settler living in the southern part of the state, which we will reproduce in part. Mr. Clark hopes to live (and we sincerely hope he will) to see a settler on every quarter section of land in Eastern Marshall county, and while we do not wish this most estimable gentleman a premature death, it is our opinion that he will have to "shuffle off this mortal coil" in a hurry or he will see it. The letter which Mr. Clark wrote to the prospective settler is as follows:

The settlers on the western part of the Red Lake Indian reservation, between Thief Lake and river, and east to Red lakes, are, under state and national laws, draining 1050 square miles in low lands which are of a swampy nature, too wet to farm, but of the best of soils.

The lands can be taken on homestead, only. Some are free lands and some are $1.25 per acre payable on final proof, which may be made any time, on either kind, after 14 months, under the commutation clause, by paying $1.25 per acre, but either may run 7 years.

The drainage charges are a separate debt and is expected to be about $1.72 per acre collected as taxes yearly, and runs for 20 years with interest at 6 per cent. The first 5 years the interest only is taxed, but after that one fifteenth of the principal must be added each year.

I should judge that about ½ of this land is vacant, but it is all low and swampy. We are draining all the lands and using the earth from the ditches for the roads, which are needed about as much as the ditches. Drainage charges follow on government lands as well as on deeded.

There are settlements scattered all through this territory wherever the land is high enough to farm, with stores and creameries and post-offices. Nearly all the school districts are organized and there are several churches.

Fram is on the western edge, 18 miles east of Middle River, the getting off place for settlers and our nearest station.

About ⅙ only of this land is too wet at all times to farm and even this is dry enough generally to use during the haying season.

Thousands of bushels of blueberries and cranberries grow here and for the most part are left to rot on the ground. Mr. Groby and his family, neighbors, picked a large wash-tub full of blueberries in a day and said that cranberries could be scooped up by handfuls, acres and acres of each kind. We ourselves have abundance of red and black raspberries, and 5 year-old apple trees from seeds, all doing well. No winter-killing to speak of; would have had some apples but for my boy's billy goat; he climbed the trees and ate them up, or down.

Has Faith in the Country.

Oscar Hovelsoe, one of the bright young farmers living out near Germantown, was in the city last week, having been down to Red Lake Falls to attend to some business matters. Mr. Hovelsoe is a firm believer in the future of the Germantown country and believes that when the ditches are completed up there next year it will be one of the best sections of Marshall county.

The Soo Doing Things.

The Soo will have its direct line from Warren to Duluth ready for carrying this year's crops. All grading contracts must be completed by July 1. It is claimed that the company also has in mind building a line from Thief River Falls to Warroad, passing through Marshall county east of Thief river. Surely, the Soo is a "big Injun" when it comes to building new railroads.—Warren Sheaf.

A Pioneer Dead.

Joachim Huot, who had long been a resident of Wylie, died at six o'clock Sunday night, at the home of his son, Regis Huot, with whom he had resided for the past fourteen years.

Deceased was eighty-eight years old. He was born in Montreal and resided there until he came west to live with his son. He is survived by three sons, Regis, Leon and Euchrist, all whom reside in the vicinity of Wylie. Mrs. Huot died two years ago. Funeral services were held at the Catholic church at Louisville, at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning, Rev. Fr. Theillion officiating.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

FARM RECORD BEST OF ALL

Minnesota Wheat Crop Worth More Than all Gold Mined in U. S. and Alaska.

Our Corn Crop Brought More Money Than all the Silver Mined.

We hear a good deal every year about the wonderful record made by our western states in the production of gold and silver, and we are often inclined to believe that farming is a slow business as compared with mining.

This is not the case, however, as the figures prepared by the government will show. Individually the farmer is infinitely more successful than the miner, and collectively the farm products sold each year make the records of the gold and silver production look like the proverbial "thirty cents".

Most people consider statistics as something that are decidedly uninteresting, and perhaps a majority of our readers do not like to pursue figures, even though they show a most interesting condition of affairs. We are going to give a few figures, nevertheless, to show the relative value of farm products as compared with the output of the mines of precious metals.

Taking the statistics furnished for 1908, by the United States Geological Survey and the Department of the Mint as authority for the figures relating to the production of gold and silver, and the report of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, as authority for the figures on crop yields, a comparison discloses the following brief, but interesting facts:

The state of Minnesota alone produced as much wheat as the value of all the gold mined in the entire United States and Alaska. All the gold mined in the United States during 1908, amounted to $94,560,000, while the Minnesota wheat crop last year was worth $94,562,000. This is figuring wheat at a dollar a bushel in the home market. Just now wheat is worth well above the dollar mark, but it is safe to figure the average price for the past season at $1.00 per bushel.

Another significent thing relates to our corn crop as compared by the record made by the silver miners. Minnesota has never been classed among the big corn states, yet the value of our last years corn crop, at 50 cents per bushel, was as much as the value of all the silver mined in the entire United States and Alaska thrown in.

Minnesota last year produced 58,464,000 bushels of corn, worth 50 cents per bushel, or $29,232,000. All the silver mined in 1908 in the entire United States and Alaska amounted to only $28,050,000.

These figures alone show what the mighty force the farmers are in the great scheme of civilization and how important they are in the nation. The above figures deal with only two crops of this great state. It may, however, be noted further that Minnesota produced last year about 90,000,000 bushels of oats, more than 31,000,000 bushels of barley, close to 2,000,000 bushels of rye, more than one million and one-half tons of hay, more than 4,000,000 bushels of flax, 75,000 bushels of buckwheat and almost 18,000,000 bushels of potatoes. As a potato growing state we are a long way ahead of Indiana, in fact we produce twice as many potatoes as does Indiana. We also hold a long lead in the production of potatoes over Ohio, Illinois and Iowa, and are only excelled in potato production by Michigan and Wisconsin.

If we add to the figures of agricultural products the value of our dairy products—butter and cheese—the sum total would be little short of appalling. We might then go still farther and give the sum total of our annual ore production and the value of our timber and other products, but this is not our purpose.

We present the above figures just to show what a great agricultural state Minnesota is, and how much more valuable farm products are than gold and silver.

Want Restrictions Removed.

Indians on the White Earth reservation will petition congress to remove every restriction against the sale of the lands and ask that reservation walls be obliterated. The petition will be carried to Washington by John W. Carl, a mixed-blood Indian, center on the Minnesota football team of 1899, formerly a farmer. Carl's petition declares there are not more than fifty full-blooded Indians on the reservation.

Should the movement be successful, all the White Earth reservation lands will be thrown on the market and the recent government report of fraud and chicanery will be set aside, hundreds of titles disposed off by Indians to outsiders will be cleared and the Indian will be left to work out his own salvation.

Charges are made not only against the recent government investigation, but against the Indian methods of Government in general. Mr. Carl said the result of the investigation had been so to fog the momentary situation that the mixed-blood Indian who now wishes to dispose of his land cannot get more than a quarter of its value.

Intoxicating Extracts Next.

Lemon and vanilla extracts are the next things W. E. Johnson, government Indian agent, is going after in the reservation countries of the northern part of Minnesota, where he has just closed nearly sixty saloons.

Mr. Johnson has found by long experience that the closing of saloons and the shutting off of whiskey itself is invariably followed by some substitute, which "Poor Lo" resorts to. In Minnesota it is the flavoring extracts, according to W. G. Calderwood, secretary of the state prohibition committee. Some of these extracts contain as high as 40 per cent of alcohol and a couple of small bottles are guaranteed to produce a drunken Indian.—Fertile Journal.

Splendid Entertainment.

Mr. Eckhardt remained in this country, married, settled down in Canada, and from the time this most remarkable family were little tots they have been taught the ringing of bells and other musical accomplishments until today they stand the undisputed Premiers of Swiss Bell Ringers. This wonderful family will appear at the Presbyterian church Jan. 27th., 1910.

COMMUNITY BREEDING

Charles Nelson, Farmers' Institute Worker, Tells How It is Done.

Shows How Farmers of Jefferson County, Wisconsin Profit by It.

It became necessary for the author of this sketch to purchase a carload of special purpose dairy stock in the spring of 1908. In company with Forest Henry of Dover, Minnesota, we made the trip to southern Wisconsin where the farmers have developed the different breeds of dairy stock on a large scale.

We settled at Fort Atkinson in Jefferson county, because in the neighborhood we could buy in carload lots, picking from large numbers. On one side of the city farmes raised Guernseys and on another side, Holsteins. One day we examined 240 cows (Guernseys.) We made our purchase and the day I shipped, another dairyman shipped a carload of highgrade Holsteins.

Buyers were coming from Illinois, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota and other states to buy dairy cows, because farmers were confining themselves to certain breeds and could supply what was wanted.

This little county of only twenty-four townships is shipping out stock in this way amounting to over 600,000, besides something like $2,000,000 worth of dairy products annually.

Grade cows were selling for from $40 to 100. A common price for a good cow is $75. Aside from the cost of foundation stock, it costs no more to produce such cows than it costs to produce common cows worth 40 each. Land here was worth $125 to $150 per acre.

Wherein did the practice of these farmers differ from ours? For more than twenty years they have practiced one thing, viz: keeping a registered sire at the head of the herd, sometimes several farmes owning one in company. They did not keep a sire of one breed one year and of another breed the next. They have gotten away from the delusion that each one is perfectly independent and may do as he pleases. But they have gotten together for the purpose of breeding a definite breed of cattle for a definite purpose and are making large profits as a result.

A Correction.

The News has been requested to make some corrections regarding charges this paper has made against Andrew Ellingson, whose recent appointment as postmaster at Highlanding created such an uproar. Although our opinion of Ellingson has not changed one iota, we have no desire to represent facts different than they are. In a former article we stated that Mr. Ellingson, when he was elected as a delegate to the Republican county convention, had been instructed by the voters there to vote for D. P. O'Neill for chairman of the convention. This was not so, as no instructions were given. He did, however, promise before he was elected to vote for O'Neill and after he had been elected gave dozens of promises to do this very same thing as did also W. G. Hunt, the other delegate from this town. Hunt kept his word, but Ellingson did not.

The other correction desired is that in referring to the resolution adopted by the Farmers' Club out there in which the appointment of Andrew Ellingson was denounced, we stated that the membership of the club was thirty-seven. This we believe is correct, with the exception that the inference might be drawn that the thirty-seven were all farmers. The membership of the club includes the wives and children of farmers.

Peanut Shells for Breakfast.

An Associated Press dispatch from Chicago, dated Jan. 3, says:

The Chicago Federation of Labor yesterday adopted resolutions calling upon the National Pure Food Commission to investigate if peanut shells constitute the basic element in the manufacture of breakfast foods.

"In a recent freight train wreck it was discovered that several cars consigned to breakfast food concerns were loaded with peanut shells from the peanut butter factories in the south", said Pres. John Fitzpatrick.

Another Big Ditch.

Geo. A. Ralph, engineer of the state drainage board, arrived the first of the week with a crew of men, who are at work, making a survey on snow shoes over the swamp lands in the south eastern part of this county for a proposed state ditch, which will drain Twin Lake into Tamarack River and reclaim thousands of acres of fertile agricultural lands and provide homes for many more people.—Karlstad Advocate.

School Notes.

On Friday afternoon of this week the Knox pupils will present an exhibit of their school work. All interested persons are cordially invited to spend the afternoon at the school, visiting the various rooms and examining the productions of the students.

A number of basketball games will be played next Thursday evening at the rink. A city team of college graduates will try conclusions with the best five the high school can produce. Three girl's teams, representing the first three classes in high, will also compete for supremacy. Games begin at 8 sharp and close at 9.15 and members of high school faculty are always in attendance.

The high school students have now settled down to the work of the second semester. The senior class play has been chosen and the parts assigned and all the work in high school points to the beginning of the end of the school year.

The entering class to high school next September, at present numbers 70 students exactly. These with the usual number of rural pupils, who always enter normal and other departments of the high school will make an addition to the enrollment of next year of about 90 to 100 young people.

One month now when the children have gotten into the habit of study, is worth six weeks of school during the first part of the year. Not a few children persist in coming irregularly and thus lose the benefit which accrues to those who attend all the time. A little oldfashioned coercion on the part of some parents would work an improvement.

Teachers' examinations will take place in the Normal room at the high school building on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week. County Superintendent Anderson announces a teachers' meeting on the afternoon of the last day.

It might not be amiss to announce that all high school students and pupils in the eighth and seventh grades have from two to two and a half hours of work at home evenings. In some cases less time, possibly one hour, is required to accomplish the assigned tasks, but when children in these grades report to parents that they have no home work it is sufficient to state that they always have. Pupils who are not up to the standard in any grade are also assigned work for review to aid them in their deficiencies.

The Literary program for Friday will be presented this week by the Seniors in the evening at the high school assembly room. All parents and other who maybe interested in the high school work are invited to attend. A chemical experiment by Alf Borry and some short talks by a few citizens will add to the entertainment of the evening. These literary exercises will occur but every other Friday hereafter.

The high school students who took part in the athletic contests last fall, and their coach, were entertained at dinner by Supt. and Mrs. Hay last Friday evening.

A Traveling Salesman

H. F. Beers, 617-7th Ave., Peoria, Ill., writes: "I have been troubled for some time with kidney trouble, so severely at times I could scarcely carry my gripe. After using one bottle of Foley's Kidney Pills I have been entirely relieved, and cheerfully recommend them to all". Foley's Kidney Pills are healing and antiseptic and will restore health and strength. Sold by all druggists.

The November bulletin issued by the bureau of statistics of the department of agriculture containing the preliminary estimates of this year's corn crop places the total yield at 2,767,310,000 bushels as against 2,668,651,000, the final estimate for 1908. The estimated average acre yield for the 1909 crop is 25.4 bushels as against 26.2 bushels for 1908. The quality of the crop is placed at 84.2 per cent as compared with 86.9 per cent last year. Illinois stands at the head of the corn producing states, with 360,395,000 bushels; Iowa is second, with 294,210,000; Missouri third, with 215,023,000; Nebraska fourth, with 196,565,000, and Indiana fifth, with 196,520,000.

Most shotgun accidents are the result of rank carelessness and seldom due to conditions over which the operator has no control, such as an explosion of the gun barrel. When a loaded and cocked gun is used for a stick to poke rabbits out of logs or burrows or is dragged through fence or brush muzzle on it is not surprising that dire consequences follow. In learning the use of a gun it is well for the boy to remember to always keep the muzzle of it pointed away from himself and others who may be with him and to further remember that a charge of shot at close range will tear a gaping wound in a boy's anatomy quicker than it will in a rabbit's at twenty or thirty yards.

DESTROYED BY FIRE

German Lutheran Church Burned to the Ground Tuesday Evening.

Building and Furniture Partly Covered by Insurance—Origin Unknown.

Shortly after 6 o'clock on Tuesday evening, the German Lutheran church on the East Side was discovered to be on fire and the building was entirely consumed by the flames.

There was considerable delay in getting a stream of water upon the flames or perhaps a part of the building could have been saved. The first two hydrants that the firemen visited were found to be frozen up and when the third one was reached, the firemen were without a hydrant wrench and this caused a still further delay.

The building and church furniture were valued at about $1,500 and the society carried $900 insurance. The organ and most of the seats were saved.

Rev. and Mrs. Seltz occupied a part of the church with their living rooms and most of their furniture was saved, although it was damaged to a considerable extent. They have $600 insurance.

Just how the fire originated is unknown. Rev. Seltz was down at Mahnomen and his wife was over to her father's, Jacob Jonas, to spend the day. There was a fire in the coal stove, but the flames started in another part of the building. Rev. Seltz believes that the electric light wiring was defective and caused the fire

SPECULATING ON MARGIN.

American and English Ways of Doing It Are Very Different.

In America a speculator's capital (with an exception to be noted below) is necessarily at least the size of his margin in his broker's hands, though it is to be feared that in only too many instances it is just this and nothing more.

On the London Stock Exchange another method prevails which, says Moody's Magazine, it is probable has done more in the long ago past to give stock speculation its bad name than all the episodes of an unsavory nature which have ever occurred on American exchanges. In London after the inevitable introduction to a broker the new customer gives his order, but makes no deposit at all.

The broker is supposed to learn something of his new client's means and how far he should be allowed to commit himself. Twice a month the English have what they call their settlement days. A customer long of a stock whose commitment has gone somewhat against him is then required to pay the differences, as they are called, between his purchase price and the current quotation.

He must also pay a charge called a contango for holding the settlement over into the next fortnightly period if he does not wish to close the commitment. As a consequence of this way of doing business a speculator may be trading on a few points margin in reality or, in fact, on no margin at all. He may be utterly penniless without the broker knowing it.

That this method works out with fewer losses in England than it would do here is due to the fact that the social and economic strata to which an Englishman belongs are much easier to determine than the corresponding facts among us, and also that an introduction means more there than here, as the introducer is regarded as to a certain extent responsible morally for the business department of his friend.

It is worth while observing (and this is the exception referred to above) that in certain instances the methods pursued in American stock exchange houses are the same as those obtaining in London. Little as the fact is known, it is not an unfrequent custom for very wealthy speculators to have no fixed margin or even no margin at all with their brokers.

If a man of this sort loses on a commitment he sends his broker a check for the loss. If he wins his brokers remit to him for his gains. The broker dislikes to offend a very powerful client by troubling him for funds, and hence takes risks with his account which he would not dream of taking with the account of smaller men. Instances of this sort sometimes become public in cases where the broker is forced into bankruptcy, whether owing to this cause or not

The comet appearing in the western sky in the early evening, is now pronounced by astronomers to be making its first appearance to an earthly audience—although it was generally taken for Halley's comet, when it was first discovered by the people of Thief River Falls. Not very much is known about this comet, and how long it will stay or in which direction it will travel is just at this time a matter of speculation. That this is its first visit within the vision of the earth is known by the rate of speed by which it travels. Comets, which go at a speed faster than 26 miles a second never visit the earth twice—because they travel in so large a circle that they never come back. With comets traveling less than 26 miles a second, the attractions of the planets and of the sun draw them into an elliptical skyway, and they are in a sense prisoners of this planetary system, and make their rounds with reasonable regularity. It is an almost overwhelming illustration of the vastness of space when we consider that a comet such as is now visible, may have started on its voyage long before the earth was formed and will keep on traveling throughout eternity, and never comes within the earth's vision, but once. It must invade other systems so far distant that they are undreamed of by human minds, and yet it goes on and on, never reaching the limits of space and never getting beyond the control of the laws of nature.

Fr. Adolph Surprised.

Fr. Adolph was presented with a substantial purse by his uninvited visitors.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

Declaring that Minnesota land is the best in the world for many purposes and that no better opportunities exist anywhere for the man of small means than in Minnesota today George Welsh, state immigration commissioner, is engaged in an active effort to change the deserted lands of Northern Minnesota into productive farms. He plans to attract from the larger cities thousands of idle workmen, having been successful already in attracting to Southern and Central Minnesota many families from Illinois and Indiana.

The state treasury is in worse shape than it has been for several years. The revenue fund is nearly $1,463,000 short. Of this amount $848,000 has been borrowed from banks and $515,000 has been drawn from other state funds. The law authorizes an overdraft of $600,000 from the other funds for the benefit of the revenue fund and the balance must be borrowed until the railroad taxes come in next month.

Collections amounting to $137,296 were made for the state last year by Attorney General George T. Simpson in timber trespass cases. The long list of such suits, brought by E. T. Young while attorney general, has now been entirely cleaned up by his successor, except three cases which have been carried to the supreme court of the United States.

The St. Paul jury in the case of Mrs. Emma M. Libaire, the singer, who sued the Minneapolis and St. Louis railroad for $25,000 damages for injuries received in an automobile accident near Cottagewood, in which Mr. and Mrs. John Gluck of Minneapolis were killed, agreed on a verdict for $11,500 for the plaintiff.

Ninety-two bushels of corn per acre, matured Sept. 15 at a latitude of 48 degrees north, is the record reported by G. G. Lawrence, principal of the Cross Lake Indian school at Ponemah, this state. The school is located between Upper and Lower Red lake, forty miles north of Bemidji.

One of the largest plants of the Red Wing Union Stoneware company has closed down because of a shortage of coal. The temporary closing of the shop throws about 150 men out of employment. Other manufacturing institutions report a shortage of fuel.

Cancer caused one of every seventeen deaths in Minnesota during 1908, according to statistics gathered by Dr. E. H. Beckman, St. Mary's hospital, Rochester, who filed the results of his work with the state board of health.

C. C. Neale, state scale inspector, in his annual report to the state railroad and warehouse commission, says that of 143 railroad scales tested seventy-six were found to weigh incorrectly.

In the Hennepin county district court Judge John Day Smith held that Syrians are white persons and are entitled to citizenship.

The Redwood Falls city council has refused to grant any saloon licenses and that city is dry for the first time in thirty years.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

While turning a switch for a passenger train A. B. Chandler, a strikebreaker on the Minneapolis and St. Louis railroad at Minneapolis, did not observe the approach of a switch engine. He was run over and instantly killed. Chandler had been in the employ of the railroad since the beginning of the strike.

Gust Mattson, twenty-two years old, was instantly killed while acting as a lander on the ore stock pile at the Kellogg mine at McKinley. Mattson's duty was to attend to the dumping of the ore on the stock pile when the cars were sent out. A hook became detached from the end of a cable and struck the man.

Fifteen cases of smallpox among the children of the Bremer school at Minneapolis has caused a genuine scare in that section of the Mill City. In view of the threatened epidemic the health authorities authorized the vaccination of all Bremer pupils.

An unidentified tramp was found unconscious under the high bridge and on the St. Paul road's right of way at Red Wing. The police were notified and the man removed to the police station. He died before the arrival of a physician.

Oscar Rosen, thirty years old, a gravel roofer, was instantly killed when he fell seventy feet from a window in the new building of the International Sugar Feed company at Minneapolis.

John Clayton, a watchmaker, sixty years old and unmarried, shot and killed himself in his room at St. Paul. Clayton had been in ill health and despondent for several weeks.

August Lahne, aged fifty-five, janitor at MacPherson & Langford's skirt factory at St. Paul, killed himself by hanging at his place of employment.

Louis Anderson of St. Paul met his death at Omaha by falling from the eleventh floor of the City National bank, now under construction.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Elizabeth von Wedelstaedt, wife of Dr. H. A. L. von Wedelstaedt, for fifty-three years a resident of St. Paul, is dead at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Olga Haskell, Minneapolis, after an illness of several weeks. She was eighty-one years old.

FINANCIAL AND INDUSTRIAL.

Roberts, Hall & Criss of New York and Cincinnati were forced to suspend as members of the New York Stock Exchange following the two failures brought about by the collapse of the Columbus and Hocking Coal and Iron pool. Hugh F. Criss was the board member of the firm and had charge of the Hocking pool on the exchange. He estimates the liabilities of the firm at $3,000,000.

Judge Taylor of Cleveland has appointed General George A. Garretson, president of the Bank of Commerce of Cleveland, and S. P. Shane, general manager of the Gilchrist Transportation company, receivers of the Gilchrist Transportation company, a $10,000,000 corporation and one of the largest carrying companies on the Great Lakes.

Representatives of the Guggenheims have obtained options on 80 per cent of the New River (W. Va.) coal fields, which comprise 200,000 acres. The plan is to combine the entire bituminous coal interests of Southern West Virginia, the Fairmont field and the holdings of the Pitsburg Coal company.

Exports of boots and shoes from the United States in the calendar year 1909 were the largest on record, having aggregated 6,750,000 pairs, compared with the previous high record of 6,333,000 pairs in 1907.

The failure of the house of Lathrop, Haskins & Co. and of J. M. Fiske & Co. was announced on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange. A sharp decline in Hocking Coal was said to be the cause.

An increase of 5 cents per hundred pounds on first class freight from New York to Chicago by lake and rail practically has been agreed upon, according to dispatches from the East.

The Citizens' National bank of Evansville, Ind., one of the oldest and regarded as the strongest banking institution in that city, has closed its doors by order of the directors.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

Fifteen men, three of them Americans, were killed by a premature explosion of nitroglycerin in a tunnel at Fishkill Landing, N. Y., which is to form part of the great aqueduct which will carry water from the Ashokan dam in the Catskills to New York city. Five were terribly mutilated, but were so near the mouth of the tunnel that they were rescued alive. The other fifteen were found beneath a mass of rock and debris, literally hammered by the force of the explosion into a bleeding mass of heads, limbs and torsos.

Estimates of the number of people killed when four cars of a Canadian Pacific passenger train plunged down an embankment into the icy covered Spanish river near North Bay, Ont., vary from forty to fifty. Eighteen of those killed were in the second class car and most of them were foreigners. It is known that there were sixty passengers in the first class car and it is believed there are five bodies in the dining car. Of the twenty-four injured four died and others are in a dying condition.

Tearing down the mountain side at the rate of nearly seventy miles an hour a freight train jumped the track at a point between Jenny Lake and Antelope, Colo., near the summit of the range, and the entire train plunged down the hill. Three men were killed and another fatally injured.

Elden James of Bluffton, Ind., was fatally burned while trying to save the lives of his two little daughters. Both the girls, who were respectively ten and four years old, perished in a fire which burned their home. Mrs. James and two other children escaped.

Between forty and fifty persons were injured, several of them seriously, when Northern Pacific coast train No. 7 was wrecked near Bluegrass, N. D. A broken rail is given as the cause.

Miss Marjorie Gould is going to marry a Philadelphian. This is a more severe blow to the English lords than the liberals have thus far been able to hand them.

John King publishes an ode to himself in the last week's issue of his paper, the Red Lake Falls Gazette. Nothing like owning an newspaper and getting your advertising free.

Governor Hughes says he is going to retire from politics and earn some money for his family. One of the unsatisfactory things about being the kind of a politican that Gov. Hughes is the Jack of financial returns.

A fragment of a meteor fell on a farm near Valley Falls, Kan., the other day, and when placed on the scales it was found that the piece weighed seventeen pounds. If the showers of meteors which the scientists tell us we may expect presently, owing to the approach of Halley's comet, are going to be made up of seventeen-pound fragments, it might be well to put netting over the skylights that are not already protected.

The political bosses of each of the two big parties understand the value of mutual co-operation. To them it makes little difference which set of candidates gets elected. In an article published in the American Magazine for February, Ray Stannard has a most interest article upon this subject. Concerning our own state he says:

> "In Minnesota the Democrat boss, Richard T. O'Connor, employed by James J. Hill, works in perfect harmony with Senator Smith, the Republican boss."

An unknown person (we do not blame him for the desire to conceal his identity) who signs himself "Tax Payer" has a long communication in the last week's issue of the Red Lake Falls Gazette in which he champions the cause of County Commissioner Lindquist and sincerly hopes that the governor will not remove him from office. If Mr. "Tax Payer" owns much property in Red Lake county and will take the time to read the proceedings of the county board, he will soon discover that if men of the Lindquist type continue to run the affairs of this county for much a longer period, that his taxes will be considerable higher. If, however, he is one of those few who are pofiting by the vote of Mr. Lindquist upon the county board, it may be different.

The young man who publishes the Plummer Pioneer should be more careful. In the last issue of his paper he says:

> The manner in which the county printing was let this year would lead the average citizen to think that there is something rotten, not "in Denmark," but in Red Lake Falls.

Does not the Pioneer editor know that the county printing was let to that great reformer, John King secretary of the "kitchen cabinet," whose bid will cost the county an additional $1,000 more than other bids that were put in for doing this work? Also that the service offered by the other bidders was far better? The reason Mr. King secured the printing was that there is a county seat fight on in Red Lake county, and three commissioners who are elected by about one-fourth of the people do not want to see anything come to the north end of the county. Mr. King is just enough of a reformer to take advantage of this and he is not going to lose any money in doing the work.

A few years ago the average farmer was so badly in debt that when his wheat was threshed, he rushed it to market to pay his bills says the St. Cloud Journal Press. Wheat was then about the only crop he raised that he could get spot cash for, whenever he took it to market. The natural result followed. The mills and elevators were packed full, money had to be hired from the east at high rates to pay for the wheat, and the price was always low after threshing time. When the farmers had disposed of their wheat, the millers and the elevator men put up the price and reaped the big profit. Later the farmers began to diversify their products, and especially, when they turned to dairy products, they soon had money enough month by month to pay their bills, and start a nest egg in the banks. Now when they have wheat to sell, they hold it until the price suits. There is no general rush from the threshing machine to the elevators and mills. Consequently the price is steady, the farmers are getting the benefit, and have become independent—and that is certainly a good thing for the whole country.

Henry O. Bjorge, of Lake Park, has announced that he will be a candidate for the Republican nomination for congressman from this district at the primaries next summer in opposition to Halvor Steenerson. It is stated that other candidates are quite likely to get into the fight and that the contest will be a lively one before it is finished. Mr. Bjorge has been a member of the state legislature for the past three sessions and was the author of the tonnage tax bill. He is little known in this part of the district except by reputation. He voted to locate the normal school at Cass Lake, but is said to have stood by Thief River Falls in all of the other legislation this city was endeavoring to secure in the last legislature.

In regard to the announcement of Bjorge, the Minneapolis Journal has the following to say:

> Senator A. D. Stephens of Crookston has been suspected of an intention to run. The Bjorge announcement would not need to make a change in his plans. The Becker county man will naturally get his greatest strength in the southern counties. Senator Stephens and the present congressman are townsmen, and both are especially strong in the northern section.
>
> Elmer E. Adams of Fergus Falls has also been considered a congressional possibility. He will probably keep out, in view of the Bjorge announcement, and run for the state senate instead. Senator F. H. Peterson is another piece of congressional timber. He is understood to be a supporter of Bjorge, with whom he has worked closely in legislative matters.
>
> As for Ole O. Sageng, his chances for election as an independent now depend much on the Republican primaries. If Congressman Steenerson is renominated after a hard fight, Ole will hurry to finish plowing and take the stump. If Bjorge or some other pronounced radical, should get the republican nomination, it would rather take away the reason for the Sageng candidacy. In that case, he would probably try for another term in the senate.

Feb. 15 the Date.

Attorney Matteson, of Ada, will on the 15th of February, take the testimony in the charges that have been preferred against County Commissioner Lindquist and Auditor Letendresse. It is not expected that the hearing will require more than one day, but it is quite likely to prove to be a warm one.

One of the World's Greatest Remedies.

Mr. S. P. Mason, of Markle, Ind., writes:—I have been in the drug trade twenty years and have handled your White Wine of Tar fifteen years. I have never sold a remedy that equals it. Fifteen years ago, I bought a bill of the medicine from your agent. The first bottle I put out was for Asthma in the case of Jas. Ledbetter of this town. The Dr. said he could not live. One bottle of Warner's White Wine of Tar cured him and he is still living. I think the world should know more of this wonderful remedy.

Cost of Bad Roads.

It costs Minnesota farmers $2,403,000 each year to haul their wheat to the railroad, assuming that the average distance the grain is hauled is no more than five miles—it is probably much greater. With anything like good roads, the cost can be reduced from one-half to two-thirds, or a saving of $1,501,500 each year on the cost of hauling wheat alone.

This fact is revealed in a government report which shows that the average cost of hauling one ton one mile on the railroads of this country is 8.6 mills or about four-fifts of a cent. The Federal Government says it costs twenty-five cents to haul one ton one mile in wagons over the country roads in such states as Minnesota. This state produced 94,060,000 bu. of wheat in 1909 or 1,922,400 tons. If this number of tons was hauled an average of five miles at a cost of $1.25 for each five miles, it cost $2,403,000 to haul the wheat to the elevators in the country towns.

One of the objects of the Conservation and Agriculure Developement Congress to be held March 16-19 is not only to tell how farmers can make the roads better, but to show by model roads and with model road making machinery, how the roads can be put in condition to save 50 per cent of this terrific cost. Since it is a cost to the farmers, it of course cuts down profits just that much.

Arctander "Goldship" A Rank Failure.

The much vaunted Arctander "Goldship," the Colorado river gold mining scheme, has finally proven itself a rank failure as was expected by many. All the good people thru the northwest who were induced by the artful Minneapolis attorney to invest in this gold mining humbug have lost every cent they invested. The majority can ill afford to lose any of their hard earned dollars and to them the loss will be hard felt. This will therefore be a costly, and the more valuable, lesson to them to let such humbug get-rich-quick schemes alone. Arctander in his letter to stockholders admitting failure does his level best to disclaim any personal blame for the loss of their money.

The Conductor.

I had been suffering with a severe cold for several days, and was so hoarse, I could not speak above a whisper. Nov. 10th, I met one of Dr. Warner's agents on my train, he handed me a bottle of the White Wine of Tar Syrup and one hour after taking the first dose my hoarseness commenced leaving me. In twenty-four hours my voice was quite clear and natural and my cold was cured. It is the best remedy, I ever saw.

Big Benefit Dance.

After the completion of the new armory, the following labor organizations will give a grand benefit ball; Order of Railway Conductors, Brotherhood Locomotive Engineers, Brotherhood Locomotive Firemen and Engineers, Brotherhood Railroad Trainmen.

This ball is for the benefit of the "Home." By "Home" we mean the place provided for by the donations of these four orders and not by the regular assessments. The "Home" provides for those, who by accident have been disabled for life or those who have become too old for railroad work. Through the courtesy of Hon. T. P. Hamre, we have been donated the use of the hall, also the music. The music will be furnished by the Thief River Falls Orchestra. These are very large items to us, and we feel very grateful to our mayor as well as to the people of Thief River Falls. We have one of the best armories in the Northwest. This ball be the first union ball ever given in the history of union labor. This will also be a great advertisement to our city, as the outcome of this ball will be published in every railroad magazine in the United States and Canada. Those not wishing to dance will have the use of the reception and card rooms. A balcony is to be installed, which will be a chance never before had by the people of Thief River Falls to go and listen to the music and watch the dancers. A supper will be served, but as yet we are unable to state where. The committee for the ball is as follows:

J. S. Barnettt, of the O. R. C.
J. G. Turnbaugh, of the B. of L. F. and E.
A. E. Preston, of the B. of L. C.
Ed. Hill, of the R. T.

With the aid of the public and a good deal of hard work among ourselves, we hope to make this ball a grand success. Tickets will be one dollar, supper extra. Nothing will be left undone by the committee to make this, the greatest event of the season. —E. H.

Payment to Be Extended.

Washington, Jan. 22.—A favorable report was made by the house committee on Indian affairs today on Representative Steenerson's bill extending for two years the time when settlers on the Red Lake Indian reservation may pay for their lands. Under the law providing for the sale of these lands, the price set was not less than $4 an acre, and the buyers were to pay for their holding in five annual installments. The past two seasons have been wet, and the homesteaders have been unable to make full crops, and some of them are in danger of having their lands forfeited because of non payment. They have made valuable improvements and would lose them and the proposed law is intended to save them from this loss also.

Notice.

All persons, who are indebted to the firm of O. J. Schel & Co., are requested to call and settle their account at once as the firm will discontinue business in a short time, having sold their stock of merchandise to the Co-operative Grocery Company. Also all persons having due bills upon this firm are requested to call and have them redeemed at once.

QUICK LUNCHES IN STOCKHOLM

They Are Served Mostly in Eating Houses Called "Automats," a Sort of Money in the Slot Affair—One Reason for Their Popularity Is the Absence of the "Tip System"—Low Cost of the Food Furnished Is Another Feature That Draws Custom.

SWEDEN.

Says a correspondent in the Daily News of Chicago: What the bread winners eat for their quick lunches in Stockholm is rather different from what is served in an American community. In the first place most of these meals are served by eating houses that are called "automats," a sort of money in the slot affair. No help is required beyond a few men and women to carry away the used dishes. The reason for the popularity of this class of lunch rooms is the absence of the "tip system" and the relative cheapness of the food. The article most frequently called for is a sort of pancake with potatoes as the principal ingredient and served with jelly. Many take a boiled egg, while another dish is poached eggs and smoked salmon. The slang term for still another dish is "oxes eyes," consisting of half a hard boiled egg, covered with anchovies on the yellow part. Plum soup is liked and a certain kind of gruel called "sweet soup" is much in demand. In the line of meat we find beef pudding holding the first call. It is served with mashed potatoes. A Swedish beefsteak with onions has also a fair run. When it comes to pastry or dessert we find apple cake is first class, with dishes consisting of sweet puddings closely folowing. Mixed fruit is a popular order, as is also lemon cream and snow pudding. At night or in the morning, a popular dish is fried herring in a special pan. Rather less of pastry is used than with us. Pies, as we know them are not to be found. Coffee, beer and tea are the principal beverages.

Per Hallstrom has written an article against August Strindberg in the "Svenska Dagbladet" entitled, "The Honor of the Dead." In this article Mr. Hallstrom severely criticizes Strindberg for attacking the late Geijerstam in Strindberg's last book, entitled, "The Great Country Road." He aims to show Strindberg is always attacking some imaginary enemy and almost invariably attacks some great writer as soon as he is dead. Mr. Hallstrom maintains that he did the same thing with Oscar Levertin. Strindberg has aroused the ire of Hallstrom in no uncertain manner and the latter is putting it all over Strindberg in the aforementioned article.

Among the many candidates who are mentioned for the position of Chief of the Royal Opera at Stockholm, is none other than Prince Eugen. If that were so, and the Stockholm papers claim that it is, Prince Eugen would certainly prove to be the most popular Opera chief that has ever served in connection with the royal opera. It is stated that he has inclinations in that direction. The artist prince, as he is often called, has no designs on anything in connection with royalty and he spends half of his time at his studio in Paris, where he is a very popular fellow among artists from all countries.

Prince Adalbert of Prussia, the queen's nephew arrived in Stockholm to spend a few days with the king and queen. He did not desire any official reception and his wish in this respect was gratified. His visit was of a wholly private nature. Prince Adalbert is the third son of Emperor Wilhelm. He was born July 14, 1884, is now a captain-lieutenant in the German navy and chief of a torpedo division.

Engineer Alfred Larson received an anonymous letter on Xmas eve, warning him that he should leave the city if he wanted to remain among the living. The letter was sent to the paper known as "Dagen" and was by that paper forwarded to Mr. Larson, who is at this writing up in Norrland strictly attending to his business affairs.

Princess Patricia of Connaught, accompanied by her royal maid-in-waiting, arrived to Stockholm Dec. 23 to spend a few days as the guest of the king and queen. It is possible that there exist friendly relations between her and Prince Adalbert.

There is a bill before the present riksdag to provide an appropriation of 50,000 crowns a year to provide popular concerts throughout the country and thus give people who cannot otherwise afford it, an opportunity to hear good music.

NORWAY.

A German paper gives the following anecdote from Emperor Wilhelm's last voyage to Norway on the Hohenzollern: When the Norwegian pilot boarded the steamer the emperor himself was standing at the helm, as he often does. The Norwegian wanted to take hold at once, and was somewhat surprised to see that the man at the wheel did not stir. The old tar, with his hands akimbo, remained standing awhile, keeping his sharp eyes intently fixed on the man at the helm. Finally he burst out, "you fellow over there. Are you the pilot here, or am I?" The emperor burst out laughing at this unexpected address, left the wheel to the new pilot without saying a word and stepped quickly into his cabin, where he selected a box of extra fine cigars, which he handed to the pilot with the words, "you are right, you are the pilot."

Way up in Aakenaes, a lonely and God forsaken spot up in Norrland, there was enacted a drama, which has set many people a thinking, especially when they come to the chapter which refers to walking delegates, whose aim it is to stir up poor and innocent people on the question of religion. A wife, Antonette Svenning, became insane over religion sometime ago after listening to some religious agitators, and one day while alone with her children, she seized a dipper and slew three of her children. Afterwards she attempted to commit suicide, by throwing herself in the water, but both times she failed.

The Norwegian engineer George Fasting, who is engaged by the largest sugar producing factory of the world, the Chaparra Sugar Co. of Cuba, is at present in Norway, for the purpose of hiring a number of men to go with him back to Cuba and commence to work on the sugar plantations there. He will also go to Sweden in the same errand. Mr. Fasting believes that there are splendid opportunities for Scandinavians in Cuba. That, however, remains to be seen. The climate down there may not agree with them.

It is learned on good authority that Bishop Bang has decided to donate his immense private library to the University of Minnesota, after conferring for a number of months with Professor Gisle Bothne of the last named institution. Bishop Bang, who has retired from active labor, is completing his library and making a catalogue of the books. There are about 5,000 volumes and this latest addition will make it the finest Scandinavian library in the country.

When the storthing assembles for the winter session in Christiania, there will for the first time be a woman numbered among its members. Miss Anna Rogstad, formerly a school teacher in Christiania, has received this honor as a result of equal suffrage in Norway. Her work in the storthing will be watched with a great deal of interest.

A heavy dynamite explosion occurred in Christiania last month. While a dozen men were working in an excavation, a dynamite charge, which had been placed there for blasting purposes exploded, killing two men and injuring five. One of the injured ones was a Swede named Carl Johanson.

Dr. Edward Brandes, the Danish minister of finance, spent the holidays in Christiania. Dr. Brandes has many friends in the Norwegian capital and a series of banquets and entertainments were arranged in his honor during his visit in Christiania.

Ingebret Haaland, concertmaster at the National theater in Christiania, has recently composed "Norwegian Dance No. 1" and "Ole Spillmands Funeral." Both compositions are for violin and are finding ready sale.

DENMARK.

A French engineer's firm has for 80,000 francs purchased the apparatus invented by A. C. and L. C. Anderson to transpose by wire direct from nature pictures with natural colors and living movements. The firm has taken 17 patents on the apparatus in different countries. The Politiken states that the Russian authorities have seized 3,000 rifles and one million cartridges that were being smuggled into Finland by revolutionary parties under the guise of furniture.

On the night of Dec. 19 two persons made an attempt to enter Holmen's church, where the remains of the late Princess Marie were confined. When they were about to crawl into a window they were discovered, but being frightened they ran away and made good their escape although they were being eagerly pursued. The remains of Princess Marie are at present confined in the chapel, wherefore the incident caused a good deal of attention.

The announcement of Professor Lonsdale, private secretary of Dr. Cook that he had again been in communication with the would-be explorer has been given credence recently at the University of Copenhagen. Dr. Cook would be placed in a very delicate position if he showed up in Christiania. The chances are that he would be mobbed.

The new Palace hotel which is now approaching its completion, will be the finest in all Denmark. It will cost over five million crowns and will have accomodations for over 200 guests. It is modern in every respect and will be dedicated Feb. 1 in the presence of the king and other high officials.

There was slushy weather in Copenhagen Xmas eve. There was rain and snow and complaints were general from pedestrians. The holiday weather was just what the weather prophets had promised, but the Xmas-spirit prevailed just the same.

YOUNG GIRLS ARE NOT SOLD

No White Slave Traffic in the State of Minnesota.

After two months' secret investigation carried on in the Twin Cities and Duluth and the careful tracing of reported cases in other parts of the state, notably on the iron range, the authorities are prepared to make formal report that they can find no evidences of a white slave traffic in Minnesota.

The investigation has been made by three separate organizations, all of which have arrived at the same conclusion. These organizations are the federal government, the police and municipal authorities of St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth and the Federation of Women's Clubs of Minnesota.

The government inquiry, carried on by Joseph Friemuth, formerly a member of the New York detective force in the slums of the East Side, has been exhaustive. He began work under a special commission Dec. 1 and has collected minute data upon every subject bearing directly or indirectly upon the white slave trade.

BOY IS BURNED TO DEATH

St. Paul Youth a Victim of His Own Curiosity.

Willie Brennan, fourteen years old, was burned to death in a shocking manner at St. Paul as the result of a playful trick on the part of the lad. The entire body was burned and blistered and his clothes were completely burned from the body.

Young Brennan climbed onto a tank car, which was resting on a sidetrack in the Omaha yards near Hazel Park and only about three blocks from the lad's home.

He removed one of the caps from the top of the tank and discovered that it was empty. The boy lighted a match and held it over the aperture from which he had removed the cap. Instantly a body of fire burst from the opening and ignited his clothes. He fell unconscious beside the car and several people who saw the accident hastened to the boy's assistance. The flames were extinguished and the body carried some distance from the scene.

AGAIN ELECTED PRESIDENT

W. F. Schilling Heads Minnesota Dairymen's Association.

The thirty-second annual convention of the Minnesota State Dairymen's association was held at Hutchinson. All the old officers were re-elected except F. M. Wolfe of Montevideo, the second vice president, who is succeeded by Emil Eck of Cokato. The other officers are W. F. Schilling of Northfield, president; A. J. McGuire of Grand Rapids, first vice president; F. D. Currier of Nicollet, secretary, and J. M. Jack of Stanton, treasurer.

Professor Haecker took the dairymen with him on a tour of Denmark, Switzerland and other old world countries which he visited recently and described the various methods pursued on dairy farms in those lands. His address was of such an interesting character that the audience kept him upon the platform for two hours or more.

FOR LOVE OF A SHOW GIRL

Iowa Youth Accused of Forging Checks.

Fascinated by a chorus girl, a member of a "Merry Widow" company, Dwight Meyers, aged twenty-one, left his home in Greenfield, Ia., and traveled with the company from city to city in order to be near his sweetheart. He was arrested at the Spalding hotel at Duluth and will be sent back to Minneapolis to answer to a charge of passing worthless checks.

Young Meyer's money seems to have held out until he reached the Flour City. There he is alleged to have obtained money on a number of checks to which a name, which he says is that of his father, was forged.

President Taft may visit St. Paul in August on the occasion of the meeting there of the League of American Municipalities. David Heineman, representing the league, called on the president and invited him to deliver an address at the St. Paul meeting of the organization.

The president said he would take the matter under consideration and, if possible, accept the invitation.

Two Dead and One Dying.

One of the children succumbed to scarlet fever several days ago. Adam Bona, seven years of age, contracted the disease and died. The only surviving child is near death. Coroner D. C. Jones investigated the deaths of the two children.

Colony for Minnesota.

One hundred Belgians will come to America in the coming spring to take up farms in Becker and Hubbard counties, this state, in a big Catholic colony to be established there by Bishop James McGolrick of Duluth. Most of them have means enough to equip a dairy farm or a truck garden plot.

Child Burned to Death.

The three-year-old son of Herman Schauer of Glencoe was burned to death while his mother was absent for a moment from the room. The child poured kerosene oil from a gallon can into the stove. The oil exploded, setting fire to the child's clothing.

Blair, St. Anthony Park; Rev. A. E. Norman, Hanska; A. J. McGuire, Grand Rapids; C. R. Middleton, Beaudette.

PRAISES HIS PREDECESSOR

Governor Eberhart Lauds the Late Governor Johnson.

"As I sat in the executive office in the state capitol at St. Paul and saw the multitudes that came to pay tribute as the body of John A. Johnson lay in state I realized to the full that the people of Minnesota appreciate good service," said Governor Eberhart during the course of a speech at a reception held at the Arlington hotel at Washington in his honor by the Minnesota Alumni association of that city. Governor Eberhart eulogized the services of his late predecessor as the climax of an address in which he touched upon the material progress of Minnesota, the prominence of her sons and daughters in various lines of endeavor, and the work being performed by the state university, especially along agricultural lines.

The Minnesota colony was out in force to greet the state executive.

NEGOTIATING FOR TERMINALS

Officials of the Canadian Northern on Visit to Duluth.

William MacKenzie, president of the Canadian Northern railway, and D. B. Hanna, third vice president of the same company, with Colonel A. D. Davidson, head of the land, immigration and industrial department of the company, visited Duluth in regard to the question of terminals for their line in that city.

The officials of the Canadian Northern are in route from Winnipeg to the Toronto office of the company and, according to the statement of President MacKenzie, simply dropped off at Duluth to look into some of the details of the negotiations that are being carried on there between the city and representatives of the company.

UNDER WHITE SLAVE LAW

Duluth Man Is Sent to Prison for Three Years.

Fred Hazen, convicted by a jury in the district court of St. Louis county of living off the earnings of a woman engaged in immoral pursuits, was sentenced by Judge Hughes to three years in the state penitentiary, the maximum penalty provided by a new law governing the white slave traffic.

Hazen is the first man in the state to be tried and sentenced under this enactment. He brought Esther Mack, a Bayfield (Wis.) farmer's daughter, to Duluth and lived with her in a local hotel, taking her earnings for his own support.

Young Man Shoots Himself.

William Meyer, aged twenty-five, of Winona, son of J. C. Meyer, local representative of the Minneapolis Brewing company, in a jealous rage, forced his way into the room of a waitress in that city, armed with a loaded revolver. Not finding the girl there, he turned the weapon upon himself. His body was found stretched across the bed with a bullet wound just over the heart. His chances for recovery are slight.

Special Officer Killed in Yards.

While standing by a box car in the St. Paul yards at Minneapolis Albert Bowers, special officer of that road was almost instantly killed when a switch engine on another track struck the car. Bowers was crushed under the car.

BEST WAY TO FEED CORN.

Since corn is the chief article of diet in those states where hog raising is carried on extensively the question of the feeding of it in the most economical form is a live one for every feeder. Realizing this fact and with a view to securing data that would be of practical value for the feeder, the directors of the Iowa experiment station at Ames have been conducting exhaustive feeding experiments for the past three years with a view to finding out in what form corn should be fed to give the largest as well as the most economical gains. A bulletin recently published by the station gives the results of these feeding investigations. A gist of the findings should be of practical aid to every hog raiser who uses corn as a part of the feeding ration. Six forms of corn were used—dry ear corn, soaked shell corn, dry cornmeal, soaked cornmeal, dry corn and cob meal and soaked corn and cob meal. It was found that shelling cost 1 cent per bushel, shelling and grinding 3 cents and grinding corn and cob meal 6 cents.

In the tests made in 1907 100 pounds of dry ear corn made as much pork as 112 pounds of shelled corn soaked twenty-four hours or 122 pounds of cornmeal soaked twelve hours. In the 1908 tests shelled corn soaked twelve hours gave slightly the fastest gains. It was found that, whether dry or soaked, a bushel of corn ground without the cob made more pork than a bushel of corn ground with the cob, while a bushel of ear corn made as much gain as one and one-third bushels ground into corn and cob meal at a cost of 6 cents per bushel. Other interesting features of the experiments might be given, but the practical lesson of the tests, according to the experimenters, is summarized in the statement that up to 200 pounds in weight the fastest as well as the most economical gains may be secured by feeding dry ear corn, while for hogs above this weight the best results are had with shelled corn soaked twelve hours. These results will be gratifying to the average feeder, for the method of feeding which gives best results is that in which there is a minimum outlay of time and expense in the preparing and feeding of the ration.

THE HOME SUPPLY OF ICE.

Much may be added to the keeping quality as well as to the enjoyment of the food supplies for the home if a supply of ice is available during the warmer months of the year. In cities and towns of any size the consumer has his wants in this line met by putting up the "ice" card. With country dwellers the matter is not so simple. For those who wish to lay by a supply of ice for next summer a few suggestions may be helpful. An outbuilding of about the size required for the necessary supply may be utilized. This should be so situated that there will be good drainage from a point below the lowest tier of cakes. A space of a foot or fourteen inches should be left between the body of ice and the walls of the inclosure. The cakes should be packed in regular fashion for economy of room, with enough space between them so as to give free drainage to the bottom. The sawdust or other material used in packing should be poured in between the ice and the walls as the pile increases in height, but should not be packed down. When the last tier of ice has been laid a ten inch layer of the packing material should be placed over the whole body of ice. The air chamber above the ice should be kept well ventilated during warm weather. A supply of ice is often kept by cruder methods than those above outlined, but not with so satisfactory results.

HOW TO GET WINTER EGGS.

How to get the flock of hens to lay during the winter months is one of the most important problems the poultryman has on his hands, for it is then that his eggs fetch the highest price. Professor Rice of Cornell university, who has made a special study of the care and feeding of poultry, recommends the following method: Keep hoppers before the flock all the time, one containing grit, another crushed oyster shells, another ground beef scraps and another a mixture of equal parts by weight of cornmeal, wheat bran middlings and beef scraps. The scraps should be of the best quality, and fresh water should be kept before the hens all the time on the opposite side of the house from the feed hoppers, so as to give the fowls exercise. An hour before dark a ration of whole grain—wheat, corn, oats, barley or buckwheat—should be scattered in the litter for the hens to scratch out. Professor Rice advises against a hot mash for breakfast, a practice followed by many, on account of its causing the hens to be inactive for several hours. He coincides with the practice of many in recommending green food—alfalfa clover or turnips—during the winter months.

The grits furnished the flock constitute the hens' teeth. When the grits are not furnished it's hard-chewing.

Where it is to be had, there is no ration for furnishing animal food or the flock of hens that surpasses sweet skimmilk.

The Minnesota farmer by paying 50 cents as a registry fee may have a sort of copyright on the name which he selects for his farmstead. This keeps any other farm owner from using the same name.

The other day we read of a little child that could just toddle getting hold of and sucking down some thirty headache tablets, the kind that stop the pain because of the poisons they contain. The baby went into convulsions and died.

A reader of these notes who is interested in hotbeds inquires about the efficiency of the double pane hotbed sash. We have not used this type of sash and would be pleased if any of our readers could give our inquirer some light on the subject.

One of the best flocks of hens for winter laying that we ever saw was turned out on a pile of litter on the south side of a barn when the weather was not too severe and made to scratch for their grain ration. In this way the hens got two essentials, exercise and fresh air.

There is no mill so good for grinding corn for young pigs or so cheaply operated as the strong jaws and sound teeth nature provided them with. Moreover, when corn is ground in this way it is properly mixed with saliva, and there is no bolting of the food, as time is taken to masticate it.

Before adopting buttermilk as a health potion calculated to enrich the blood and build up shattered nerves it will be well for the patient to inquire whether such milk is sterilized before it is drunk, as it may be laden with tuberculosis, which would make the "last end of the man worse than the first."

In order that patrons may have their purchases strictly fresh, proprietors of fish markets in some European cities sell fish alive, their customers selecting their fish as they swim within sight in a tank. This practice takes account of the fact that the shorter the time between water and frying pan the more delicious fish is.

There is probably no article of food that is more enjoyed than the luscious oyster, yet physicians and boards of health are of the opinion that numerous cases of typhoid fever are traceable to eating the bivalves in an uncooked state. Many oyster beds are situated in rivers which receive the germ laden sewage of large cities, and this accounts for their contamination.

Owing to a too dry condition of the soil at seeding time an unsatisfactory and poor stand of grain often results where the broadcast system of seeding is used. The disk drill overcomes this difficulty by putting the seed at an even depth in soil that is moist, thus insuring perfect germination and an even stand. The saving in seed when this method is employed is about 20 per cent.

In the oleo-butter controversy which is on and likely to be brought up for consideration in congress at the present session justice would seem to demand that oleo be made to stand on its own feet and not be allowed to masquerade in any guise for creamery or dairy butter. Were human nature different oleo might even be allowed to be colored without working injustice if it were always sold for oleo, but once let it be colored and some grafter will palm it off on unsuspecting customers as butter and get butter prices for it.

The old time idea in the raising of hogs was to keep them confined in close quarters and stuff them with corn and small grain and sour swill. This idea, fortunately for the pigs, is giving way to a new and better method, including wider range, with a rape, clover or alfalfa pasture during the summer months, abundance of fresh water and such tonics as are needed to keep the system in the best condition. The adoption of the new method of care has not only meant health and comfort for the hogs, but increased profits for the owner.

A friend who buys much fur—chiefly mink, skunk and rat—states that the trapper loses much by taking mink before Dec. 1, when they are in what is called "unprime" condition. Such pelts do not fetch within $2 to $3 apiece what they would if they were classed prime. The only thing that would prevent a carrying out of this sensible suggestion would be that the average trapper would rather get $3 for an unprime skin than have his neighbor take it later when prime and get $5 or $6 for it. A law prohibiting trapping before the date mentioned would remedy this difficulty, however.

It is quite unjust and decidedly to the disadvantage of the careful poultryman that greater difference is not made on the smaller market between eggs that are strictly fresh, those that are in fair condition and others that are dirty, addled or spoiled. Where the poultryman has built up a private trade this handicap is avoided, and he receives a substantial reward for the pains he takes in seeing that his eggs are fresh and clean. Were like discretion exercised by the store buyer of eggs a very beneficial influence would be exerted generally on the egg business of the country.

With rich, clean soil so abundant we never could understand why a fellow would care to monkey with a skunk farm.

It is usually the greediest suckers that get hooked the hardest and lose most coin on these get-rich-quick schemes. Those more sensible scrutinize the bait and soon find out who's holding the pole.

A gardener living near Long Beach, Cal., imposes on folks' credulity in the claim he makes of having picked three gallons of blackberries from a Logan valley vine set out last year, when it was but two inches long.

During the winter months, when green food cannot be had, the hens will relish a head of cabbage, hung where they have to jump for it, or an occasional feed of raw beets or rutabagas. Clover and alfalfa leaves they will also eat greedily.

Landlord and tenant get along best together when each does just a bit more rather than a trifle less for the other than the terms of the lease require. The same kind of spirit will go a long way toward taking the kinks out of many other relations in life.

The very heavy fall of snow in the mountain states of the west is causing very heavy loss in both cattle and sheep, as much of the forage they subsist on in the valleys is deeply covered with snow. Some flockmasters are offering at $1 per head sheep that two months ago they would not have sold for $6.

In Germany and some other European countries oleo manufacturers are required to add to the fatty mixture 10 per cent by weight of sesame oil, whose odor enables the purchaser to detect the nature of his purchase much more readily than is possible in the United States, where butter fat is added instead.

We saw a lantern the other day belonging to a pretty bright fellow that one would say was a relic of the dark ages—wick small, draft poor, chimney smoky and the whole outfit calculated to induce dubious thoughts relative to the gumption and snap of the fellow who owned it. With lanterns and illuminants as cheap as they are today, there is mighty little excuse for this type of medievalism.

Final estimates as to the 1909 cotton crop place the total production at 4,836,344,000 pounds, equivalent to 10,088,000 bales at 500 pounds each. The five leading states in the production of cotton are as follows, the output being expressed in bales: Texas, 2,570,000; Georgia, 1,800,000; South Carolina, 1,005,000; Alabama and Mississippi, each 1,020,000. Next to corn, cotton was the most valuable crop produced.

An effective warfare may be waged against the lice and mites in the henhouse by squirting kerosene into the cracks and crannies near the roosts and by turning the hens outdoors and scattering a handful of sulphur into a kettle of live coals. The doors and windows should be shut tight, and the operator should vamoose as soon as the fumes begin to rise. To make the job effective this process may be repeated until a pound of sulphur has been burned.

There is no fruit tree that will stand or should receive more heavy pruning than the peach. The pruning done the first spring following the setting of the trees should include the taking out of all limbs except four or five, which should be left to form the frame of the young tree, and these should be cut back to about eighteen inches. As the tree gets older the top should be kept well thinned and the new growth cut back to give sufficient sturdiness to the branches. To properly ripen, peaches should be exposed to the sunshine, and this means that the tree should be given an open top.

A whole lot of farmers sled along on bare ground, figuratively, year after year as a result of not keeping such track of their operations as will enable them to know just where the leaks are. The loss may be in the grain raised and sold, it may be in the dairy, it may to some extent lie with shiftless and careless hired men, or it may be in part traceable to a careless handling of the farm made fertilizers; but, whatever the sources of loss in the management of the farm, a set of books, not necessarily elaborate, would be of great assistance in placing responsibility for the trouble.

The first denatured alcohol plant to be built west of the Mississippi river is located at Marshalltown, Ia., and starts up Feb. 1. The outfit consists of seven buildings and will cost completed $140,000. Operating day and night, it will have a capacity of 8,000 gallons of alcohol, which will consume 3,200 bushels of corn daily. The output will be pure grain or ethyl alcohol, and the denaturing agent, which must be mixed with it to make it unfit for drinking purposes, will be added as required. A force of twenty men, including four government inspectors, will operate the plant. One of the chief points in favor of plants of this character is that grain that is partly spoiled for use as food may be used in the manufacture of the product. Plants properly equipped can also utilize frosted potatoes, fruit, etc.—in fact, any product which has a starchy content.

THE BABY TURTLE.

He Has to Paddle His Own Canoe From the Moment of Birth.

Just so soon as a baby turtle emerges from the egg off he scuttles down to the sea. He has no one to teach him, no one to guide him. In his curious little brain there is implanted a streak of caution based upon the fact that until a certain period in his life his armor is soft and no defense against hungry fish, and he at once seeks shelter in the tropical profusion of the gulf weed, which holds within its branching fronds an astonishing abundance of marine life. Here the young turtle feeds unmolested while his armor undergoes the hardening process.

Whatever the young sea turtle eats and wherever he eats it, facts not generally ascertained, one thing is certain—it agrees with him immensely. He leads a pleasant sort of life, basking in the tropical sun and cruising leisurely in the cool depths.

Once he has attained the weight of twenty-five pounds, which usually occurs within the first year, the turtle is free from all danger. After that no fish or mammal, however ravenous, however well armed with teeth, interferes with the turtle.

When once he has withdrawn his head from its position of outlook into the folds of his neck between the two shells intending devourers may struggle in vain to make an impression upon him.—Harper's Weekly.

LINCOLN'S LESSON.

The Way He Learned to Tell When a Thing Is Proved.

Abraham Lincoln was once asked how he acquired his wonderful logical powers and his acuteness in analysis.

Lincoln replied: "It was my terrible discouragement which did that for me. When I was a young man I went into an office to study law. I saw that a lawyer's business is largely to prove things. I said to myself, 'Lincoln, when is a thing proved?' That was a poser. What constitutes proof? Not evidence; that was not the point. There may be evidence enough, but wherein consists the proof? I groaned over the question and finally said to myself, 'Ah, Lincoln, you can't tell.' Then I thought what use is it for me to be in a law office if I can't tell when a thing is proved?

"So I gave it up and went back home. Soon after I returned to the old log cabin I fell in with a copy of Euclid. I had not the slightest notion of what Euclid was, and I thought I would find out. I therefore began at the beginning, and before spring I had gone through the old Euclid's geometry and could demonstrate every proposition in the book. Then in the spring, when I had got through with it, I said to myself one day, 'Ah, do you know when a thing is proved?' and I answered, 'Yes, sir; I do. Then you may go back to the law shop,' and I went."

Tombs of Abelard and Heloise.

Of the hundreds of thousands who make a pilgrimage to Pere Lachaise on All Saints' day few doubt the authenticity of the most famous tombs. One in particular is never questioned—that of Heloise and Abelard, the story of whose unhappy love is so grandly told by Pope. This monument is the work of Alexander Lenoir, the sculptor, and dates toward the end of the revolution. The tomb was built by Lenoir with fragments of a chapel of the convent of the Paraclete at Nogent-sur-Marne, of which Heloise was the abbess. Lenoir managed to bring some glass from the windows of the old chapel, and two medallions which adorn the tomb the sculptor purchased from a religious house in Paris. This is all that is genuine about the tomb.—London Globe.

That Headache!

"This is such a beautiful treat," said the impecunious man at the matinee where they went on her pass, "that I want to take you to dinner afterward if my headache gets better."

"Is your headache getting better?" she asked him after the second act.

"It's terrible," said he. "I can hardly see."

After the third act she again approached the subject. "How does your headache seem to be getting?" she queried solicitously.

"Worse and worse," he frowned.

When the performance was over he held his head with both hands. "My head aches so," he moaned, "I'm afraid I'll die of it."

"I knew it," said she as they walked on home.—New York Press.

Enlightened.

"Before I married," said Mr. Henpeck, "I didn't know what it meant to support a wife."

"I presume you know now."

"Yes, indeed. I looked up the word 'support' in the dictionary and discovered that one of its meanings is 'endure.'"—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Spoiling a Poet.

"He has been spoiled as a poet."

"How so?"

"A judge recently gave him thirty days in default of a ten dollar fine."

"How does that spoil him as a poet?"

"Oh, it gave him an exaggerated idea of the value of his time."—Pittsburg Post.

"ANOTHER'S SHOES."

A Phrase That Had Its Origin In an Ancient Custom.

The expression "stepping into another's shoes," like many another common phrase, had its origin in an ancient custom.

The old Norse law required that a person to be adopted must step into a previously prepared shoe. This shoe was made from the skin taken from the right hind leg of a "three-winters-old bull."

The skin was flayed from above the hock, and out of this the shoe was made. The person to be adopted stepped into this shoe, taking into his arms one at a time, it is presumed, the younger sons of the man making the adoption. If there were also sons who were of age they stepped into the shoe afterward, by this sign showing their consent to the adoption.

A man in this way could adopt an illegitimate son, making him his lawful heir, but in that case the father was obliged to step into the shoe first. If there were any full grown sons, they stepped into the shoe afterward; if there were no full grown sons, then the next of kin did the stepping, and without his consent, by the way, this special adoption could not be made.

Witnesses to the ceremony in the use of the shoe were required to establish its legality.

It will be seen that this was considered an important ceremony, and since so much "shoe stepping" was done it is not strange that the expression as now used passed into common speech.—Chicago Record-Herald.

OSTRICH BATTLES.

The Great Birds, as Strong as Horses, Box With Their Feet.

Ostriches battle for supremacy with as much ferocity as stags, bulls, buffaloes and other animals. An ostrich fight is amusing, inasmuch as it amounts practically to a boxing match with the feet, wherein the combatants lightly dance around each other.

There is, however, this difference—if any human boxer could hit as hard with his hands as can an ostrich with its feet the championship would be decided by a single blow. In sparring the ostrich stands on one foot, with the other foot and the wings raised, the bill wide open and the neck distended. He strikes with the force of a trip hammer.

Sometimes on an ostrich farm a keeper will become involved in such a mixup, in which event it is not infrequently the case that the human emerges from the scrap with a broken leg, arm or head.

Under modern training an ostrich equals a horse in power and indeed can perform many of the "stunts" whereof his equine colleague is capable. In one respect, however, he excels the horse, for by the aid of its wings the ostrich can leave behind the swiftest running thoroughbred. In harness an ostrich has at Hot Springs, Ark., paced in about a horse's time.—Harper's Weekly.

His Unlucky Day.

Even the least superstitious are often struck by the misfortunes which attend some persons on certain dates. A large firm in the city has in its employ a living instance of the fact. On June 12 an employee lost his left arm by coming in contact with machinery. The accident disabled him for his then employment, and he was given that of a messenger. On another June 12 he was run over in the Strand while on an errand. Result, a broken leg. The next accident was a fall on the stairs in the firm's buildings—again June 12—the right arm broken this time. The fourth mishap on another anniversary broke three ribs. The firm took the case into consideration and issued an order that in future the employee was to take a holiday on that date, an order with which he has now complied for several years.—London Chronicle.

His Second Thought.

A politician named Blank got a place for a clerk during one of the sessions of the legislature of his state. The clerk was very grateful, says the Saturday Evening Post. At the end of the session he came around to Blank and said: "Mr. Blank, I want to tell you how much I am indebted to you for your kindness in getting me the place I have had. It meant more to me, Mr. Blank, than you may think. I thank you from the bottom of my heart. Also I want to say, Mr. Blank, that if there ever comes a time when I can do anything for you—anything at all—you are to command me. I will do anything you may ask me to do. I am at your service."

Blank thanked the man, and he started to go. As he reached the door he turned and said, "Of course, Mr. Blank, I would prefer that it should be something honorable."

Could Fill the Bill.

Superintendent—What we want is a night watchman that'll watch, alert and on the qui vive for the slightest noise or indications of burglars, somebody who can sleep with one eye and both ears open and is not afraid to tackle anything. See? Applicant—I see, boss. I'll send my wife around.—Lippincott's.

Took It Back.

"I give you my word, the next person who interrupts the proceedings," said the judge sternly, "will be expelled from the courtroom and ordered home."

"Hooray!" cried the prisoner.

Then the judge pondered.—Judge.

More than we use is more than we need and only a burden to the bearer.—Seneca.

DIDN'T KNOW HIM.

He Was Not In the Colored Porter's Hall of Fame.

A southerner noted for the liberality of his tips stopped at a Baltimore hotel where negro porters predominated. His name was speedily known to every member of the serving fraternity and his every wish anticipated. Soon after his arrival he sent his card to a friend who made his home in the hotel, but whose temperament happened to be quite the opposite of that of his open handed caller—retiring, not given to "tipping" or any other form of sociability and who therefore lived almost unknown to those about him.

The old darky who received the card studied it for a full minute.

"'Scuse me, colonel," he said, "but I don't b'leebe nobody by dat name come here dis mawning."

"This morning!" returned the other. "Of course not! Mr. Blank has lived here for months. You know my name well enough, and I haven't been here a day. Do you mean to say you can't remember a man who has made his home here since some time last winter?"

"'Scuse me, colonel, sah," began the old man deferentially, "but you must know, sah"—as if uttering the subtlest compliment—"dat dere's gemmans what can make demselves more notorious in one day, sah, dan odder gemmans does in a year, sah!"—Youth's Companion.

THE SETTING SUN.

When Vulcan Sailed It Round the Ocean So It Could Rise Again.

The ancients had some queer theories whereby they sought to explain the rising and setting of the sun. They thought the earth to be flat and were greatly puzzled to know how the same sun which plunged into the ocean at a fabulous distance in the west could reappear the next morning at an equally great distance in the east. A number of remarkable theories were advanced, and every one of them was wrong.

Mythologists of old asserted that after the sun had dipped in the western ocean at sunset (the Iberians and other ancient nations actually imagined that they could hear the hissing of the waters when the glowing globe was plunged therein) he was seized by Vulcan and placed in a golden goblet. This strange craft, with its astonishing cargo, navigated the ocean by a northerly course so as to reach the east again in time for sunrise the following morning.

Among the more sober physicists of old, as related by Aristotle, it was believed that in some manner the sun was conveyed by night across the northern regions and that darkness was due to mountains which screened off the sunbeams during the voyage.

Anticipation.

Lieutenant Shackleton tells how when in the antarctic wastes he and his companions sustained their spirits and their bodies as well when supplies had to be cut down to a minimum by dwelling upon the glorious eating they would have on returning to headquarters. The value of such mental sustenance has long been recognized by up to date commanders. There was the German officer in the war of 1870 who sustained the flagging spirits and weary legs of his men by shouting: "There is a brewery inside that town! Let us get there before anybody else!" History relates that the men did get there with remarkable speed. Equally shrewd was that Japanese commander in the Manchurian war who, seeing his men exhausted with thirst and knowing full well the wonderful properties of pickled plums, cried out, "Two miles from here there is a forest of plums." The anticipated plums went far to relieve their parched mouths.

What West Point Does For Its Cadets.

What West Point does for its cadets is precisely this: It takes its youth at the critical period of growth; it isolates them completely for nearly four years from the vicious influences that corrupt young manhood and from the atmosphere of commercialism; it provides absorbing employment for both mental and physical activities; it surrounds them with exacting responsibilities, high standards and exalted traditions of honor and integrity, and it demands a rigid accountability for every moment of their time and for every voluntary action. It offers them the inducements of an honorable career and a sufficient competence as a reward of success, and it has imperative authority for the enforcement of its conditions and restraints.—Colonel Charles W. Larned in National Magazine.

VOL. XXVII. THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1910 NUMBER 6

TELLS WHERE HE STANDS

Congressman Steenerson Issues a Statement to the Ninth District Voters.

Contest for Republican Nomination Promises to Be a Very Warm One.

The contest for the Republican nomination for congressman in this congressional district promises to be a warm affair this summer. When two such men as Congressman Steenerson and Henry E. Bjorge lock horns, there is sure to be something doing. In regard to the charges recently made by Mr. Bjorge against Mr. Steenerson, the congressman takes exception and has written a letter to the people of the Ninth district in which he explains his position.

Mr. Steenerson denies that he is in favor of "Cannonism", and insists that he ardently favors many reforms in the house. But he says he could not bolt the republican caucus nominee for speaker and still claim to be a republican. He notes that he worked against Cannon before the caucus and in the caucus, but after Cannon had been made the party candidate for speaker, he felt constrained to vote for him.

After pointing out in detail the various ways in which he has attempted to secure reforms in the house, Mr. Steenerson sums up this part of his case as follows:

"I contend that my record is perfectly consistent with my party principles and my profession. I have stood for reforms, but within the party. I have been an insurgent, but I have refused to join the democracy. Having sought and obtained the nomination and election as a republican, I did not see how I could honestly do so".

Mr. Steenerson turns the tables on Mr. Bjorge, who has been a member of the legislature in Minnesota. Looking over the rules of the Minnesota house, Mr. Steenerson finds that they give the speaker there many times the authority that the speaker has in Washington, and yet Mr. Bjorge, he finds, voted for the Minnesota house rules, which clothe the local speaker with all this great power. For instance, according to Mr. Steenerson's statement, the Minnesota speaker appoints sixty three house employees, who draw aggregate salaries of $318 50 a day, which is very much greater patronage power than Speaker Cannon has. The Minnesota speaker names all committee clerks, while in congress each committee names its own clerk.

Summing up, Mr. Steenerson asks: "Why did Mr. Bjorge thus vote to nullify the constitution and destroy representative government in his own state and subject the people thereof to such absolute and uncontrolled despotism? He out cannoned Cannon. How can he be expected to pursue a different course, if elected to congress"?

As a sort of confession of political faith, Mr. Steenerson, at the end of his statement, has this to say:

"I refused to follow the republican leaders on the tariff bill, because, in my opinion, it failed to comply with the national platform on which I was elected. I started my objections to the house the day the bill went to conference and I voted accordingly. To now charge that I was insincere and did not mean it is to be so utterly unfair and unjust as to require no answer.

"I have voted and worked for a reform in the rules so as to reduce the power of the speaker, and have gone to the very limit in my insurgency, short of leaving the party. To have done so would by no means have insured the desired reform, for the democrats are not united on that question. Give them power, and they will do just as they did before—adopt the most despotic rules imaginable.

"If you approve of these reforms, they can be got only through the republican party, and not by progressivism, which means party desertion and a surrender to the opposition, where genuine reform is hopeless.

"To the question as to who," in the event of my election, I will support for speaker, I reply I will support any good republican, who is favorable to the reform in the rules for which I stand, with the other insurgents. There are several candidates already, one from New England, one from the middle west, and two or three from the west, any one of whom would make a good speaker.

"Are we to understand that Mr. Bjorge is a candidate for nomination of a party, whose nominee for speaker, he pledges himself in advance to bolt and repudiate? My position on the speakership was well known in the last campaign. I announced that I was opposed to Cannon, but not pledged to any other aspirant. I refused to say I would bolt Cannon, if he became the republican nominee.

"My opponent in the last campaign, running independently with democratic backing, was making exactly the same issue against me as Mr. Bjorge now makes. Evidently, this is not only a borrowed, but a worn-out issue, and it ought not to be injected into a republican primary campaign".

ANNUAL MEETING OF CO-OPERATIVE CREAMERY

Officers Elected and Annual Report of Treasurer and Secretary Is Made.

The annual meeting of the shareholders in the Thief River Falls Co-Operative Creamery company was held in this city last Saturday. The attendance was quite large and the meeting was an interesting one. The Ladies' Aid of the Norwegian Lutheran Synod church served a most sumptuous dinner to the members of the association and the businessmen of Thief River Falls, who were the guests of the farmers. About 250 were present at dinner.

The meeting of the association was held in the Antlers Club rooms in the afternoon and after it had been called to order by President J. O. Thorstad, the annual report and address of Secretary Engelstad was read. Treasurer Bekken also gave an account of money received and paid out by him for the past year.

State Creamery Inspector Storvick was present and called upon for an address. He paid the local creamery a fine compliment and gave much of the credit for the success of the institution to the officers.

Rev. Pope was the next speaker and told the farmers present how to make money raising hogs. Mr. Pope says that he made good money the past year in raising hogs and said that Thief River Falls was an excellent market.

Supt. J. H. Hay gave an interesting address and told what the schools of Thief River Falls were doing for the farmers' boys and girls. Rev. Aastad, D. P. O'Neill and Rev. Callaway also gave short and interesting addresses.

The election of officers proved to be quite a spirited affair. For president of the association, C. Christianson, and J. O. Thorstad were placed in nomination, the former being elected by a vote of 36 to 24. For secretary, Peter Engelstad and F. F. Satro were nominated and Mr. Engelstad won by a vote of 45 to 23. M. P. Bekken was again treasurer, receiving 45 votes to 18 cast for Oscar Sponheim. R. L. Muzzey and N. S. Nelson were elected directors without opposition.

Nose Counters' Pay.

Owing to the vast differences, which confront census enumerators in the various parts of the country and the varying wage scale conforming to these differences, Census Director Durand has adopted a classification of rates of compensation, within the limits prescribed by the United States census law enacted by congress.

There are three general rates—the capita, the mixed and the per diem—the first and second having five subdivisions each.

The per diem rates range from $3 to $3.50, $4, $4.50, $5, $5.50, and $6, and are to be paid for a day of eight hours work.

For enumerators on the per capita basis, which will be that most widely used, the pay for each inhabitant is: Class A, 2 cents; class B, 2½ cents; class C, 3 cents; class D, 3½ cents, and class E, 4 cents. Such enumerators will also be paid for each farm as follows: Class A, 20 cents; class B, 22½ cents; class C, 25 cents; class D, 27½ cents, and class E, 30 cents. These rates are in each case 5 cents or more higher than those paid in 1900, when the range was from 15 to 20 cents. For each establishment of productive industry, the rate for each class is 30 cents. For each barn and inclosure containing live stock, not on farms, the pay is 10 cents for each class.

Under the mixed rate, which is a combination of the per capita and the per diem, there are five subclasses alphabetically arranged, and the per diem is: Class F, $1; G, $1.25; H, $1.50; I, $1.75, and J, $2. For each inhabitant the pay is: Class F, 2 cents; G, 2¼ cents; H, 2¼ cents; I, 2½ cents, and J, 3 cents. For each farm: Class F, 15 cents; G, 17½ cents; I, and J, 20 cents each. For each establishment of productive industry the rate is 20 cents for each class.

A New Post Office Ruling.

Postmaster Kratka received a notice last week from the fourth assistant postmaster general of a new ruling the department has made, which will be of interest to those living upon rural routes. The order goes into effect upon the 15th of February and is as follows:

"In view of the extent to which the practice of placing loose coins in boxes by rural patrons has grown, and the delay in the delivery and collection of mail and the hardship imposed on rural carriers incident thereto, you are informed that, commencing February 15, proximo, rural letter carriers will not be required to collect loose coins from rural mail boxes.

Patrons should enclose coins in an envelope, wrap them securely in a piece of paper, or deposit them in a coin-holding receptacle, so they can be easily and quickly taken from boxes, and carriers will be required to lift such coins, and, where accompanied by mail for dispatch, attach the requisite stamps.

Will Be Absent for Some Time.

N. W. Tarrant, who left last week for Fox Lake, Wis., to attend the funeral of his brother, will remain there for several weeks. He has been appointed administrator of the estate of his brother, who was for years the leading general merchant of that town and left a large estate. It will make it necessary for Mr. Tarrant to remain there for several weeks until the business can be closed out.

Officers were elected as follows:

Vice President—O. L. Larson.
Secretary—J. S. Roy.
Treasurer—Chas. Gustafson.

The total of business one year ago shows a total of $64,556.47; last year a total of $74,356.57, or a material increase of about $10,000.

The following figures were presented by Treasurer Gustafson:

Want to Be All Indian.

We see by the papers that Uncle Sam has taken over the control of the saloon business and we have been wondering why if such being the case this whole section of Minnesota might not rightly be called an Indian reservation. When Uncle Sam impose the same restrictions on the white man as he does on "Poor Lo" why not extend the white man the same favors as he does the Indian and even matters up a little? We would be glad to know just when we shall call for our annuities.—Park Rapids Clipper.

Sparrows as Food.

During the agitation over the high cost of food, the fact that English sparrows, usually regarded as pests, are edible is interesting. A bulletin of the department of agriculture just issued, says: "Since English sparrows are a pest and a reduction of their number is important on economic grounds, there would seem to be no reason why the birds, when trapped or shot, should not be utilized for food in this country as they have been in the Old World for centuries. Their flesh is palatable and nutritious and in city restaurants, they are often served under the name of reed birds".

School Notes.

The Knox school exhibit attracted a large number of visitors last Friday. It afforded a fine opportunity for comparison of any pupil's work with that of his classmates. The exhibit was extensive and well balanced and covered every study in school except reading. It will be left in place for a few days more to permit those who could not be present last Friday an opportunity of seeing it.

The members of the Junior class held their annual class party last Saturday evening in the high school building. Miss Dewey, class adviser, directed the young people's fun and all report a delightful time.

An epidemic of colds has played havoc with the children's comfort and health for three weeks past and has caused much irregularity of attendance.

It might be repeated that beginners should not enter school until April 1st when a new class will be formed in each primary room. The primary teachers all have very full rooms now and two or three beginners at this time merely delay the work for the whole room without any beneficial results for the new child.

The normal students are doing excellent work in their practice teaching. Several of these young people are fast developing into particularly clever teachers and all of them will be qualified for rural school work by the end of the school year.

A lively series of basketball games were played at the rink last Thursday evening. The Junior boys won over their opponents of the other classes while the Sophomore girls proved too much for those opposing them. A fast city team of ex-collegians defeated the best quint the high school boys could get together by a score of 11 to 8. Thursday evening of this week will surely give visitors more than their money's worth. Everybody should attend.

In all grades above the primary and first, twenty-five minutes per day are devoted to writing. Of this time, ten minutes are devoted exclusively to arm and muscular movement and the balance to writing. A combination of the Palmer and Economy systems is used and an earnest effort is being made throughout the school to secure better results in writing.

The Seniors presented a neat literary program last Friday evening at the high school assembly room. Many visitors attended and the entertainment was added to materially by an interesting chemical experiment by Alf Berry and by short addresses by Messrs. O'Neill and Backe, two board members who were present. Every two weeks the high school classes in turn will present this program.

CARAVAN BREADMAKING.

Afghans Use Cobblestones, While Turcomans Like Sand.

The bread of the Afghan caravan was cooked by heating small round cobblestones in the fire and then poking them out and wrapping dough an inch thick about them. The balls thus formed were again thrown into the fire, to be poked out again when cooked. The bread tasted well there in the desert, although in civilized communities the grit and ashes would have seemed unendurable.

After good fellowship had been established the Afghans actually sold us some flour, says a writer in the National Geographical Magazine. The camp where we used it a little later happened to be beside the sandy bed of a trickling salt stream, which was drinkable in winter, but absolutely unusable in summer, when evaporation is at its height and the salt is concentrated.

"See," said one of our Turcomans as we dismounted; "here is some sand. Tonight we can have some good bread."

When some dry twigs had been gathered he proceeded to smooth off a bit of the cleanest sand and built upon it a hot fire. When the sand was thoroughly hot he raked off most of the coals and smoothed the sand very neatly. Meanwhile one of the other men had made two large sheets of dough about three-quarters of an inch thick and eighteen inches in diameter. Between these he placed a layer of lumps of sheep's tail fat, making a huge round sandwich. This was now spread on the hot sand, coals mixed with sand were placed completely over it, and it was left to bake. Now and then an edge was uncovered, and a Turcoman smelled it appreciatively and rapped on it to see if it was yet cooked. When the top was thoroughly baked the bread was turned over and covered up again. It tasted even better than the Afghan bread after it was cooled a little and the sand and ashes had been whisked off with a girdle. The Turcomans are so accustomed to life in the sandy desert that they think it impossible to make the best kind of bread without sand, while the Afghans, who live in the stony mountains, think that cobblestones are a requisite.

A BLOW IN JAMAICA

Things That Happen When a Big Storm Breaks Loose There.

A WEST INDIAN HURRICANE.

It Will Leap Out of a Clear Sky and Level Almost Everything In Its Path—Then Comes a Torrential Downpour That Ends In a Flood.

"Have you ever been through a West Indian hurricane?" said a man who has lived in the tropics on and off for a number of years. "Do you want to know what the experience is like?

"A hurricane will leap out of a clear sky, swoop down on a city, blow everything in its path flat and pass on. Then follows the tail of the hurricane, a steady breeze blowing in the same direction, but at a much lower velocity. This is likely to continue for many hours, sometimes for many days, and is always accompanied by a torrential downpour of rain.

"I was in Kingston, Jamaica, at the time of the hurricane of 1903. At 3 o'clock in the afternoon I was in my office on the top floor of a rickety wooden building. As suddenly as a clap of thunder the room went dark.

"I had a pretty good idea of what was about to happen and, going to the window, looked out across the roofs. A black cloud had whirled up out of the southwest, obscuring the sun, but the mountains back of the city were still golden with light.

"In less than a quarter of an hour the wind reached us. The first structure that went was a wooden watchtower about 200 feet high that had been used in the old days to locate ships approaching the harbor. It had weathered all previous hurricanes, but this time it went down like a house of cards. Spars of lumber from that tower were carried as far as twenty blocks before they came to the ground.

"Then the spire of the church went, the roofs of a good many residences were torn off, and some fine palm trees in the public gardens snapped off about halfway from the ground. Buildings in Kingston, however, are calculated to stand a pretty severe blow. They are built only a few stories high, and the roofs present a broad and comparatively flat surface to the wind. Considering the velocity at which that hurricane was traveling, the damage was not great. Even my crazy office building withstood it. But the tail of the thing followed, with a heavier rain than I have ever seen before or since. To say that it came down in bucketfuls would be mild. It was as if the clerk of the weather had taken the plug out of some huge vat suspended above our heads and allowed the water to plump straight down on us.

"In three hours the macadam on the streets had been washed into the harbor. The street outside my window was a rushing river as much as four feet deep in places. I saw a cart try to cross it, but with the water above the axle of the wheel and the horse's legs being washed away from under it it was an impossible task, and the driver turned back. Big casks and packing cases were dancing on the surface like corks.

"As you can imagine, I did not get home to supper that evening. It was 8 o'clock before the rain stopped and the water in the streets had drained into the harbor. Even then traffic had not begun to reorganize itself.

"The trolley car tracks had been washed out, and no cars were running. Cabs, however, were doing a roaring business, and eventually I got a cabman to drive me home for three times his customary charge.

"The damage to property in Kingston mounted up to hundreds of thousands of dollars, but the real destruction was wrought in the country districts. Floods wiped out many a negro village and sent the flimsy houses floating down the rivers. The railroads were tied up for nearly a week. Every banana tree in the path of the hurricane was uprooted. Oh, yes, a West Indian hurricane can do a lot of damage when it gets busy.

"Loss of life, did you say? Of course there was. Nearly 200 people were killed throughout the island on that occasion, but we grow accustomed to that in the West Indies. We expect a hurricane every once in awhile, and we know that it will take its toll of human life when it comes. If you had been telling the story you would probably have mentioned that first of all, but sudden death is so common below the tropic of Cancer that we get callous, I suppose."—New York Sun.

Albion and Columbia.

"Albion, the Gem of the Ocean," was written and composed by Jesse Hammond, an English government dock official, about 1820 and was heard above all others in the theaters, music halls and on London streets. It is apparent that "gem of the ocean" fits an island more aptly than our large tract of continent, and "borne by the red and the blue" (the red of the British army and blue of the navy) is more logical than the meaningless line "borne by the red, white and blue." The lines of the English songs are almost word for word identical with our version, "The Red, White and Blue."—Exchange.

REORGANIZE THE CLUB

Unanimus Opinion Seems to Be That City Should Get Busy.

Plan to Reorganize Commercial Club and Have a Paid Secretary.

At a meeting of the business men held in the Antlers Club rooms Monday evening it was unanimously decided to revive the Commercial Club and put new life into this organization. C. L. Hanson was chairman of the meeting and he was given the power to name committees and take whatever action he deemed proper.

There is many important questions to be decided in the near future that is of great importance to Thief River Falls and a good, live commercial club will be badly needed. It was thought advisable to employ some person as secretary of the club who will devote his entire time to the work and correspondence of the organization and pay a salary of about $75 per month.

A large "get together" dinner is to be served at sometime in the near future at which all of the residents of the city will be invited to attend and at this meeting steps will be taken to reorganize the club.

LORD KITCHENER.

He Has Little Personal Vanity and Hates to Wear a Uniform.

Of Lord Kitchener's characteristics when he visited Pekin recently a correspondent writes: "His personal appearance disappointed me. From his photographs one would imagine him to be a handsome man, with a face rugged and keen. One thinks of him unconsciously as in the prime of life. But in reality he is already nearly sixty years of age, and his appearance is neither striking nor unusual. Only a pair of remarkably keen and piercing eyes give promise of exceptional penetration and power. Probably he is the greatest soldier of this age, and yet one might easily pass him by on the street without remarking him or, with his hat on to cover his eyes, thinking him anything but a man whose complexion by a combination of alternate high living and exposure to weather is exceptionally florid.

"That he has little personal vanity is immediately apparent. He stepped off his special train in a worn tweed suit, a cap and a pair of brown boots with holes in them. By his own wish no guards of honor came to welcome him except one small guard of Chinese, and he had to be reminded of their presence as he was striding off the platform. Englishmen of his type hate any personal show. I am told it is a real penance for 'K. of K.' to put on his uniform, and the one unhappy hour he spent in Pekin was when he had to get into it and go to court, with all his orders and his field marshal's ivory baton in his hand.

"At all the other functions in the Chinese capital he wore ordinary clothes and at official banquets dress clothes and the Order of Merit, of which he is justly proud. When he was in India he did all he could to discourage foppery among his officers, and a good story is told of a young subaltern who drew a lady's lace bordered handkerchief from his pocket and wiped his lips with it in Kitchener's presence. 'Will you tell me,' said the field marshal, walking up to the young man and speaking in icy tones, 'what brand of hairpins you use?'"—Chicago News.

Paying to Work.

There is no city on earth where the tip system is more deeply rooted than in Paris, and yet, if we are to believe M. Jabouynat, secretary of the Chambre Syndicat Ouviere des Limonadiers, the cafe and restaurant waiters desire nothing better than to see the abolition of the pourboire. "What that day arrives," he says, "our comrades will realize the necessity of grouping themselves together for the purpose of obtaining a fixed salary from their employers. Today we receive no salary, only the pourboire, and not always that. Some employers, finding that we make too much, deduct as much as 40, 50 and even 60 per cent of our tips. I could tell you of one cafe where eighteen employees hand over to the house over £2,400 a year. Most employees are paid for working; we others pay for the privilege."—Caterer.

Mahogany Trees.

The observations of H. N. Thompson, conservator of forests for southern Nigeria, indicate that the mahogany tree grows much more rapidly than the number of so called annual rings suggests. Mr. Thompson thinks that they show three or four well marked zones of growth each year, corresponding to the four seasons. Both forest trees and those grown in the botanical garden exhibit the same phenomenon. On the site of the town of Ijaye, destroyed sixty years ago, a forest has grown up containing mahogany trees with trunks exceeding ten feet in girth.

The Fight on Consumption.

Based on reports gathered from all parts of the United States, the National Association For the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis has issued a bulletin in which it is stated that $8,180,621.50 was expended during the year just closed by the various interests fighting consumption in the United States. The bulletin shows that in the year 1909 over 10,000,000 pieces of literature were distributed and that 117,312 patients were treated and assisted by the sanitariums, dispensaries and anti-tuberculosis associations.

Soapstone Fibers.

The discovery a few years ago by Professor Boys that fused quartz can be drawn into exceedingly fine fibers, which are superior to all others for many laboratory purposes, has been followed by Professor Shenstone with similar experiments with soapstone. When highly heated soapstone melts into a clear glass, which can be drawn out into fine fibers, possessing all the qualities of elasticity and resistance to chemical reagents that characterize quartz fibers.—St. Louis Republic.

The Telegraph In Porto Rico.

In Porto Rico the government telegraph service extends to every town either directly or by telephone, and in addition many of the large barrios and important sugar mills are connected with the main line. The government receives messages over the phones and transmits them by telegraph at low rates. So profitable an investment has the whole system been from the start that recently Uncle Sam reduced the price of telegrams.

Grant's Tomb.

Little in the way of vandalism ever has been discovered at Grant's tomb, but policemen assigned to that beat say that many smokers who wander in that vicinity go out of their way to scratch parlor matches on some part of the mausoleum. Such a scratch is almost indelible.—New York Press.

COLLEGE PRESIDENTS.

They Have to Hustle All the Time to Raise Money.

The day has passed when a college president was chosen for his shining example of godly living rather than for his executive ability. The modern president is an administrator rather than a teacher, and, as a rule, he does not appear in the class room, but keeps office hours like any other man of business. In a great university he comes but rarely into close personal contact with the students. The only occasions upon which he addresses them at length are perhaps at the beginning of the academic year, when the freshmen are welcomed, and at its close, when on commencement day the degrees are conferred. Most of his time and energy must necessarily be devoted to the unceasing endeavor to produce the wherewithal for the maintenance of the diverse beneficent activities of the university. The head of one of our great institutions of learning, which receives a fairly large annual appropriation from the state, has said:

"For every day of my life I am bound to raise $1,000 for this institution. If I fall behind at one period I must raise more at another time to maintain the average."

If the average college president were free to make confession he would admit that abstruse philosophical issues do not generally give him so much concern as the concrete problem of how he is to make a living for his university.

The productive funds at Harvard university amount to $21,000,000; Columbia has $23,500,000; Yale has $9,500,000 and the University of Pennsylvania $5,300,000. The profitable investment of these great trust funds, which are always inadequate to the needs of these expanding institutions, requires financial and business acumen of the highest order. The treasurer must be a man who knows the money market as the eighteenth century bursar or steward knew his Bible. The conservation of the resources of the modern university has become the business of a man of highly specialized training, and the ideal life of the academic community comprehends but dimly, if at all, the magnitude of the fiscal transactions incident to the existence and necessary to the welfare of the institution.—Philadelphia Ledger.

His Minus Bank Account.

Secretary of State Knox has, in addition to dignity and a profound knowledge of the constitution of the United States, a sense of humor. Sometimes he uses it, and he did recently on a newspaper reporter who visited his home. The reporter wanted to know something, and he found out nothing.

"Just as a lawyer, not as secretary of state, how about this proposition, Mr. Secretary?" he asked finally.

"You have not approached me in the proper manner to get my opinion as a lawyer," answered the secretary of state.

"I don't carry my check book on Sunday," ventured the ocular scribe.

"Where do you keep your overdraft now?" asked Mr. Knox as the reporter started for his hat.—New York World.

Fruitful Investments.

The story of the widow's cruse of oil is almost outdone by the experience of Northwestern university. In 1853 the university bought a tract of land in Evanston, Ill., for its campus and paid $25,000 for it. Several hundred thousand dollars' worth of land has been sold from the tract, and the amount left is worth $2,500,000. The same year it invested $8,000 in Chicago real estate, and the plot of ground is now worth about $2,000,000. Although the total amount of gifts received has been only $3,000,000, the assets of the university now amount to $9,000,000.—Youth's Companion.

The Champion Tightwad.

A candidate for an exalted position in the Ancient Order of Mean Men has been discovered by Simplicissimus. He is an apothecary in whose place of business a young apprentice committed suicide. When the weeping mother called he said: "I am really sorry for you and also that your son died in my shop. You have my sympathy. Here is his last week's pay. Of course I deducted 80 pfennigs for the poison which he took."

The Young King of Portugal.

"Yesterday I was a midshipman," said Manuel of Portugal after the assassination of his father and elder brother had made him monarch; "today I am a king. I know nothing about reigning, because I am very young and never thought of being king. Thus I beg of you to be my friends and give me good advice." These pathetic phrases are said to give the key to the boy monarch's character.

Brass Bands.

A little more than seventy years ago there was no such thing as a brass band in existence. The very first band entirely of brass dates no farther back than 1835. Prior to that time even the military music was produced almost entirely from instruments of wood, and as recently as 1873 a full regimental band consisted of two oboes, two clarinets, two horns and bassoons.

Ten Days For Keeping His Hat On.

The law on lese majesty in Germany was reformed a couple of years ago and deprived of its former severity, so that a tailor's apprentice named Waclow, tried under it at Schneidemuhl recently for failing to raise his hat when some one called for three cheers for the emperor, was sentenced to only ten days' imprisonment.

Al. H. Jester, of Bemidji, has announced that he will be a candidate for the Republican nomination for state senator from this district, and the Ada Index states that A. L. Thompson, of Mahnomen, will also be candidate for this same office. It is not known whether or not Senator A. L. Hanson will be candidate for re-election, but if he enters the race again he will have strong backing. Albert Berg, of Spooner, Beltrami county, formerly secretary of state, has filed as a candidate and the chances are that the next state senator from this district will know that he has been in a contest.

The crops through the United States last year were the best for many years and more grain, vegetables, fruits and other products were raised than in any one year. Yet notwithstanding the harvest was abundant, prices are unusually high. Had the crop been poor the prices would have been higher. What of the future? It is not reasonable to suppose that the crops will continue to be so universally good. A poor crop means a shortage, and as Americans are consuming the larger per cent of what is produced on farms of the United States, the surplus that we sell abroad does not determine the price as it used to do when the surplus was larger. This is particularly true of wheat. The apparent solution of the problem of high prices is to open up more farms, and to have these farms smaller and better cultivated There is no longer any danger from the farmer's point of view of producing too much. It will soon become a question of raising enough to supply the home market. The government has given away most of its lands, but there are still millions of acres that have never been touched with the plow, and which in time will be added to the producing acres of the country. Agriculturally the United States is just coming to its own. There is no more certain way of obtaining an independent income and of making a good home for the family than can be found on the farm. Personally we believe the farmers are entitled to all they are getting. In the big cities there are undoubtedly as Secretary Wilson explained, "a rascally combination between the dealers," that adds an reasonable profit, and this combination starts with the big dealers.—St. Cloud Journal Press.

Germantown.

In order to prevent any further delay in the work on the Germantown ditch from now on, arising from failure of the engineer to make timely reports, or otherwise, a mass meeting of parties interested or affected by the ditch project was held here on Saturday to prepare and forward a petition to the county commissioners urging that body to see that nothing tending to rush the work on to a speedy finish be left undone. The petition was signed by about 90 farmers and the matter of looking after their interests is to be left in the hands of County Attorney Wm. J. Brown.

Coal to be used by the dredges next summer is now being distributed along the ditch route and that work is expected to be finished within the next few weeks.

The sleigh roads have been excellent for some time past and consequently a heavy share of the farmers' grain has been dumped on the market. CREAMERY MEETING.

In submitting the above report just read to you, I can't help but casting a glance at the past. Although, I had faith in the enterprise right from the beginning, I never dreamed then, that it would be such a success in such a short time, nor do I think that anybody else entertained such an idea. I remember at one instance when I and another member of the board approached one of the most prominent business men of our city and asked for a donation to help the enterprise along. I told him then, that our intention was to run the creamery the year around. With a smile he made the following remark: "You can't do it boys." But from the first day when the creamery at Thief River Falls commenced its business under the firm, style and name of "The Farmers' Co-operative Creamery Association," then from the very same day and until now, our creamery has been in operation every day, winter and summer.

There has been steady growth, a marked progress from year to year and considering the raw material both as to quantity as well as quality which we have had at our disposition our creamery has set a record, that is hard to beat.

The increase in butterfat above last year is 20½ per cent while the increase in our gross receipt is 37½ per cent. Under normal conditions an increased production means decreased cost of manufacture. Cost of manufacture one pound of butter last year was 1.95 cents, to this year with the 20½ per cent increase in butterfat it has enabled us to bring down the cost of manufacturing one pound of butter another quarter of a cent making it 1.70 for 1909.

Our balance in the sinking fund shows up a good deal better at the end of the year 1909 than 1908, for the fact that duirng the last fiscal year not very much has been expended on the property neither outside nor inside the plant compared with former years. Up to the beginning of last year the sinking fund was mostly at all times consumed as fast as it came in in the expenditure on outside improvements as well as further improvement inside. The condition of our expense fund has been reversed entirely from that of last year. The usual custom before, when a car of tubs arrived or a car of coal was on hand, was to go and borrow money and pay for same. When the car was used up, then there was money in the fund to pay for that note. The condition to-day is this, that we have the money in the fund to pay for a car of tubs or whatever it may be, and when the car is used up, the money is back in the fund and instead of paying interest we are drawing interest.

On account of the prevailing high prices of butter during the last year our average price of butterfat is 4.33 of a cent better than last year and such figures certainly ought to be a stimulant to give the cows the best of attention. That there will be good prices during the ensuing year there is no doubt about and I hope that our creamery during the coming year will enjoy the increase and prosperity corresponding with the years which have passed.

The opportunities for dairying in this locality are as good as anywhere else in the state and far better than the average There are mighty few places which have greater advantages, but there are lots and lots of other localities where opportunities are not as good, that is why we are occupying a front seat, so far as the adaptability of our locality to successful dairying is concerned. I remain,

Yours for future success,
P. ENGELSTAD, Secretary.

Contract to Be Let March 1.

Bids have been asked for Judicial Ditch No. 11, which will drain Marshall and Beltrami counties. Those bids will be received, March 1 at Warren, the county seat of Marshall, and Bemidji, the county seat of Beltrami county.

Judicial Ditch No. 11 is the greatest drainage project ever undertaken in the state of Minnesota, being five times larger than any other attempted in the past. It will drain approximately 200,000 acres in the two counties, and will cost in the neighborhood of $530,000. More than 5,540,000 cubic yards of earth will be removed during the course of excavation, and it is expected that the work will consume the greater part of three years.

All the land, which will be drained by Judicial Ditch No. 11, lies to the east and north of Thief River Falls. This land will make ideal farming districts, and will be ready for the plow as soon as it is drained. There is little or no timber on the land.

Goes Out West.

"Black" Pat Sullivan leaves East Grand Forks today for Bonners Ferry Idaho, where he has accepted a position with the R. H. McCoy sawmill. Pat was deputy sheriff after Sheriff Daniels was elected, but resigned, preferring his former work as a river foreman or connected with a sawmill in some capacity. He was very popular as an official, and has a host of friends along the river from Red Lake to Grand Forks.—East Grand Forks Valley View.

SHOOTING UP LANIGAN'S.

He blowed inter Lanigan's, swingin' a gun—
An' swearin',
Declarin'.
Red rivers 'ud run
Down Alkali valley an' oceans o' gore
'Ud wash sudden death on th' sagebrushy shore,
An' shot a big hole into Lanigan's floor.

He blowed inter Lanigan's, swingin' a gun,
A new one,
A blue one,
A Colt's forty-one.
He shot some, permiskus, where Lanigan stood
An' would have put Lanigan in bad fer good,
But th' leg that he happened t' shoot in was wood.

He blowed inter Lanigan's, shoutin' like mad
An' ravin',
Gun wavin',
Gin ugly an' bad.
He shot a knothole outen Lanigan's leg—
Th' wood one—an' shot th' bung outen a keg,
An' nigh let th' liquor all out, every dreg.

An' Lanigan, seein' him goin' too far,
Too frisky,
With whisky
Wuth cash at th' bar,
Reached over an' pulled out a big forty-four
An' plugged him between th' back bar an' th' door
Till he was less harmful than he was before.

He blowed inter Lanigan's, lookin' fer gore,
An' tarried—
We carried
Him out on a door,
An' Lanigan took a big splinter leg
An' got out his jackknife an' whittled a peg
To stop up th' hole he shot inter th' keg!

Began to chase 'em pretty soon,

But, alas, he wasn't in the race,
So he soon gave up the chase

And dropped to earth once more,
Feeling down and out and sore,

Then, forgiving them by telegraph,
Went home and laughed the merry laugh.

WOMAN'S STUDY OF A JOKE.

The Fun of It Comes When Her Curiosity Begins to Get Busy.

Mr. Smuggins was reading to his wife such stray bits from the evening paper as he thought would interest her. Presently he began to laugh with great glee.

"What is it that is so funny, John?" she inquired, seeing that he was not intending to read the item to her.

"Why, here's something about a darky in Kentucky that came limping into a store, and when the proprietor asked him what ailed his feet he said a man had hit him over the head with a maul when he was standing on a hard sidewalk."

"I don't see anything funny in that," she protested.

"Can't you see that his head"— And he began laughing again.

"No, I can't," she insisted. "I think it was cruel of some one to strike him like that, and he should have been punished for it."

"Really?" inquired Mr. Smuggins, looking at his wife seriously.

"Of course I do. Don't you?"

"Well, there are worse things, I suppose," he said, "but if you think he ought to be punished I won't say a word."

He resumed reading, and for five minutes silence prevailed.

"John," inquired Mrs. Smuggins after the interval, "how did it hurt his feet so to be hit over the head?"

Then Mr. Smuggins fairly roared, and Mrs. Smuggins went out of the room in high dudgeon.—William S. Lampton in Judge.

TIDINGS FROM SCANDINAVIA

Interesting News from Sweden, Norway and Denmark.

DEFILIR-COUR IS CONDEMNED

Its Introduction at the Royal Palace in Stockholm by Queen Victoria Is Considered To Have Been a Mistake.

SWEDEN.

Queen Victoria apparently made a big mistake when she introduced a so-called Defilir-Cour at the royal palace on New Year's day, such as that which takes place on every first of January at the imperial palace in Berlin. It appears that the Swedish queen has spent so much of her life abroad that she does not even know her own people and while it might have been all right to give such a thing in Germany, it is absolutely contrary to popular sentiment at Stockholm or throughout the entire country, for that matter. An exchange says: "The athmosphere throughout Sweden is getting to be very Democratic. Within the memory of the present generation only two such Defilir-Cour ever have taken place at the court of Stockholm, one on the occasion of the silver jubilee of King Oscar's succession to the throne and one on the occasion of the accession of the present ruler. The latter, when he became king, gave great satisfaction by announcing that he proposed to dispense with the ceremony of the coronation on the plea that it was an extravagant and utterly useless anchronim, no longer in keeping with public sentiment in Sweden, and his subjects were still more pleased when he abolished a number of expensive offices at court, simplified much of the ceremonial, and did away with many dignities that were as useless as they were costly. The announcement therefore by the grand master of the court, just before Christmas, that a Defilir-Cour would be held at the palace on New Year's day and that every one holding any official position was commanded to attend, aroused no end of criticism, and the move was at once and rightly ascribed to Queen Victoria, who is a German princess by birth. The Swedish press of every shade of political opinion has been outspoken in its condemnation, many of the papers boldly declaring that the bowing, scraping and crawling, in fact, all sorts of subserviency, are entirely foreign to the Swedish character. In spite of this the Defilir-Cour took place as scheduled on New Year's day, but was so sparsely attended that it is doubtful whether the experiment ever will be repeated. At any rate, it will be wise, on the part of Swedish royalty not to attempt it.

QUEEN VICTORIA OF SWEDEN.

The storm which passed over Stockholm on the morning of Jan. 4 was a terrible one and later reports show that it caused immense damage. Fortunately no lives were lost. The street car barns out at Hagalund were completely wrecked. Not for years has such a peculiar storm passed over Stockholm and southern Sweden in midwinter. The storm was accompanied by a violent rain and thunder and the thunderbolts came as thick and fast as in a summer storm. Anything like it has never been recorded at the weather bureau in Stockholm.

Erland Nordenskiold, who during the past two years has been conducting extensive ethnographical investigation in South America, is expected to return to Sweden this spring. It may be that he will prolong the home journey until later on in the summer as he desires to visit the International American congress at Buenos Ayres. It is claimed that young Nordenskiold has made the greatest and most thorough study of the tribes of South America, and that his investigations will be published in book form upon his return to Sweden.

NORWAY.

An exchange states that a committee appointed by the government to consider the question of labor conflicts has signed a unanimous report recommending compulsory arbitration. The plan provides that no strike or lockout shall take place until the controversy has been reported to a council of mediation consisting of three persons. Moreover, the committee unanimously proposes that a national court of arbitration be established for the settlement of labor conflicts. The members of the committee failed to agree, however, as to the scope of power of the court of arbitration. A majority of the committee proposes that, upon request of one of the contending parties, a conflict considered by the council of mediation without being settled shall be appealed to the court of arbitration, and that a unanimous decision of the latter shall be binding upon both parties. The minority proposes, with regard to the jurisdiction of the court of arbitration, that conflicts which the council of mediation proves unable to settle shall be appealed to the court of arbitration only upon the request of both the contending parties. But the decision of the court of arbitration shall be binding even if it is not unanimous. It will be seen that the points of differences between the majority and the minority are of minor importance and it seem very likely that the report, as a whole, is destined to play an important part in labor legislation, not only in Norway, but also elsewhere.

The storthing convened a week ago Wednesday in Christiania. On the first ballot it was shown that 65 storthing representatives belong to the "Hoire" and the moderate "Venstre" party, 47 to the radical "Venstre" and 11 to the Social Democratic party. The storthing has appointed a committee to act on the proposition of starting an American Steamship line, rather a Norwegian-American Steamship line and it is evident that almost all the members of the storthing are deeply interested in the movement.

DENMARK.

There is not a single non-Christian left on the west coast of Greenland, says Lutheran women workers. The Danish Missionary society took up the work established by Hans Egede, and for eighty seven years have labored there with splendid results. A committee has been formed in the colony itself, which will assume charge of the work, leaving the missionary society free to withdraw.

The committee of the University of Copenhagen has completed its examination of Dr. Frederick A. Cook's original notes, and have now confirmed its conclusions that not the slightest proof that the explorer reached the north pole had been submitted. The question is now discussed whether the committee will investigate Commander Peary's papers. Professor Salmonsen says the question has no practical interest, as Peary it not likely to submit his papers to the committee fearing the results.

Not for many years has there been so much eccentric weather as in Copenhagen as during the past month. There have been rain and thunder showers right in the middle of winter and a feature of it all has been the exceeding dampness of the weather. It seems that an old time winter will so much eccentric weather in Cohagen this season.

The theaters are being patronised this winter in a way that they never have been before. There are full houses every night and if a person wants a good seat at any Copenhagen theater he will have to engage his seat far in advance.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

Because their parents would not let them marry, owing to their youth, Vernon Barr, aged sixteen, and Lina Ammer, aged fourteen, killed themselves at Monroe, Ia. Their bodies were found in the boy's buggy, in which they had ridden home from a dance. The two were clasped in each others' arms and were sitting upright on the seat. An empty poison bottle was in the girl's lap.

Charles O. Tucker, proprietor of a large furniture store at Seattle and Miss Elvira Bunkelman, a young woman often seen in the company of Tucker were found dead on the floor in the hotel apartment of Tucker. The woman is believed to have shot Tucker and then herself.

Penalties of from two to sixteen years were imposed by Judge Taylor, in the federal court at Toledo, O., on fourteen members of the Ohio band of Black Hands who were found guilty of conspiracy to use the mails to extort money from Italians living in Ohio and Indiana.

The Cook county grand jury at Chicago has returned indictments against eleven city employes and contractors charging them with conspiracy to defraud the city of $254,000.

Customs frauds in the importation of mosquito netting showing an alleged loss to the government of more than $800,000 are said to have been discovered in New Orleans.

Mrs. Alice Van Zandt was found roasted to death on top of a stove in the kitchen of her home at Cincinnati. Her hands and feet were bound.

CONGRESSIONAL DOINGS.

Accepting the action of the Democratic caucus the house elected Representative Graham of Illinois as a member of the Ballinger-Pinchot investigating committee in place of Representative Lloyd of Missouri, who resigned following his selection by the Republican caucus and election by the house in lieu of Representative Rainey of Illinois.

The postal savings bank bill was favorably reported in the senate from the committee on postoffices and postroads practically in the form submitted by the subcommittee. Senator Carter, who will have charge of the measure, will seek an early opportunity for consideration by the senate.

Representative Aiken of South Carolina wants the capital of the United States to be "dry" territory. He has introduced a bill providing that not a drop of liquor be sold or given away within the confines of the District of Columbia, not even in a club.

The congressional committee chosen to inquire into the Ballinger-Pinchot controversy began its public sessions with Louis R. Glavis, the chief accuser of Secretary Ballinger, on the stand.

The senate has passed the bill authorizing the sale of the unallotted lands of the Rosebud Indian reservation in South Dakota.

SAYS WHITE SLAVERY EXISTS

Illinois Man Takes Issue With Government Detective.

Recently Joseph Freimuth, representative of the federal "white slave" commission, after an investigation of conditions in Duluth, Minneapolis and St. Paul, reported, among other things, that no "white slave" traffic exists in the state and that immoral resorts in Minnesota are recruited from girls who take up the life from choice.

At a Young Men's Christian association mass meeting at Duluth Clifford G. Roe, former assistant state's attorney of Cook county, Ill., referring to the report of the federal detective, said "white slave traffic does exist in this state," that immoral resorts in Minnesota are recruiting largely from the ranks of the "white slaves" and that, if the government will pay the expense, he will produce absolute evidence that his charges are true. He said:

"One of the first cases I prosecuted was that of Morris Goldstein for selling a Duluth girl into an immoral house. Instances in which girls were imported into this state for such purposes are by no means uncommon, as the court records of Cook county, Ill., will show.

"More than that," continued Mr. Roe, "if Mr. Freimuth or the government will foot the bill, I can obtain incontrovertible testimony that every one of my statements is based on facts and conditions as they are."

INDEPENDENTS ASK ROBE

Want to Know Why Government Does Not Boycott Oil Trust.

Congressional investigation to ascertain why other government departments have not taken up the boycott declared by Secretary of War Dickinson on the Standard Oil company and its allies will be sought as the result of the meeting of the executive committee of the Independent Petroleum Marketers' association, in session at the West hotel, Minneapolis.

The committee emphatically approved the stand taken by Secretary Dickinson in ordering that his department cease buying for army use oils, lubricants and other products marketed by the Standard Oil company and authorized a letter of congratulation to Frank B. Kellogg of St. Paul for his fight against the oil trust before the United States circuit court.

SALOON IS ORDERED CLOSED

Sold Liquor to Indians in Northern Minnesota.

Word has been received at Cass Lake that the saloon operated at Bald Club, thirty miles east of Cass Lake, has been ordered closed by officials of the Indian department.

The first investigation made by the officials led to the belief that the Ball Club saloon did not sell or furnish liquor to Indians and when orders came closing saloons at Cass Lake, Bena and Deer River the Ball Club saloon was allowed to run.

After that complaints came to the department and special agents were sent to make an investigation. They found whisky was being furnished Indians by a go-between or third party. It further appeared that a young Indian was tending bar there.

Thrilling Adventure With Wolves.

Gunner Olson had a thrilling adventure with wolves on the Gunflint road near Grand Marais. He was returning from a drive and heard howling in the woods. Finally three animals came out on the road and followed the sleigh. Several times one or other of them jumped on the rear of the sleigh and bit at the boards. If there had been a larger pack Olson would probably have been killed.

Safecrackers Secure $200 Cash.

Safecrackers visited the American Linen Supply company's establishment at Minneapolis and made away with $200 in cash and some valuable papers. They procured entrance with a skeleton key and muffled the safe with towels and other linen, so that there was no noise. The place is a favorite with burglars, having been robbed several times.

Pay Tribute to John A. Johnson.

Mayor William J. Gaynor, Congressman C. A. Lindbergh of Minnesota, Rev. C. L. Jung and Rev. Dr. S. Jacobson made addresses at the memorial services held at New York city for the late Governor John A. Johnson in the Swedish Lutheran Bethlehem church. There was appropriate music by the chorus choir and also solos.

Record Price for Mules.

Reviled by fashion, abused by army teamsters, abhorred by musicians and ridiculed by humorists, the American mule put in his bid for fame at the Midway horse market at St. Paul when six of his kind were sold at $400 each. This is the highest price ever paid for the long eared creature in the memory of old traders.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

Announcement has been made that Andrew Carnegie has given St. Thomas college $25,000, which will be applied on the $300,000 endowment fund, a start on which was made last spring. Pledges amounting to more than $200,000 have been received by the school authorities, which include a gift of $75,000 from the General Education Board of New York, given on the provision that the college raise $225,000 more.

Pamphlets warning fathers not to allow their daughters to go to the large cities without first knowing that they will be free from evil influences have been sent out over the state by the Minnesota Federation of Women's Clubs. This is the first move in the compaign against the white slave traffic to which the club women pledged themselves at the convention held last year at Lake City.

Additional features of the coming state conservation convention announced by the secretary are illustrated lectures on road making by M. O. Eldridge of the United States bureau of road management and on public school agriculture by Richard J. Crosby. Dr. W. J. McGee, head of the soil bureau of the United States department of agriculture, will speak on soil fertility.

Representative Miller of Duluth has secured favorable reports on three new river and harbor survey projects and on a bill legalizing a railroad bridge across the Mississippi in Aitkin county. The surveys are for an enlarged channel in Rainy river, a breakwater and harbor on Knife river and for dredging on the Upper Mississippi river to relieve flood conditions.

Not a single fire department in the state is ranked as first class by insurance bureaus, according to a report submitted to John A. Hartigan, insurance commissioner, by Edward Peterson, state fire marshal. His report says that St. Paul and Minneapolis maintain departments ranking as second class, while Duluth and Winona follow them closely in rank.

Governor Eberhart has written a letter to Sheriff Frank McDevitt of Dakota county calling his attention to the complaints which the governor has received concerning the holding of several prize fights at South St. Paul. The governor insists that the sheriff take immediate steps to apprehend the offenders or abide the consequences.

John O. Johnson, a White Bear lake boat builder, made a partially successful flight recently in a new style biplane of his own construction. Mr. Johnson rose to a height of about twenty feet and covered a distance of nearly 150 feet before the craft dropped to the ice, the motor having stopped. The machine was slightly damaged.

The railroad rate hearing that has been held at various times for the last year before C. E. Otis, master in chancery, at St. Paul, has practically ended, except in the case of the Minneapolis and St. Louis railway. This will be resumed at some date in the near future and will require but little time.

The new Northwestern telephone rates, which will go into effect March 1, will mean a saving to the business interests of St. Paul of about $12,000 annually and a further reduction, which becomes effective Oct. 1, will mean a saving of about $30,000 to the householders of the city.

In spite of a blinding snow storm and drifted roads several hundred farmers drove to Mankato to attend an indignation meeting over the acquittal a month ago of Mrs. Grace Ledbeter on a charge of murdering her husband.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Professor Jabez Brooks, connected with the University of Minnesota from 1869 until last year and previously president of Hamline college for fifteen years, is dead in California, where he went with his wife and daughter three weeks ago. He was eighty-seven years old. Death occurred at the home of his son in San Jose.

Christmus A. Pichette, aged sixty-eight, one of the first settlers in Appleton, died of pneumonia. He was a member of Company F, Fifth Minnesota infantry, in the Civil war and had been a resident of Appleton since 1870.

C. E. Carnell, an elevator man, died suddenly at Fairmont while weighing a load of grain. He was fifty-two years old and had been afflicted with heart trouble for some time.

Mrs. Catherine Hughes is dead at St. Paul at the age of seventy-eight. She had been a resident of that city fifty years.

Andrew J. Williams, twice elected president of St. Paul Typographical union No. 30, is dead, aged forty-two.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Panic stricken by the sight of fire and maddened when drenched with water by the fire department, thirty horses dashed along Seventh street at St. Paul, causing pedestrians to flee for their lives. Only for members of the police and fire departments many would have been killed or seriously injured.

J. K. Norton of Minneapolis, a railroad conductor, was fatally injured in that city while coupling a freight train. He died a few hours later.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

DEMURRAGE LAW IS UPHELD

Supreme Court Passes on Its Constitutionality.

The Nolan reciprocal demurrage law was held to be constitutional by the state supreme court, Justice Jaggard writing the opinion.

The case was brought to the supreme court on appeal of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway company, against which a verdict had been found in Rock county giving the Hardwick Farmers' Elevator company damages amounting to $218 and $50 attorneys' fees.

The law, according to Justice Jaggard, was designed to insure the prompt performance by the carrier of its common law duty to furnish cars for transportation of freight and was not displaced by the interstate commerce act.

He holds that the provision requiring the payment of attorney's fees is not invalid because it imposes a charge on carriers and not on debtors generally, inasmuch as the statute was enacted in the exercise of the police power of the state.

The law provides that a carrier must furnish cars to the shipper upon demand, within forty-eight hours at terminal and seventy-two hours at intermediate points, after the request is received. Failure to do this carries with it a penalty of $1 a day and attorney's fees.

WOMAN IS NOT MRS. GUNNESS

Indiana Detective Visits Mrs. Casey Near Willmar.

Who is Mrs. Villie Casey?

This is the question which is being asked by thousands of persons in Kandiyohi county, but which can be answered by but one person there. That person is herself, and she refuses to talk.

One thing only is certain. The woman known here as Mrs. Casey is not Mrs. Belle Gunness of Laporte fame. It took but a glance from Detective Sam Ball of Laporte to establish this fact. In company with Sheriff Bonde and Samuel Kirby, the man who has been so zealous in the contention that he had located the Indiana murderess and wanted to save his twin brother in spite of himself, Ball went to the Kirby home. One glance at the woman was sufficient for him, as he knew her for years and talked with her hundreds of times.

"Another fizzle," was all he said.

FIRE DESTROYS SAVINGS

Italian Occupants of Shack Narrowly Escape Death.

Fire at the town of Cass Lake completely destroyed a shack where twelve Italians were living. All their belongings, including $1,500 in money, were destroyed. The men hardly had time to escape through a window and several received serious cuts from broken window glass. This is the second time within two years that their home and year's savings were destroyed by flames. The Italians were afraid to put their money in a bank. They hid it in their bedding.

DENIED BY THE LEADERS

Report That Switchmen's Strike Had Been Declared Off.

Persistent rumors in St. Paul and Minneapolis were to the effect that the switchmen's strike had been declared off and that the men had been told to go back to work in a week. These reports could be traced to no authoritative source, but they were widespread and their very persistence gave them a color of truth. Officials of the union, however, unqualifiedly deny the report and say that the strike is not called off and will not be.

MEN HAVE NARROW ESCAPE

Two Finlanders Imprisoned in Mine Far Underground.

Driving seventeen feet through caved oar was the means of releasing two Finnish miners at Eveleth, who were caught in a cave of ore and timbers, following the breaking of a cap timber in No. 2 Adams, 100 feet underground. Superintendent Davey was summoned and directed the rescue work. After two hours communication was established with the imprisoned miners and they emerged hungry, but unharmed.

Injuries Prove Fatal.

Ed Maloney, thirty-one years of age, died from a fall of thirty feet from the Northern Pacific bridge near Crookston to the ice below. He resided at Red Lake Falls and was a single man. He was a member of a bridge crew and was pulling bolts with a jack when a bolt broke and he was hurled from the structure.

Murderer Given Life Sentence.

Frank Smith's motion for a new trial was denied by Judge Pfau, in district court at Mankato, who at once sentenced him to life imprisonment in the Stillwater penitentiary for the murder of Holland J. Ledbeter.

LUCKY IMITATION.

An Experience With the Russian Autocrat Marshal Gourko.

Marshal Gourko, the famous Russian general, was a terrible autocrat. On one occasion an impersonator of celebrated men was performing at a theater in Odessa. One evening he received a mysterious message, which read, "Study General Gourko." In Russia it is better not to inquire into matters that one does not understand, and so the artist spent an hour in privately impersonating the autocratic Russian.

Just as the evening performance was about to commence an order of arrest signed by Gourko was presented to the impersonator, and without explanation he was led through the streets to the marshal's palace and into an apartment where the terrible man was seated. "They tell me that you impersonate celebrated men," he roared. "Impersonate me!"

Giving a hasty look at Gourko, the performer turned to the mirror to "make up." It was an anxious time, for if the marshal should take exception to the representation he had unlimited power to inflict punishment. The impersonator dragged himself together and turned to the marshal a copy of his own face and overbearing manner. Gourko burst into a roar of laughter, and the dangerous moment was over.

EELS IN JAPAN.

The Restaurant Cook Catches Alive the Fish the Patron Selects.

Entering a Japanese restaurant, a guest who wishes broiled eels and rice is led to a tank of squirming fresh water eels and bidden to point out the object of his preference, says a writer in the Delineator. The cook, who stands by, selects the wriggling victim of his choice, strikes its head smartly upon a wooden block and, squatting by it, grasps the creature's neck, inserts a knife in the left side of the vertebrae and dexterously runs it down to the tail, then, rapidly applying his instrument to the other side of the backbone, repeats the process, leaving the eel split open.

Then, chopping the flattened eel into three inch lengths, the pieces are plunged into boiling water to make the skin tender, long bamboo splints used as skewers are thrust through them, and they are then placed on rods over glowing charcoal and broiled brown, being plunged from time to time into a vessel that contains old soy of the color and consistency of molasses. These preparations concluded, the steaming eels again are drained and placed in red lacquer boxes with rice and set before the customer.

The Phonograph.

One need not be afraid of operating a machine too constantly, as there is little danger of wearing it out, and the motor will give better service when used frequently than when allowed to stand unused. In all cases avoid winding the spring too tightly. Stop when it offers strong resistance. In many cases it is specifically stated that the needles should not be used more than once, and these directions should be observed. Not to follow them means almost certain damage to the records. The machine should be kept well oiled; otherwise its motion will become sluggish. Sewing machine oil may be used for that purpose. The records should be kept free from dust, as dirt clogs the sound wave grooves and tends to give a scratchy sound to the reproduction. A good record cleaner may be made by gluing a small piece of velvet carpet to a wooden block. Such a cleaner always should be used on dusty records before they are placed on the machine.—Suburban Life.

A Dismal World.

"Why are you sad, my dear? You ought to be supremely happy. Here, I've just inherited a fortune, and everything looks rosy. I can't understand why at such a time as this you should look so dismal. What is it? Have you heard bad news from home?"

"No, no; it isn't that. I'll try to throw it off. I suppose I'm foolish not to be thoroughly happy. Let us not mention the matter again."

"But I insist on knowing what it is that so depresses you. If it's anything that I can help I shall"—

"Well, if you must know, I've just heard that the Snobleighs next door are going to move away, so she'll not be here to feel jealous of me when we begin to put on style after you get your money."—Chicago Record-Herald.

His Rent Flag.

On Jan. 18 every year, the anniversary of the battle of Waterloo, the Duke of Wellington is bound to present to the sovereign a small flag, which is the annual rent in "petit sargenty" by which the estate of Strathfieldsaye is held of the crown. The flag must be a miniature tricolor or eagle of the Napoleonic army, fringed with gold, with a gilded eagle on the head of the staff and the number of the year embroidered at the top corner of the flag near the eagle.

THE SKIPPER'S WHITE LIE.

What Happened at Night and What the Passenger Was Told.

It was a dirty night, to use a sailor's phrase, and the talk in one corner of the smoking room drifted to events at sea and the childlike faith that passengers repose in navigators.

Said the scientist who had been collecting specimens on a coral reef:

"I've often heard men and women say they felt so safe with Captain So-and-so, and I've wondered, too, whether their sense of security would still be retained if these favored travelers knew exactly what happened on shipboard during a voyage. For my own part, I have more confidence than ever in a captain of my acquaintance since I learned that he could tell a white lie when it was necessary to calm the fears of a nervous traveler. It so happened that one foggy night I was awakened by the sudden stoppage and reversal of the engines. I jumped out of my bunk, went on deck and was told by the second officer that we had had a narrow squeeze. It appeared that we had nearly run down a schooner as she silently crossed our bows and disappeared into the haze.

"Next morning a woman passenger who sat at the captain's table asked him whether the engines had been stopped and reversed, and he replied: 'Yes; we sometimes do this to test the engineer's watch and see if our machinery is in proper order. We do it at night so as to create no excitement.' Then he got the woman to describe what she had heard and asked her, 'Did you find much time between the stopping and reversing?'

"'No,' she replied.

"'Then,' said the skipper, 'that showed how well everything was working, did it not?'

"When I got the skipper's ear I told him confidentially that I didn't think the schooner's engines had worked as well as ours, and he remarked that it might have been worse. Whether he meant the lie or the incident I didn't inquire, but I suspect it wasn't the lie."—New York Post.

LAW OF GRAVITY VIOLATED.

Conditions Under Which Water Actually Flows Upward.

"Water seeks its level" is an expression heard so frequently as to be almost trite, and yet the law has its exceptions. There are conditions under which water actually flows upward and rises above its source. If a glass tube be dipped into water the column inside will be above the level of the surrounding surface. Moreover, if a tube of half the diameter be substituted the column doubles its height. The water creeps along the inside of the tube, owing to the adhesion, and forms a cup shaped depression at the top.

An explanation is not difficult. It can be proved mathematically that if the diameter of a circle be diminished one-half the circumference is also reduced to that extent, while the area is one-fourth of its former value. The circumference of the column of water being reduced one-half, its contact with the glass, and hence the adhesive force, is also diminished to that extent, while the cross section, and hence the weight, is decreased to a fourth of what it was before. Therefore the second column can be twice the height of the first without exceeding the lifting power.

Remarkable as the underlying principles of this phenomenon undoubtedly are, nature made use of them long before man made their discovery. Every tree and flower adds its testimony. The core of a tree or plant, instead of being a single open channel, consists of a spongelike substance containing many miniature tunnels, through which the sap and moisture collected by the roots flow upward in small rivulets, rising higher and higher in sheer defiance of the great law of gravity.—St. Louis Republic.

Sense of Danger.

Dr. Waldo of London holds that people should develop a sixth sense to inform them of the approach of danger in the streets. Lafcadio Hearn once said: "While in a crowd I seldom look at faces. My intuition is almost infallible, like that blind faculty by which in absolute darkness one becomes aware of the proximity of bulky objects without touching them. If I hesitate to obey it a collision is the inevitable consequence. What pilots one quickly and safely through a thick press is not conscious observation at all, but unreasoning intuitive perception."

A Sight Worth Paying For.

The cab, drawn by a weary looking horse, came to a standstill opposite a public house. As the driver was preparing to descend a small boy ran up with, "'Old yer 'orse, guv'nor?"

"'Old my 'orse? Look 'ere, my lad. Ah'll give yer a bob if it runs away."—Manchester Guardian.

His Contribution.

"Have you ever done anything for the good of the community?" asked the solid citizen.

"Yes," replied the weary wayfarer; "I've just done thirty days."—Philadelphia Record.

"Yes."

"Is it the latest thing in cars?"

VOL. XXVII. THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1910 NUMBER 7.

LETTER FROM C. M. EVENSON

Tells of His Trip Through the Southwest and Pacific Coast.

Says He Has Not Seen Any Country as Good as This as Yet.

Turlock, Cal. Jan. 3, 1910

Editor News: As I promised I would write you a few lines regarding my trip. I expect it is time to do so. Well, Wisconsin, Iowa and Nebaska had plenty of snow, more than we had at Thief River Falls when I left there and Colorado did not take a back seat as far the snow, and I did not find much through those states that I saw that would induce me to leave Thief River. I stayed a few days at Cripple Creek, Colorado. It is a mining center and as far as the city, it is a nice place but the mountains around look wild. They have been digging for gold all over the mountains, it looks a great deal as if gophers had been making holes all over. Lots of places there were big mines and I went down a few hundred feet into a mine owned by a cousin of mine, but I was too scared to enjoy the trip. We were down there about one half hour walking around. We were only in one part of the mine, called a lodge and we had a chance to go down to the other lodge, but thought we were deep enough, as all through the alleys those truck cars were carrying out the ore and every little while you would find men blasting out ore in there. I left Cripple Creek and went to Salt Lake City and there it looked to be a fair country close to the city. From there I went to Ogden, which is a very nice city. We then crossed the 28 mile bridge across part of Salt Lake. It took the flier just one hour to cross it. After we crossed the lake, we were in what I would call desert until we struck the snow sheds, which were 42 miles long and right in the mountains and they surely needed them, they had very heavy snow there and was compelled to have those sheds on that account. After we got out of them, we commenced to go down grade and some places kind of steep. We had three engines gowing down and 2 going up on the other side, but when we reached the valley on this side, we found it nice and green. It was not over three hours after we left the snow sheds until we saw green grass and oranges hanging on the trees. I am now at Turlock and am staying with M. Bothun, formerly of Thief River Falls, he has a very nice place, came here before the boom and bought land at 40 dollars an acre and is now selling it at $600. an acre in small lots from 1 to 5 acre tracts. Here they don't need much land to farm on, they have only 5 to 20 acres and it will keep them busy with it. I like this place very much on account of the fine weather here, the other day I was lying on the green grass, sunning myself and the bees came buzzing around me and I thought they would go for me, but they must have noticed that I had not been here long enough for the sap to start on me, otherwise I am a great mark for bees. Well, I am leaving here in the morning for San Francisco and then to Portland, Oregon and so on toward home and expect to be home in two or three weeks.

State Auditor Iverson Will Sell State Land in Red Lake County.

Numerous Other Sales to Be Held in This Section of the State.

State Auditor S. G. Iverson will on May 21, offer about 3,000 acres of state school land in Red Lake county at public sale. This will be the only opportunity to buy these lands, for the lands will not be sold at private sale. The sale will commence at 10:30 in the forenoon.

No land will be sold at less than its apprised value and in no case for less than $5.00 per acre. At time of purchase 15 per cent of the purchase price and interest at 4 per cent on the unpaid balance to June 1, 1910, must be paid. Purchaser must also pay the value of the merchantable timber on the land. The annual rate of interest on the balance will be 5 per cent, if the balance is paid within ten years. The purchaser of land in order to perfect title will be required to comply with one of three conditions. He may fence and convert into pasture, 25 per cent of the land, or cultivate 5 per cent of the land, or build a house and actually occupy the land. Not more than 320 acres will be sold to one purchaser.

Other sales in this section of the state will be held as follows:

Warren, May 18, 43,500 acres.
Roseau, " 19, 59,000 "
Hallock, " 17, 26,500 "
Bagley, " 16, 9,000 "
Bemidji, " 13, 9,000 "

To Reduce the Cost of Fire Insurance.

The Property Owners Federation, which has its headquarters in the Columbia building at Duluth has recently sent a communication to its members and other large premium payers calling for vigorous action on the part of the public for the suppression of incendiarism, and against discrimination in rates by the fire insurance combine in favor of the large millionaire properties.

The following extract from the report above referred to is significant:

"The new rate on Montgomery Ward and Co.'s main warehouse is $2.50 per $1,000 insurance.

"Rates have been materially reduced in the congested district of St. Louis, where, as in New Orleans and Philadelphia, multi-millionaire fires are constantly expected.

"The large city conflagrations, and the losses on low rated "Jumbo" risks have ruined a large majority of stock fire insurance companies, and those that survive combine to assess the general public with an increased "Board" rate to cover deficits."

To the Public.

Having bought out the entire stock of O. J. Schie & Co, the business will continue in the same place under the firm style and name of THIEF RIVER CO-OPERATIVE STORE CO., we highly announce that the new firm will be in charge of the business from Feb. 1, 1910. We will further state, that it shall be our constant aim and earnest endeavor to give everyone a square deal—treat all persons alike.

It is not our intention to hurt anyone or interfere with anybody, but simply to continue an old established business, which has been here about as long as somebody else's.

We kindly invite you to come and see us.

MAKING A GOODSHOWING

A. O. U. W. Initiates Eighteen New Members Friday Evening.

Bro. J. F. McGuire, of St. Paul, Present At The Ceremonies.

At the meeting of Thief River Falls Lodge No. 287, Ancient Order of United Workman last Friday night a class of eighteen were initiated into the mysteries of the order and instructed as to the duties of a workman by Grand Receiver Bro. J. F. McGuire, of St. Paul. This we think is a record-breaking showing for a lodge, considering the fact that but five active members have heretofore carried on the work of the lodge since its first installation some four years ago, and speaks volumes for these members for the active and untiring work in behalf of their order, and the results which they have brought about.

After the initiation ceremonies Bro. McGuire addressed the new members and explained the various duties and obligations of a workman and highly complimented the lodge on the efficient work and the manner in which they conducted the ceremonies.

Following this, upon a motion by District Deputy Grand Master Workman J. A. Swore, a card of thanks was voted by the members to the Grand Lodge for their excellent choice upon sending so able a man as Mr. McGuire to be present at the initiation. After the initation a general social function was in order, a lunch deliciously prepared and served, was partaken in, after which cigars were passed around and to make the event complete numerous instrumental and vocal numbers were rendered by Prof. J. H. Robinson much to the delight of all those present.

The new members are the following:

Roland Thompson.
Arthur Tanem.
Roscoe H. Doyle.
Nels A. Nelson.
Sygrud Myri.
Anton Jensen.

Has A Right To The Roadside.

A misapprehension seems to exist as to the rights of the public to the land along a public road. Some appear to believe that the general public has the privilege of pasturing cattle, cutting grass and hauling away earth and stones from any part of the road reservation of four rods wide. This is not the case. The man, who furnishes land for a road does not relinquish his ownership of the same and pays taxes yearly on that part of his land the same as is on the remainder. He is entitled to the use of it as fully and completely as any part of his farm except that the public has the privilege of passing over it. He can cut the grass or crops on the land and others, who infringe on his rights in this respect are liable for trespass or theft the same as if they went in on his farm and cut the crop and pastured the land. The public has no claim whatever except that of being allowed to travel along. Where a road crosses a stream, the owner can legally prohibit fishing from the shore or bridge just as fully as from other parts of the stream inside of the boundaries of his farm.—Litchfield Independent.

An Appeal Taken.

A petition was filed with County Attorney Michalet last week, taking an appeal from the recent act of the board of county commissioners allowing the bills for the purchase of the purposed new court house site. The matter will now have to be tried at the next term of the district court.

Contract Let to Doege.

At the opening of bids for the building of the gallery in the new auditorum last Saturday, it was found that F. S. Doege had in the lowest bid, it being over $500 lower than his nearest competitor. Mr. Doege agreed to do the work for $3,064 and was awarded the contract.

COMPLETED THIS YEAR

Arrangements Made by A. M. Arpin to Have Germantown Ditch Completed.

Another Dredge to Be Put at Work from Germantown East.

A. M. Arpin went down to Minneapolis last Saturday evening and while there made arrangements for the putting of another dredge at work on the Germantown ditch. This means that the Germantown ditch will be completed next summer and it will be good news to all of the settlers up in that section. The only thing that can possibly cause delay is that there are a lack of teams in the country to haul out dredge machinery and the coal that will be necessary to operate it. It will all have to be hauled out within the next thirty days. The dredge is to be set up just east of Germantown, and will dig the ditch from that point to its end in Beltrami county, a distance of thirty miles.

It is going to take a large number of teams to do the hauling, and all the farmers, who have idle horses are requested to help out. Three car loads of dredge machinery will have to be hauled to Germantown and about 600 tons of coal will have to be distributed along the route of the ditch, the hauling distance being from fifteen to thirty miles and the average price to be paid to the farmers will be about $4 per ton. As the roads are in good shape, the farmers can make money hauling the coal and will do a great benefit to the country by lending their services.

What Our Mayor Says Abroad.

Mayor T. P. Hamre of Thief River Falls was up here on business last week. He informed us that many new settlers were expected to arrive in that locality the coming season. He believes thoroughly in this section of the state, and says that it is only a question of a short time, when all this land will be taken up by actual settlers. He was very favorably impressed with the future prospects of Greenbush. He says that Thief River Falls expects to have city mail delivery in a short time, as the volume of mail business there will entitle them to that service.—Greenbush Tribune.

Trees a Profitable Crop.

Raise trees instead of potatoes, is a new idea being urged by those talking about preserving the forests and growing new ones. On the face of it, the idea does not seem practical. To think of a farmer growing trees and hoping to make money thereby, don't sound good, but in Germany and France the farmers pay the closest attention to their tree crops, with as much of an eye to profit as corn or wheat. They allow only the best wood to grow, cutting the weaker trees and secure an annual growth of 4,500 to 6,500 pounds per acre each year. One of the features of the coming conservation congress in St. Paul will be a demonstration of the profits, which farmers can actually make growing trees—and they are an easier crop to grow than grains, grow where grains and grasses would not grow. One session is to be devoted to forestry discussion and no less an authority than Gifford Pinchot, former chief forester of the United States, will tell of his experiences. The date of the forestry discussion is March 18 though the congress opens on March 16.

AFTER THE VIOLATORS

Two Warroad Saloonkeepers Arrested Yesterday for Selling Liquor to Indians.

A Number of Arrests to Be Made in This Vicinity in the Near Future.

Deputies Joe J. Matulys, N. J. Sero and C. T. Johnson (the latter being a son of Special Agent Johnson) were up at Warroad yesterday and arrested Joe Groute and William Duffy, who are charged with having sold liquor to Indians. The men were brought to Thief River Falls last evening on the Great Northern train and were bound over to the United States grand jury at Fergus Falls by Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. commissioner for the district of Minnesota. The agents state that they have positive proof that the two have been selling liquor to Indians and that their conviction is sure to follow. It is probable that an order will be issued in the near future closing all of the saloons at Warroad, as there is said to have been many drunken Indians in that village during a few months past.

"This is the first of a number of arrests to be made in the Thief River Falls territory", said Deputy Matulys to the News last evening. We have been gathering evidence in this section for past two months and are now prepared to take action. While some may have thought that our efforts were confined to towns closer to the reservation, they are mistaken and there is no city or village in the northern part of the state that has not been visited."

Asked if any of the saloonkeepers in Thief River Falls were to be arrested, Mr. Matulys refused to make any statement: "You know you are not situated very far from the White Earth reservatio", he said, "and I understand that the Indians and mixed bloods from down the line often visit this city."

Winter Is Here.

This section enjoyed a touch of winter yesterday morning for the first time since the fore part of December. The thermometer registered 15 below, which was quite cold when it is considered that it has been above freezing nearly every day for the past two months.

The Gown For the Girl and the Man That Bought It.

By M. McC. WILLIAMS.

Out in the garden Philomena sang so sweet and high it was like the scent of the clove pinks. They stretched in a matted mass all up and down the old fashioned borders. The garden was big, and a wide, weathered gray house brooded beside it. Time was when the Tryon house had been the finest and most hospitable in all the countryside. In the day of broken fortunes it still kept an aroma of cheery good will.

Lusty hundred leaf roses grew behind the bordering pinks. Philomena was snipping them ruthlessly, cutting them without stems and dropping them in her apron. It bulged ridiculously with the mass of bloom, but she kept crowding in clipped pinky white petals, pretending to be conscious of nothing but her work.

Somebody had come up behind her, a tall young fellow, supple and merry eyed. He undid the apron strings delicately, gathered the band in his hands, stretching daring arms about her waist and said: "Stop slaying your thousands, Phil! One rose ought to love her sisters too well for wholesale murder."

Philomena slid from his clasp, dexterously leaving the huddled apron within his hands. "If I were a rose I had rather be clipped for potpourri than be left to waste and wither," she said, with a delicious upward tilt of the chin.

"Being interpreted, that means you have not given up a stage career," Arthur Wayne said, catching her hand. "Phil, Phil," he went on, "you must give it up. I cannot bear to think of my rose, my rose of all the world, withering, fading, in the glare of the footlights."

"Stop! We have gone over all that!" Philomena said imperiously. "I tell you I must go. It is past bearing, the way things are now. Oh, I know my aunts would not starve! They've a roof over their heads, and Uncle John—But I cannot speak of him. What I cannot bear longer is to see them pinched, unhappy, lacking the little comforts that mean so much in age, feeling themselves dependent."

"You know our home would be theirs," Arthur interrupted.

Phil gave him a reproachful look. "You won't understand," she said. "All their lives they have been somebody, gentlewomen, able to hold up their heads. Gentlewomen hate charity. They risked money and lost it against uncle's advice for my sake. Now, when I am told I have a fortune in my throat, I must take care of them, even if it breaks my heart."

The last word was under breath. Wayne made to draw her to him, but a brisk, bustling voice behind them said: "So ho! Very pretty! Upon my word, very pretty! Are we rehearsing for Strephon and Chloe?" Then without waiting answer the newcomer ran on: "Miss Tryon, be ready for the early train tomorrow. I've a letter from Franzoni. He will try your voice, provided you come to him by 10 o'clock in the morning."

"I shall go with you," Arthur said, openly taking Phil in his arms. "I said you must choose, dear. Let me take it back. If go you will, let me follow—everywhere."

"No, no! I will not let you spoil your life!" Phil protested, but he held her fast, saying as he looked Music Master Graham square in the eye: "Philomena is my promised wife and not by a fair weather promise. Wherever you may take her I shall go too."

Graham's eyes were quizzical, yet not unkind. "That's as you please, young man," he said, waving his hand up and down. "But if you'll heed a friendly word, stay behind, at least at first. You see, you'd be so patently, so palpably romantic you'd be set down not as a fact, but a press agent's fake. The voice there," nodding toward Philomena, "is so pure, so golden, so rarely true, it needs to be kept high, not vulgarized. I give you my word the roaring lions supposed to haunt stage doors are really no more than yelping curly poodles. They tag after and fawn upon you for an encouraging look or word, come to the whistle and tumble over themselves to follow a finger even half lifted. But, as for danger, any friend, even an unconscious look scares them. Miss Tryon has only to be herself in order to be always and everywhere perfectly safe."

"Notwithstanding I shall go," Arthur said obstinately.

Graham shrugged his shoulders. Miss Tryon, the elder of the aunts, came tripping between the borders, her delicately wrinkled face exhaling a spiritual fragrance like the scent of dried rose leaves. "Come in, all of you," she said eagerly. "There's a peddler on the piazza, an elderly man, and he looks so tired carrying that heavy pack. Such lovely things! Yes," deprecatingly to Philomena, "Martha and I let him show them, but indeed it was after we had told him we could not buy. I thought, though, maybe, Arthur—only his mother gets so much in the city. But really there is the loveliest length of brocade, almost exactly like my grandmother's second day's silk."

As she spoke she had huddled the other three in front of her toward the house, much as she would have marshaled fowls a trifle unruly.

At the piazza steps Philomena sat down, but the men both fell to examining the peddler's wares. Graham, indeed, almost instantly caught up the length of brocade, crying as he threw it over Philomena's shoulder, "Here's exactly what is wanted for your first opera costume!"

In spite of herself Phil gave a little delighted cry, the silvery satin ground was so rich and lustrous, the apple bloom strewn over it so perfect in line and color. She was sorry when the peddler said respectfully:

"That, sir, is an ordered bit, so not for sale."

"Get another piece for your order; I'm bound to have this one," said Graham good humoredly.

The peddler shook his head. "There is not another piece like it," he said. "This was specially woven for a happy day gown."

"Who is to wear it?" Philomena asked softly, stifling a sigh. Somehow she found herself trembling, all her courage oozing away. She wished as she had never wished before that she had somebody of her very own to lean on. Her mother had died when she was born. Her father had gone away, disappeared, leaving her only a clouded name for heritage. She had never known until the trouble came; then Uncle John had spoken harsh truth. It was that as much as love for the two dear old ladies which kept her steadfast to the thought of going into the world and winning its applause.

She had never been curious or envious, but somehow there swelled in her a sense of passionate injury against the unknown who was to wear this happy day gown, ordered no doubt by a father's loving pride. She crushed the rich fabric between her fingers and fixed a long look upon the peddler's face.

"A girl is to wear it—that is, if she chooses," the peddler said, moving a step nearer.

Then she saw that he was more travel worn and weary than aged. Dimly, uncertainly, she saw, too, a likeness that drew her electrically to her feet. Through the open hall door her father's portrait showed in the bloom and strength of young manhood. She glanced from it to the peddler and back again, then stood white as death, facing him, too shaken to speak. His eyes followed hers and grew misty as he cried:

"Sisters! Daughter! So I have really kept my place! Philomena, my baby, the happy day gown was brought for you."

The Prevention of Fear.

What we fear comes upon us, but fear is our own creation. Each person makes his own fears, and each person can become absolutely free from fear by not creating fear any more. Other people cannot make us afraid. They may do things that tend to make us afraid, but it is only when we permit our minds to take up such suggestions from without that we can become afraid. The same is true of circumstances. No circumstances can produce fear in any mind. Circumstances may impress our minds, but only when we permit, and nothing can affect us in the least until we have first given it permission to impress our minds, says Progress Magazine. What comes into our minds we must voluntarily receive. We must first open the door, and we have the power to receive what we like and exclude what we like. We can close the mental door to everything that might produce fear and open that door to those things that only give harmony, wholeness, power and joy.

Which of Your Eyes Cries?

It seems a positively absurd question to ask, "Which of your eyes cries?" In an everyday, common or garden cry it is well known that salt tears make their appearance and rush away down the face seemingly as fast from one as from the other, whichever the "other" may be, but if careful note is made, more especially with emotional people, it will be found that one of the eyes has a special emotional tendency and often opens the tear valve before its companion has decided upon the unhappy event. Probably the best method of discovering the emotional eye is to attend a pathetic stage play and when the weeping period comes along look out for tear No. 1. The writer attended such a piece recently and was somewhat astonished to find that all his grief came from the right eye. Whether the solution to the problem is to be found in the fact that he was leaning on his right arm must and can be decided only by an expert.—Exchange.

Following Instructions.

The old broker returned and found his new office boy gazing absently over the roof tops. To his horror and indignation he found that his costly Swiss clock was missing from its accustomed place in the corner.

"Boy," he demanded in thunderous tones, "where is my clock?"

"I don't know, sir," was the calm and unruffled response.

"Didn't I tell you not to go out until I returned?"

"I didn't, sir."

"Where have you been?"

"What? You mean to tell me that you have been sitting right there and allowed some one to come in and steal the clock? Well, of all the numskulls I ever met you are the limit. What excuse have you for such carelessness?"

"A good one, sir. When I first came here you told me you didn't want a boy who would sit around and watch the clock, so I haven't given it a glance, sir."—Chicago News.

BY JOHN W. EASTMAN

ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

James J. Hill:—The good land in this state, every acre of it, can produce at a low estimate from $12 to $15 per acre. It can be made to produce $20 per acre. If it $12 per acre that is 10 per cent on $120 an acre farm. You think if some one would offer you $50 or $75 or $100 an acre, you would stick him. Now if you can't buy an equal number of acres for less money, don't sell your land. Hold on to it. The time will come, when it will be worth $100 an acre, if you take care of it and there is no reason, why it should not be worth $150.

This from the Warren Register does not sound very good:

> KAISER may be good timber for state treasurer, but he is not setting the woods of northern Minnesota a fire with his candidacy for that office. In fact, he is practically unknown in every-county, except two or possibly three.

Mr. Kaiser has been a resident of Northern Minnesota for a number of years, and, although his acquaintance is somewhat limited, he has the backing of Senator Stephens, of Crookston, and without doubt will have a majority of the counties in Northern Minnesota in the next Republican state convention.

An enterprising insurance agent at Red Lake Falls advertises as follows in the Gazette:

> The insurance companies will bet you one hundred dollars against fifty cents that you won't have a fire. Isn't that odds enough? Put your money up with ——— and get an insurance policy for their hundred.

In view of what has happened at Red Lake Falls in the past, we do not think it necessary for an insurance agent to do so much explaining. The principal occupation of the people there for the past several years has been betting with the insurance companies—and only in a few instances have the insurance companies won.

PROTECTING A ROBBER TRUST.

In his striking article on tariff matters in HUMAN LIFE for February, Alfred Henry Lewis says: "When an 'infant industry" gets so big and strong that it climbs the line fence and wallops the neighbors' young ones in those neighbors' own back yards, it hardly needs 'protection'.

"Come back with me to that question of sugar 'protection'. It was but a few weeks ago, when the Sugar Trust put out these illuminating figures. Naming that 2 cents a pound (tariff) grade of sugar, it quoted it for the home market at 4.15 cents a pound, and for exportation at 2.60 cents.

"Here is proof enough of tariff perfidy to hang a man. The Sugar Trust is given 'protection' to the tune of 2 cents a pound. This 'protection' by anticipation of those who drew the bill, will result in less than $120,000 a year to the treasury. As against this, what does it mean to the Trust? Now we come to the Ophir—the real gold mine—in this business. The American public consumes 6,371,578,000 pounds of sugar from New Year to New Year. That 2 cents a pound—a shadow less, in fact-puts over $126,000,000 into the 'protected' pockets of the sugar people. Of this huge rapine the Trust takes the lion's share, while a huddle of little sugar rascals take the jackal's. And every dollar, every dime of that $126,000,000 comes out of the pockets of the public—of you and me—of the people, whose misrepresentatives in Congress assembled have builded the law. Every splinter of that $126,000,000 comes out of us. Which is why we go afoot, or cling to straps, while a Spreckles or a Havemeyer has his yacht or private car. Going now to an average, each family in the land is taxed $8 a year in favor of the Havemeyer and the Spreckles families. Who was it said, 'What fools these mortals be? He must have been looking at a tariff bill".

CO-OPERATION

Are the American People Capable of Self-Government?

The organization in this city recently of the Thief River Co-operative Store Company marks an epoch in the history of the city, and, as there are now more than 100 such stores within a few hundred miles of us, the movement marks an epoch in the history of the Northwest and of the United States and immediately raises the questions as to whether or not the American people are capable of self-government; and if not and such co-operative efforts shall fail to succeed, what the results will be.

Much has been written and said in this country concerning co-operation, but the average citizen has given it so little attention that out of a hundred men one might incidentally meet, scarcely one could be found who realizes the true meaning of the movement. The average man thinks of it only as a way to save a little more money. While this is one of its primary objects, the main result to be achieved is that of true democracy in government. In other words, are the masses of the American people capable of self-government to the extent of successfully managing the volume of business created by their own needs and which their honest toil must supply?

Co-operation is an effort to answer this question by actual experience. The competitive and "captain of industry" system has apparently reached the zenith of its success in America. People everywhere are convinced that an improvement in our present commercial and industrial system is both necessary and possible. The vast aggregations of wealth in the hands of a few, referred to by former President Roosevelt as "predatory wealth," have gained such a hold upon the nation and the industrys of the people as to become a menace to the liberties of the citizens of our supposed free government. Some more equitable and just method and system of production and distribution must take the place of the old, or America will but follow in the footsteps of other decayed nations.

In the matter of the distribution of farm produce and manufactured articles, the natural laws of moral economics must finally prevail. In other words, the most economical means of distributing supplies will eventually win out, and all other methods must go down. If the old style, wasteful, competitive, country-store method is the most economical it has nothing to fear from either co-operation or the mail order houses. If the mail order business and capitalistic trust methods are the most economical, they will eventually prevail; but if co-operation, rightly understood and applied, proves to be the most economical and moral, it will surely supercede all other methods, nothwithstanding the opposition of non-progressives. Natural law has a peculiar style of working out its own ends, despite the intervention of man's foolishness.

Co operation includes the whole of life, financial, social, political, and spiritual. It is adaptable to every walk and vocation of life; in fact our city, state, and national organizations are but co operation applied to government. Co-operation means a literary working together, and when thoroughly understood and the participants are imbued with the right spirit to carry it out, its workings are extremely simple and its benefits large.

In co-operation, confidence, loyalty, unselfishness, self-control, and mutual helpfulness are the parents of all progress. Co-operation is the coming redemption. Nothing else will save mankind from the selfishness, the immorality, and the extent of misery it suffers from. Nothing else will prevent a repetition of the decline and fall of nations of which history is full.

Co-operation means union in place of conflict; harmony instead of antagonism, and peace in preference to warfare. Buyer and seller are no longer opposed, for the Buyer is the seller's agent. Consumers deal with their own stores and their own factories. The spirit of strife between labor and capitalists vanishes, for the workers and capitalists, the producers and consumers, are the same people, with a common purpose,—to give up special privilege, create justice, diffuse wealth, and wipe out class distinctions. Is there anything wrong in this?

The main features underlying true co-operation, and those upon which the Thief River Co-operative Store Company is founded, are, 1st: buy and sell for cash, 2nd, sell at a fair margin of profit, 3rd, a fixed rate of interest on share capital, 4th, semi-annual settlements, 5th, division of profits to shareholders and patrons in proportion to business transacted, 6th, full dividends to shareholders on amount of business transacted, 7th, half dividends to non-member patrons on amount of business transacted, 8th, each member to have but one vote, regardless of the number of shares owned, 9th, provision for permanent educational and reserve fund, 10th, limiting the ownership of shares in the enterprise to $1,000, and, 11th, unlimited membership, so that everyone in the community, without class distinction, may join on equal terms and receive similar benefits.

On a plan of this kind and with any sort of reasonable business management, the company cannot fail.

The most vital of the above principles, from a reform standpoint, is that of the distribution of profits in proportion as they are created by the individual patronage, instead of in proportion to the amount of capital invested. The corporation plan, upon which the Standard Oil Company, the Beef trust, the U. S. Steel Corporation, and other trusts are founded is that of unlimited ownership of shares by a single individual, the complete control of its business by the few who hold a majority of its stock by reason of their being entitled to a vote for each share held, and, finally, the worst of all, distributing all profits created in proportion to capital invested, thus giving the entire profits of the order to those who are already so rich and powerful that they do not know what to do with their constantly and rapidly increasing wealth.

The writer of this article is informed and knows whereof he speaks when he says the eyes of the entire country, financial, social, and economic, are riveted upon these great northwestern co-operative movements fathered and guided by the Right Relationship League, Minneapolis, Minnesota. It is now up to the citizens of Thief River Falls to demonstrate whether or not they are capable of self government, by successfully applying and practicing the principles above set forth.

Mayor Hamre Makes a Raid.

A special meeting of the city council has been called to meet on Friday, Feb. 18, to consider the matter of revoking the license of the Stockholm saloon. It is charged that there has been gambling in this saloon and no less a person than the mayor himself makes the charge. On Saturday evening between 10 and 11 o'clock, Mayor Hamre, accompanied by Chief of Police Lang and Patrolman Farr, visited the Stockholm and found about half a dozen men gathered around a table with a pack of cards and a number of ivory chips. Mayor Hamre and the police officers claim that they were playing poker, and there were others, who took exceptions. It is now up to the council to decide and the 18th of February has been fixed as the day on which testimony will be introduced.

May Close All Saloons.

Washington, Feb. 5.—A complete closing of saloons in Detroit and other towns in the Indian country in northern Minnesota is among the possibilities. Recently a letter was received here from David Haggs of Detroit calling attention to the provisions of the treaties with the order of the Indian office in closing all but four of the saloons in that town.

In answer to the letter Commissioner Valentine of the Indian bureau says that permitting the four saloons in Detroit to remain open is merely an experiment and intended to indicate the purpose of the Indian bureau not to be too drastic in its enforcement of the liquor law in that locality.

"Should it be shown that the experiment is not a success, directions will be given Special Agent Johnson to close all the saloons forthwith", the commissioner said in concluding his letter.

TALK OF CHURCH ALLIANCE

Archbishp of Cauterbury Sends Four Bishops to Upsala to Confer with the Archbishop of Sweden on Subject.

SWEDEN.

French realism, with its accompanying pessimism, has for years been the prevailing influence among the Teutonic races. Sweden has not escaped the infection, says Sebastian Voirol in the Grand Revue (Paris.) Selma Lagerlof, it seems to the French writer, has, however, revived romanticism in Sweden, and her deeply religious nature has given romanticism its truest meaning. Says Mr. Voirol: "Selma Lagerlof knows how to describe the storn yet delicate character of the agricultural people. They are attached to toil and to the faith, happy in leaving the plow for the church and asking nothing better of destiny. After describing her first work the irregular life of the aristocracy, the fantastic lords of a frivolous age, she desires to exhibit the solid qualities of the peasant, she herself being attracted toward the marvelous world which the bible originiated in an Orient of sublime peace, calls up before her eyes in such a vision of splendor. 'Jerusalem' is a popular epic, a series of tableaux each of which is distinguished by a lyric enthusiasm which the simple so dearly love and enjoy. It is a work admirably adapted to gain the approbation of the Swedes."

The church of England is favorably inclined to an alliance with the Lutheran church in the Scandinavian kingdoms. The archbishop of Canterbury sent four bishops to Upsala to confer with the archbishop of Sweden. The bishop of Salisburg strongly advocated an alliance, which ought to come about easily, since the thirty-nine articles of Anglican faith were founded on the Augsburg confession. The bishop of London, who is a ritualist, did not care much for the thirty-nine articles, but insisted on proofs that the Swedish bishops were successors of the apostles. If they were not, they had to be ordained anew and consecrated by the archbishop of Canterbury, in order to be true bishops. Such a condition was not acceptable by the Swedish archbishop, and the four anglican bishops went home again, altogether not satisfied. As to the unbroken succession of bishops, the Swedish church has it, but does not lay any stress on it, whilst the Anglican church does not have it. It was broken in the civil resolutions in the seventeenth century a circumstance very much deplored by the high church men who are nearer Rome than to Wittenberg.

King Edward of England has awarded Dr. Sven Hedin the great cross of Knight Commander of the Indian Empire. The decorations were given Dr. Hedin at a dinner arranged in his honor by the British Minister and Lady Spring Rice. Present at this function were also the Crownprince and Crownprincess of Sweden, Princess Patricia of Connaught, the Swedish minister of foreign affairs, the Countess Taube and Royal Antiquarian Montelius and others. There is no Swede living who at present holds so many decorations of honor as Dr. Sven Hedin.

It is now definitely decided that the new chief at the Royal Opera will be Count Hans von Stedingk. The new chief will be in absolute charge of the Opera and will be empowered to act in every instance in accordance with his best judgment. This was not the case before when any important thing that came up in connection with the Opera had to be passed upon by an executive committee. The present arrangement will be a far better one and has met the approbation of the theater going public generally as well as of King Gustaf.

It is something unusual to hear of an officer of the navy as an author. Such is, however, the case in the Swedish navy, where one Captain Gustaf Horn has to the director of the Swedish theater left a manuscript for a three act play entitled, "Nels Ehrenskiold." The director of the theater passed favorably upon it, and the play will be rendered during the first week of next month.

The Princess Patricia, who has been a guest for a fortnight at the Royal palace departed for Paris on the evening of Jan. 18. Her visit at Paris has, however, been suddenly cut short owing to the disastrous flood which has been overwhelming the city with distress during the past two weeks. During her visit at the Swedish capital, there was many functions arranged in her honor.

The Swedish runners Carl Ljung and John Svanberg of marathon fame depart for America this month, where they will spend at least four months. Their tour in the United States will take in the leading cities in the east and central west and it is expected that both of these trained runners will render excellent account of themselves.

The Riddarholm's cathedral, that historic place where rest the sarcophagi of so many of Sweden's famous kings will in the near future undergo a torough renovation. As soon as the riksdag will make the necessary appropriation, the work of restoration will commence.

NORWAY.

A tthe end of the month of October last the National Labor organization of Norway had a membership of 44,000, consisting of eighteen branches and eleven other labor societies affiliated with the national organization. It appears that there is a considerable falling off in point of membership as during the previous year there were 47,211 members. The reason for this decrease in membership during the past year, is attributed to the big strike in Sweden, and also some of the inland labor conflicts. For some of the home struggles the national organization contributed something like 150,000 and for the Swedish strike the Norwegian workmen contributed not less than 316,000 crowns, which goes to show that Swedish and Norwegian laboring men at least, will work hand in hand. Then there was the strike in Trondhjem, which proved quiet a drain, lasting for more than a year. In fact it has not been completely settled yet, but the arbitration forces are hard at work and it is hoped that it can soon come to some favorable settlement.

It is now definitely decided that Colonel Roosevelt will deliver lectures before the Norwegian Nobel Institute during the early part of May and has so informed the Nobel committee through the American minister in Berlin. Roosevelt's arrival in Christiania is awaited with almost feverish excitement and people will flock from all parts of the kingdom to get a glance at him. Roosevelt is immensely popular in Norway and this is very natural in such a Demdcratic and independent country. Thas his reception in the Norwegian capital will be a hearty and enthusiastic one is natural.

The Catholic church in Norway is not a very powerful institution and yet it will surprise a great many to know that in such a strong Lutheran country as Norway, there are fifteen Catholic congregations and twenty-two priests, all under the leadership of Bishop Fallize. Of these twenty-two priests only four are Norwegian. The remainder are Germans and Hollanders. There are eighty St. Joseph sisters in Norway all of whom are connected with "Our Virgin Mary's Hospital" in Christiania. About 150 children are attending the Catholic parish school in the same city.

From stavanger was exported during the last year goods valued at 1,200,000 dollars. Of this amount, there was exported $712,000 worth of sardines, $198,000 worth of salt mackerel and $70,000 worth of boneless anchovis.

Mrs. Marie Steinsvik has taken editorial charge of the "Kringssjaa." She is an able writer and the paper under her charge ought to succeed admirably.

Scott, the South Polar explorer will arrive in Norway this month, when he will begin to arrange for his equipment on his contemplated south polar expedition.

The government's receipts from the national forest reserve were last year 1,600,000 crowns. The expenditures in the forestry department were 670,000 crowns.

Christian Sinding, Norway's leading composer will receive from the government this year an appropriation of 1,600 crowns.

The tobacco industry is waning in Norway. The amount of tobacco raised last year only amounted to 27,000.

The government will expend 142,000 crowns to take the census of the country this year.

About 40 carloads of hay are daily exported from Norway to foreign ports.

During the past year, 12,342 persons moved into Christiania and 7,320 moved away from the city.

DENMARK.

Maurice F. Egan is at present enjoying a visit in the United States and has visited Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Washington and New York. In all these cities he has been received and entertained by both Americans and Scandinavians. He speaks highly of the Danish people. When interviewed in New York a short time ago regarding the Cook incident, he said: "I have just returned from Washington, where I talked with a good many prominent men, including President Taft, and I believe that there is but one feeling in our country regarding Cook episode. That feeling is respect for the generosity of the Danes in their reception of an American citizen who asserted that he had done a great thing, and admiration for their courage in being the first to acknowledge their error. Above all things, the American people admire generosity, courage and the spirit of fair play. These qualities have been shown by the Danes under trying circumstances and their action has strengthened the bonds which binds America and the United States. "Aside from this judging from Danish comment, the Cook episode did not enhance the respect of Danish people for Americans and the whole affair is an exceedingly unfortunate thing."

There are not less than 30,000 patients in Copenhagen hospitals at present. This is an appalling number for a city with about 400,000 inhabitants. The hospitals are a Godsend, however, and while many die, there are thousands who are restored to health, owing to the untiring efforts of the surgeons and nurses at the various hospitals.

Professor George Brandes, the eminent critic, is again confined to his bed at the City hospital in Copenhagen. He is suffering from insomnia.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

Walter McDonald, who shot Howard Sexton, a hotel clerk, at Walker, Minn., and barricaded himself in his home, defying an armed posse for two days, committed suicide by shooting himself. Sexton died a few hours later. McDonald ended his life following an attempt to lure friends and enemies, whom he called up on his telephone, to his house, where, it is believed, he intended to make good his vow to "get two more" before he died.

Eighty-four thousand dollars was the price Charles L. Warriner, defaulting Cincinnati treasurer of the Big Four railroad, paid for a woman's silence. Fearing exposure of his shortcomings, he testified at her trial, he gave Mrs. Jeanette Stewart-Ford an average of $1,000 a month for seven years. The payments stopped only when the exposure came from some other source Nov. 2 last.

Four true bills charging Chicago city hall officials with conspiracy in connection with the "shale rock" sewer frauds were returned by the county grand jury. The men indicted are: John Ericsson, city engineer; Michael H. McGovern, contractor; Paul Redieske, former deputy commissioner of public works, and Ralph A. Bonnell, former assistant city engineer.

Former State Treasurer Frank P. Glazier was sentenced by Judge Wiest at Lansing, Mich., to serve not less than five nor more than ten years in prison for misappropriating $685,000 of state funds. Glazier controlled a bank at Chelsea, Mich., which failed, and the money had been deposited in this bank contrary to law.

William Ruckheim, thirty-seven years old, a farmer near Parkers Prairie, Minn., killed his wife, two sons, two and four years old, and two daughters, eight and ten years old, by beheading them as they slept with the sharp edge of an ax. Ruckheim then stabbed himself with a penknife, but will not die.

At Ishpeming, Mich., Artti Mytonem, brooding over the illness of his baby, two months old, killed the child by stabbing it to death and then killed his wife and himself by exploding a large quantity of dynamite.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

A remarkable decrease in smallpox is shown by the state board of health reports for the past three months, compared with the corresponding period one and two years ago, and the officials of the board point to the figures as a vindication of the position they took two years ago, when they modified the quarantine rules. Formerly not only patients but all who had been exposed were quarantined.

The recent decision of the state supreme court upholding the constitutionality of the Nolan reciprocal demurrage law was a surprise to St. Paul railroad traffic and legal departments. It had been predicted that the law would be overruled as a restriction on interstate business. The case will undoubtedly be appealed to the United States supreme court.

State Auditor Iverson has announced the dates of the state land sales which will be held during the present year. A total of about 350,000 acres of state school land will be offered for sale, scattered through twenty-six of the northern counties of the state. This land is all good agricultural land, with only trifling patches of small timber on some of the tracts.

Mrs. Thomas Lowry of Minneapolis on Friday paid into the state treasurer's office $41,216.75 inheritance tax on property which was given her by her husband several months before his death. This, with the $8,000 paid a few days previous, completes the payment of the tax on this estate.

Dr. H. A. Tomlinson, superintendent of the state insane hospital at St. Peter, told the quarterly conference of institution heads last week that all the institutions could be run a year on what the state has spent caring for the insane and dependents of other states and countries.

Representative Davis has introduced bills in the lower house of congress appropriating $12,000 each for sites for new public buildings in St. Peter and Hastings and to increase from $50,000 to $70,000 the appropriation for the authorized new public building in Faribault.

Dr. Marcus B. Cullum, Democratic candidate for mayor of Duluth, defeated the present incumbent, R. D. Haven, Republican, by a majority of 791. Eight aldermen were elected, of whom five are Democrats, two Republicans and one independent.

Joel P. Heatwole, the well known Northfield editor and politician, is in a critical condition at his home in that city. Mr. Heatwole is suffering from acute Brights disease and has been confined to his bed for some weeks.

Woodsmen are quitting the lumber camps in large numbers and if the exodus of wood choppers continues much longer logging contractors will have difficulty in finishing up contract work this spring.

The annual statement of the superintendent of the Walker electric light and power plant shows a net gain for the year of over $2,000. The plant is owned and controlled by the village.

Fire losses in Minnesota for the past year reach a total of $4,000,000, an average of more than $333,000 a month, according to John A. Hartigan, state insurance commissioner.

The general immigration department of the Great Northern, which has been located in Chicago for eighteen years, has been removed to the general offices in St. Paul.

Dean Albert F. Woods, recently elected to the head of the college of agriculture of the University of Minnesota, has taken up his work at the college.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Totally blind as the result of sudden fright from a swiftly closing typewriter desk is the fate of Miss Christine Canfield, twenty-one years old, a Minneapolis stenographer. The peculiar accident happened more than a week ago and all the power of modern medical science has failed to restore the young woman's vision up to the present.

A stranger named Edward Donelin, thirty-two years old, committed suicide in the village lockup at Hibbing by hanging himself with a shoestring. It is believed his name, signed on the police register, is false and that he had seen better days.

Louis Austin, an employe of the Faribault packing plant, was seriously injured while operating a sausage cutting machine. One of his arms was caught in the knives and terribly mangled, necessitating amputation.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

While running from a car to the Great Northern shops at St. Paul to avoid being late to work James Burse, thirty-five years old, a mechanic in the shops, dropped dead on the street.

Heart failure brought death to Stephen E. Foster, an old time resident of Minneapolis. He was born in Cooper county, Mo., in 1829 and settled in St. Anthony in 1849.

Dr. Harry W. Merrill, for six years in practice at Pipestone, this state, is dead at Maywood, Ill., aged fifty-three years.

Charles G. Lawrence, formerly treasurer of the State Savings bank of St. Paul, is dead, aged fifty-six.

Casimir Galernault, eighty years old, one of the oldest citizens of Parent, Stearns county, is dead.

PROMINENT IN MINNESOTA

Sidney M. Owen, Twice Nominee for the Governorship, Is Dead.

Sidney M. Owen, aged seventy, Civil war veteran, for twenty years one of the leading agricultural editors of the Northwest and a member of the board of regents of the state university, is dead at Minneapolis, after a lingering illness.

When the Farmers' alliance movement was started Mr. Owen took an active interest in it and in 1890 he was the nominee of the alliance for governor and received 58,513 votes in the election at which William R. Merriam, Republican, beat Thomas Wilson, Democrat, by less than 2,300 votes.

Again in 1894, when the Farmers' alliance and other reform movements had effected a political combination under the name of the People's party, Mr. Owen was the nominee of that party for governor, receiving 87,890 votes, 34,000 more than were cast for the regular Democratic nominee, George L. Becker, and running second only to Knute Nelson.

UNDER ARREST IN NEW YORK

Minnesotan Accused of Using the Mails to Defraud.

Charged with using the United States mails for the fraudulent purpose of collecting money Syrous M. Drake of Huntersville, this state, was held in $3,000 bail before United States Commissioner Shields at New York city.

Drake declares he is a direct descendant of Sir Francis Drake and an heir to the $200,000,000 estate held in chancery in England and left by the famous old British sea captain and explorer. For the purpose of furthering his scheme Drake went to New York and it was while gathering in his daily collection of mail in the postoffice there that Postal Inspector Kent placed him under arrest.

The commissioner seemed somewhat impressed by Drake's claims and said he would hold him in bail for further examination on Feb. 18.

Drake was remanded to the Tombs prison, where he will remain until his further examination.

WOMAN BURNED TO DEATH

St. Paul Domestic the Victim of an Accident.

Enveloped in flames when the head of a match dropped onto cellar steps saturated with gasoline Miss Matilda Kunesh, twenty-two years of age, employed as a domestic in the home of Robert B. Burns, a member of the firm of the Burns Lumber company of St. Paul, was so severely burned that she died a few hours later.

In an attempt to descend the steps to rescue Miss Kunesh, Mr. Burns was badly burned about the hands and face. The pain he suffered compelled him to temporarily cease his heroic efforts, after which he leaped through a sheet of flames to the bottom of the stairway. But in carrying the girl from the cellar his clothing was set afire and before he reached the outside he suffered additional severe burns.

UNDER CERTAIN CONDITIONS

Army Engineers Favor High Dam Project Between Twin Cities.

The report of the board of army engineers, composed of Majors Riche, Shunk and Bromwell, which has been in session at St. Paul for several weeks making an examination as to the practicability of the construction of a high power dam in the Mississippi between the Twin Cities, has been received at the war department.

It is favorable to the high dam project in the event that the cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis co-operate in its construction and convey to the United States flowage rights over their parks. If the cities will not consent to such conveyance the board reports that it would be better for the government to destroy the power in the river and proceed with the building of low dams as an aid to navigation.

PREMONITION COMES TRUE

Woman Finds Mangled Body of Her Husband.

Though trembling with the dread of the revelations that she felt would be made as the result of her search Mrs Matt Henkles entered the city lighting plant at Ortonville, where an accident had put out the lights, lighted her way among the machinery and found the mangled body of her husband, the night engineer, lying on the floor. He had been caught in the main shafting and crushed to death.

His wife for days has been haunted with a premonition that he was to meet with an accident and at midnight she visited the plant. She found her husband safe and returned home. Awakening after a few hours' restless sleep she noticed the city lights were out. She hastened to the plant and found her husband dead.

WIPES OUT ENTIRE FAMILY

Otter Tail County Farmer Commits Horrible Crime.

William Ruckheim, aged thirty-seven, a farmer near Parkers Prairie, killed his wife, two sons, two and four years old, and two daughters, eight and ten years old, by beheading them as they slept with the sharp edge of an axe. Ruckheim then stabbed himself with a penknife, but will not die.

The tragedy was discovered by wood sawyers, who have been working at the Ruckheim home for two days. When they neared the house they found all silent and knocked on the door. Ruckheim, bleeding and weak, dragged himself to answer their summons. He told them he had killed his family because "the world was coming to an end."

The wood sawyers carried Ruckheim to his brother's house nearby and returned to the house. They found the woman and the four children in three different beds, weltering in their blood. The bodies were cold. Life was extinct.

The bedrooms were all adjoining and the father had evidently deliberately killed his victims one by one without sound. One of the girls had probably moved or had been moved a trifle after she was struck by her father. She was lying on her back when found, a cleaved portion of her skull downward.

Ruckheim is believed to be insane.

FUGITIVE COMMITS SUICIDE

Ends Life While Sheriff's Posse Surrounds His Home.

Walter McDonald shot and killed himself at his home at Walker, where he was besieged by Sheriff Robert de Lury and a posse of citizens trying to arrest him for shooting Howard T. Sexton, who died a few hours after McDonald committed suicide. McDonald had sworn that he would not be taken alive.

At 5 o'clock in the morning he was seen in the house and at about the same time the sheriff heard from him by telephone. At that hour it was expected that he would surrender shortly.

At 9 o'clock McDonald's brother-in-law, M. J. Sitzer of Cass Lake, who took his sister from the house the previous afternoon, went to the house to complete an agreement of surrender with McDonald. He knocked on the door, but there was no response.

The sheriff repeated the summons and still there was no sign of life in the house. Then he pushed the door open and he and Sitzer went in, calling for McDonald. They had not gone far when they found him dead, with a bullet hole through his head.

McDonald shot Howard F. Sexton Thursday evening in the Hotel Chase because Sexton, who was acting as clerk, refused to give him a drink. The clerk dropped in his tracks with two bullets through the lower lungs and one in his lower jaw.

FRIEND DIED IN BALTIMORE

Shock Proved Too Much for Minnesota Editor.

W. G. Cameron, editor of the Winona Republican-Herald, dropped dead while seated in the opera house in that city during a concert of the Winona Symphony orchestra. He gasped and sank into his seat during the rendition of one of the numbers. His wife was seated at his side. The coroner pronounced death due to heart failure.

It is believed the death of William H. Laird in Baltimore, one of his staunchest friends, came as such a shock that it brought on his death. He wrote the editorial in his paper on Mr. Laird's death. He was seventy-five years old, and is survived only by his wife.

Mr. Cameron was one of the prominent newspaper editors of the Northwest.

FORMERLY AN OFFICE BOY

Now Claude Burnham Is Vice President of the Burlington.

From office boy, earning $3 a week, to railroad vice president, getting probably not less than $25,000 a year, is the achievement during fifteen years' time of a St. Paul boy not yet thirty years old. He is Claude Burnham, son of Harry Burnham, inspector of the city health department.

Mr. Burnham has just been elected vice president of the Burlington system and will have supervision of the traffic department of the entire system. About six years ago he left St. Paul to accept a clerical position with the road in Chicago.

Auxiliary Bishop of St. Paul.

Rev. John J. Lawler, for thirteen years pastor of the cathedral at St. Paul, has been appointed auxiliary bishop of the archdiocese of St. Paul by Pope Pius X. Notice of the appointment was received by Archbishop Ireland. The consecration ceremonies will in all probability take place about Easter time in the cathedral or at the St. Paul seminary.

TELLS ABOUT STATE LOANS

State Auditor Samuel G. Iverson Writes Interesting Letter to Daniel Shaw.

Explains His Position as a Member of the State Investment Board.

State Auditor Iverson has ever been a friend of Northern Minnesota, although stories have been circulated in this section of late to the effect that Mr. Iverson, as a member of the state investment board, was opposed to the loaning of the state school money to further the ditching projects now under way, and thereby increasing the rate of interest at which bonds for drainage purposes are sold. Daniel Shaw, of this city, who is greatly interested in this section of the state, was of this opinion and wrote to Mr. Iverson regarding the matter, criticising the position he was taking. The following frank reply from the state auditor was received and we publish in full the letter below:

Mr. Daniel Shaw,

Thief River Falls.

My dear Mr. Shaw:

Replying to your letter, regarding the loaning of the State's funds will say: that I am the author of the Constitutional Amendment adopted in 1896, which authorizes the loaning of these funds to public corporations outside of school districts. Senator Stephens assisted in drawing the Act, which authorizes the loaning of these funds to counties on drainage bonds. I mention this, Mr. Shaw, to show you how interested I have been in the extension of the laws to include drainage bonds. Any one, who cares to investigate will find that this law has been of vast benefit to the people of the northern counties, and has saved them immense amounts of money, in fact, because of our four per cent law, we are able to regulate the rate of interest charged by private companies to a large extent.

No member of the State Drainage Commission has done more for the extension of the drainage of state lands than myself, and I have done so, not only because it was just and proper to the people of the northern counties to do so, but because it was a profitable matter for the State.

I assisted in the drawing of the law, which authorized the loaning of our funds for county ditch loans at 8 per cent, but as [illegible] school district and village applications almost large enough to exhaust all the money, we had at four per cent, the Investment Board decided that they would make a uniform rule at four per cent on the ground that we should not discriminate against our school districts.

Regarding the sale of the bonds of Massachusetts, Virginia and other states, held by our trust funds, and converting them into cash, and loaning them to our municipalities, will say: that this matter has been before the Investment Board on one occasion only, and that was in August, 1905. The proposition was made by Mr. Block, who was then State Treasurer, it was put to a vote and Chief Justice Start, Hon. J. T. Wyman, President Board of Regents of the State University, Governor Johnson, and myself, voted against the sale of the bonds. Mr. Block alone voted in favor. I mention this to show you that the statement that I was the only one of the board, who opposed the sale of the bonds was an error The law requires a unanimous vote, before the bonds can be sold. This you can see was very far from unanimous.

I wish to further add that the judgment of these men, even eliminating myself, is worth respecting. We are acting in the capacity of a trustee for a great sacred fund, and when we register our votes against the sale of those bonds, we did so in the interest, I believe, not only of the trust funds, but in the interest of our own people. For had we disposed of the two and a half million dollars' worth of Virginia Bonds at that time, it would have been at a great sacrifice to begin with, and furthermore it would have soon been all gone. At a certain time, Duluth, one of our large cities wished to borrow $275,000, other cities in the state would have an equal right to a fair show at this cheap rate of interest, in other words if we had sold the bonds at that time the money would have been gone in these large loans within a year, or a year and a half at the outside, and then we would have been in the same condition, we are now.

On January 1st, 1910, the outstanding loans in force made by the Investment Board were as follows:

Permanent School Fund....	$7,389,829.84
Permanent University......	529 544 00
Swamp Land Fund.........	395 050.00
Making a total of	$8,314,432.84

of trust funds loaned by the State, to school districts, townships, villages, cities and county drainage bonds.

Of the above there are $2,021,538.09 of county ditch bonds. This is an exceedingly large amount, and a large per centage of the money that we have had under our control.

In addition to the above, the State Trust Funds owns $2,300,000 of State Capitol Certificates, issued on our State Capitol. This make in all about $10,500,000 of our trust funds invested in Minnesota, and we have in round numbers about five million dollars invested in the bonds of other states.

Under separate cover I am sending you a copy of the State Treasurer's report, which is the latest published report containing these figures, and on Page 16, you will find a statement of the Investment Funds. No one questions the value of our home securities, certainly a Minnesota municipality, backed by our loyal and enterprising people is just as good a security as any bond in the world, but, I submit, that people, acting as trustees for a great sacred fund, must be wise, not only for the present, but for generations to come.

Some of the bonds held by our trust funds have more than 80 years to run, and if they were disposed of, I doubt, if they could ever be bought again, without paying a very much higher rate.

I wish to add that we are now able to pay practically all the applications, which have come to us, and have been approved by the Investment Board, and within a short time, the income from the State's iron mines will be so large that I doubt that even the demand from the Minnesota public municipalities will cover it. This is an added reason, why it would have been unwise, and would now be unwise to sell our long time interest bearing bonds of other states.

I am writing you fully and frankly in this matter, Mr. Shaw, and you have my permission to publish the letter in your paper, if you think it worth while to do so.

Very truly yours,

S. G. IVERSON,

State Auditor.

IRWING A. CASWELL.

Irwing A. Caswell, who was recently appointed clerk of the supreme court by the judges of this court, will be a candidate for the Republican nomination at the next state convention. Mr. Caswell was born in Anoka, county, this state, and a young man held in very high esteem by all who know him.

Holt to Have a Bank.

Holt, the second station north of here on the Great Northern, is to have a state bank. H. P. Sponheim, D. B. Bakke and other stockholders of the Peoples State Bank, of this city are back of the new financial instution and the bank will commence doing business as soon as a suitable building can be erected in the spring. The ditches to be built in the vicinity of Holt next summer are going to greatly increase the trade territory of this hustling little place and it is sure to become an important business center.

Another Big Ditch.

A petition was filed with Judge Grindeland last week for another judicial ditch and it will be far larger than anything ever before attempted. The ditch will drain land in Marshall, Roseau and Beltrami counties.

What is known as the Mouse river country is to be drained. The outlet will be in the Thief lake, and it will drain all of that county north of the Gryg's ditch

Sees in Co-operation the Solution of the High Price Problem.

There has been considerable talk about the high prices of living and the boycott of the meat trust by labor unions, etc It is is very doubtful if the boycotters will succeed, as indicated by the comments of the beef trust in tonight's Dispatch. If they would take a lesson from the poor weavers of Ghent and use the dollar they contribute to "strike funds" each month and and erect and operate abattoirs near the cities and deliver the meats direct to their consumers without trust and middlemen's profits and establish a cash-paying basis they will find they can have their meats at one-half the present prices.

Each patron would become a stockholder and then share in the profits, as the weavers of Ghent do who have now become very wealthy and carry on an immense business. The same co-operative system is being carried on in many places in England. There is no reason why they cannot do the same here and thus save the profits to themselves instead of giving it to a few millionaires. In fact this is the solution of the great question now staring three-fourths of of our population in the face, and the sooner we act the better.

Former Red Lake County Boy Creates a Sensation in Milwaukee.

Swim Across River in Attempt to Make Their Escape.

The Milwaukee Sentinel publishes an article regarding a sensational hold-up in that city in which a former Red Lake county boy—Edward Dubuque—played a prominent part. Although Dubuque gives his residence as Thief River Falls, his home was at Red Lake Falls, but he had often visited this city. The article from the Sentinel is as follows:

Frustrated in a daring attempt to rob the jewelry store and pawn shop of Max Krome, 203 West Water street, in broad daylight on Wednesday, two youthful robbers endeavored to make a sensational escape by swimming across the Milwaukee river at the foot of Cedar street.

Chilled by icy water and scared by a crowd of pursuers, the pair turned back after swimming out for some distance. Although numb, the two managed to crawl up on the bank of the river, where they were taken in custody by the police.

In the central police station they gave their names as Edward Dubuque, 17 years of age, living in Thief River Falls, Minn., and Harry Davis, 20 years old, living in Homestead, Pa. Dubuque says he is a bell boy and Davis gives his calling as that of salesman. After their melodramatic experience, and within ten minutes after being placed in separate cells, the two fell asleep.

A third man was in the store at the time of the attempted hold-up. He entered a few minutes before the robbers entered, and it is believed that he was acting as a "blind". Krome believes that the stranger had a hand in the plot to rob the store. He disappeared, when the two bolted out of the door to escape.

It was through the pluck and presence of mind of Louis Werbel, 19 years of age, a brother-in-law of the proprietor, that the youthful robbers were foiled. When one of them gave him a stunning blow on the jaw, knocking him against a show case, Werbel began to shout at the top of his voice. Instead of seizing a tray of scarf pins, the two became excited and rushed out of the store.

Davis and Dubuque entered the store shortly after 9 o'clock. They were greeted by Werbel, who was alone in the place, except for the third man, who was looking at jewelry on the other side of the store. Davis requested that they be permitted to see a tray of rings. After scrutinizing them for ten minutes, and asking prices, the two seemed to be dissatisfied and wanted to see scarf pins.

Just as Werbel was placing the tray of pins upon the counter, Davis reached across the counter, and, with vicious swing, struck Werbel in the jaw with a "billy".

"Police! Police! Help! Help!" shouted Werbel, at the same time running from behind the counter with the intention of showing fight.

When the two saw this move, not taking time to seize the tray, they made for the door.

Werbel ordered the third man out of the store and gave chase. His shouting attracted the attention of passersby, and soon a large crowd was in pursuit of the two.

Not knowing that there was no bridge across the river at that point, the two turned east on Cedar street and deliberately ran toward the river and jumped into the icy water. With strong strokes they made for the middle of the stream. But the icy water unnerved them, and they turned about and faced the large crowd which stood on the bank. With chattering teeth and frigid hands, they climbed back on the dock and sat down, while the large crowd gathered around them.

When he saw the pair jump into the water, Werbel ran to Third and State streets and notified Patrolman Charles Poertner. By this time the police had been notified, and the patrolman and Detectives Leonard Schweitzer and Jacob Laubenheimer arrived. The shivering two were taken to the central police station, where dry clothing was given them.

"The two were in the store on Tuesday," said Krome, who arrived at the store shortly after the attempted hold-up. "They wanted to see rings. I showed them some but they did not purchase. I think the third party in the store was an accomplice."

Werbel was not the least excited after the attack upon him. He returned to the store, after the two had been taken into custody and went about his work.

"We wanted to take a bath," was the only explanation made by Davis when asked by Capt. Laubenheimer why he jumped into the river!

The real foundations of violin playing is a correct bowing and proper holding of the instrument. Without this knowledge and ability no student can ever become a violinist; he will always remain a fiddler, with a scratchy tone. The first month or two of violin study at the Thief River Falls School of Music is devoted mostly to the acquirement of a correct style of bowing and holding of the violin. These difficulties overcome, nothing stands in the way of the student's development but the limitations of talent.

Senator A. L. Hanson, of Ada, was in the city the first of the week attending to business matters and visiting with his many friends here. Senator Hanson would not state whether or not he would be a candidate for re-election. Personally, Mr. Hanson stated, he did not want to make the run, but a large number of his friends were urging him to enter the race, and he might consent, if a better candidate could not be found.

Most of the faults of the piano student, and the amateur pianist, are due to lack of a proper amount of technical drill. This is often slighted in piano teaching because by omitting it the work of the teacher is lightened. The conscientious and competent teacher never fails to give due importance to technical problems. About one third of the time of the students at the Thief River Falls School of Music is given to technical work, including a thorough drill in scales, arpeggios, octaves, and the various forms of hand gymnastics that enable a student to acquire velocity and dexterity. Without this no student can ever hope to have facility, or a good command of the keyboard. Due importance is also given to phrasing, interpretation, expression, and the cultivation of a musicianly style of playing.

Few people understand the importance of a correct beginning in the study of music. Many talented pupils give up the study of music after some years of hard work because they come to realize when too late that they are too handicapped by the faults of a bad beginning that they cannot make further progress. Prospective students, and those contemplating beginning the study of piano or violin may be assured that the system and methods carried out at the Thief River Falls School of Music are those in use at and approved by the best conservatories of the large cities.

A bevy of young ladies were royally entertained at the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. Vandervort's, St. Paul Ave. S. on the evening of the 14th, in honor of Mrs. Russel of Kenmare and Miss Leona Lakin. Games were indulged in. Hunting hearts was a very pleasant one as all seemed experts, but the young ladies were very much chagrined to find that Mrs. Russel won the prize, having found the greatest number of hearts. She, having just captured a real live heart ought to have been sufficient, they all thot. The dining room was elegantly decorated with hearts and beautiful dark red carnations and the effect can be better imagined than described. The repast was delicious and all voted Mrs. Vandervort an artist in the culinary line. After having their fortunes told in a satisfactory manner departed for their homes, loud in praise of their host and hostess, who entertained them so royally.

School Notes.

Dr. Gambell delivered a short and pithy address at the high school assembly last Thursday morning, every word of which was listened to with deep interest by the students.

The name of Theone Walker was inadvertently ommitted from the report of a recent sophomore literary entertainment at the high school. This oversight does not affect Theone's standing as the student out of some 1100 who possesses the greatest natural musical talent and the most skill as an entertainer at the piano.

The high school classes and the grades belonging to the High School building will have an exhibit samples of their class work in Miss Johnson's room next Friday afternoon. All are cordially invited to attend this exhibition.

The physics class is engaged this month in investgating the mysteries of electricity. No branch of science is so replete with interest and startling surprises to the student as is this.

Valentine day was observed in all the grade rooms. Many tender little missives and pretty picture cards found their way into the various boxes in the rooms and not one comic or one conveying an unkind or coarse sentiment was discovered anywhere. Now, if the dealers in the city would wisely destroy the comics they have on hand and refuse to purchase such trash in the future, the public would not lose anything thereby.

Supt. Pickard of Hinckley, which has one of the ten agricultural high schools in the state, visited the local schools last Wednesday, coming from Alexandria to do so. He, like all strangers to the city, expressed surprise at the growth of the town and the schools.

The normal students have begun the teaching of arithmetic in the intermediate grades.

The Junior program last Friday evening was full of wise and witty things. The public is invited to attend these literary efforts of the students. They are free and far from being tame or uninteresting. The program presented was as follows: Opening address by the class president, Allen Lipscomb; instrumental solo, Olga Oas; a class novel, George Werstlein; song, boys' chorus; an essay on Salt Lake City, Morlan Bishop; monologue, Gertrude O'Neill; class paper, Gordon Sharbach; closing song by mixed chorus.

Senator Hanson accompanied by Board Member D. P. O'Neill visited the high school Wednesday morning of this week, and occupied the opening period by short addresses to the students. As often as possible, or at least once a week, some person will deliver short talks to the high school people. These serve several purposes and convince the pupils that all knowledge is not contained in books nor is book knowledge all there is in this world worth striving for.

Next Tuesday, being the Washington anniversary, there will be no school.

Soo to Spend $8,000,000.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 15.—The St. Paul, Minneapolis & Sault Ste. Marie railroad officials today announced the intention of that road to expend $8,000,000 in improvements during the present year, of which $3,000,000 will be expended upon the Chicago division. The rest will be spent in improving the main line, although a good share will be put into the Thief River Falls branch to Duluth.

In connection with the above, it may be stated that the Soo is going to make a great many improvements in Thief River Falls this year. A new twelve stall round house—which will not be an addition to the present one—is to be built, and also a large machine shop.

Thief River Falls School of Music.

The Thief River Falls School of Music is enrolling new students all the time. This is an institution that is to the advantage of the city, as aside from the fact that it offers Thief River Falls people an opportunity to follow out the same courses of piano and violin study as are in use at the leading conservatories of the East, it brings people here from outside places. A number of students come here now for study from nearby towns, which all tends to make business for the city. The school is certain to become one of the important educational factors of Northern Minnesota.

Voting In Spain.

Voting in Spain is held to be a duty to the community, not merely a privilege of the individual, and neglect of civic obligations carries its own penalty. Male adults of legal age and under seventy, with the exception of priests, notaries and judges, are required to vote in municipal elections. Failure to cast a ballot is punishable by having one's name published as censure for neglect, by having taxes increased 2 per cent, by suffering a deduction of 1 per cent in salary if employed in the public service and for the second offense the loss of right to hold elective or appointive office.

SHOULD PLAY SAFE.

Considering the deplorable condition in which seed corn is admitted to be for the coming season's planting, it will be the height of folly for any corn grower to plant seed from any ears that have not been given a careful individual test. There are several types of testing racks and boxes on the market which are very handy, but the homemade tester will answer the purpose very well if one hasn't the price. The idea to be carried out is to take at least six kernels from each ear, so arranging the testing box that one has an accurate reference between the six kernel groups and the ear from which the groups were taken. Perhaps the most convenient means of doing this is by fixing a shallow box as long and broad as desired and about five inches deep, spreading moist earth or sawdust in the bottom to the depth of two inches and on this placing a piece of white cloth about ten inches larger than the box all around, which has been marked off in squares of about two inches and a half and numbered in consecutive order. The ears from which the kernels are taken should be in such order that the operator will know from which ear each group of six kernels is taken. When the squares all have their quotas of six kernels each, a piece of cloth of about the same size as the first should be placed carefully over the kernels, and when this has been placed so as to cover all the kernels and with edges extending outside the box a third cloth should be laid on, and on this should be spread the sawdust or other material which is to be used, and this moistened sufficiently so as to make germination possible. When loaded the testing box should be placed in a warm room, and when it has stood about a week the covering should be raised at the corner, and if the germination has proceeded far enough to tell the story the first cloth, with the sawdust, should be carefully removed. The cloth immediately over the seed can then be removed without disturbing or dislocating the kernels which lie beneath, when the story of the germinating power of the ears will be plainly told. In deciding which ears to eliminate it is just as necessary to discard ears whose kernels show weak vitality as those which fail to germinate at all. Only those should be selected which show vigorous root and shoot development in at least five out of six kernels. If the scarcity of seed corn necessitates the use of ears showing only four good kernels, this fact should be kept in mind in selecting plates for the planter boxes, as more seed will have to be used to secure the desired stand. Unless a careful method of testing individual ears like that outlined above is followed there will be thousands of fields of corn next season that will have half a stand of corn or less.

OPPORTUNITIES CLOSE BY.

With the present rapid movement of population to the western states and the quite complete occupation of the choicest areas, the writer is convinced, as are many others, that the young man seeking a new field would do well to look over carefully opportunities in the central and New England states, particularly along the line of twenty to thirty acre tracts, which may be worked intensively to garden truck, small fruits and poultry. The relative value of such tracts, which may be had at very reasonable prices, would depend chiefly upon the workable character and fertility of the soil and nearness to a market where the produce of the farm could be disposed of at good prices. Many an easterner is operating just such areas as these in the manner indicated and is not only making a living for himself and family, but is accumulating a snug bank account. One could readily get track of such a tract by sending a three line advertisement to any agricultural paper of general circulation published in the section in which one wishes to locate.

THE HOTBED.

It is none too early to begin making plans for the hotbed, which should be located in a sheltered, sunny spot. The bed can be started much earlier if the preliminary work—digging the pit, making the frame and laying by a supply of soil—was done last fall before freeze up. In such case all that will be necessary will be to put in the pit and pack down about ten inches of fresh horse manure, wet it with seven or eight pails of water, allow it to stand until the heating process gets well started and then put on four or five inches of earth. As soon as this becomes warm enough the seed may be sown. If the preliminary work was not done last fall, one would have to wait until the ground thawed sufficiently to permit the digging of the pit. If the work is delayed as a result of this, the early things may be started in boxes in the house and later transplanted to the hotbed.

Prince Edward Island, Canada, raised last year 60,000 geese and 100,000 turkeys, a large per cent of these birds being exported to this country.

Exercise is a law or requirement of health with hens as other animals. It is on this account that they will lay best when scratching most—because in the best physical condition.

Somewhat oddly, perhaps, the best way to take the chill from one's hands is to put them in cold water, and the best way to reduce frost bitten noses and ears is to apply a handful of snow.

December saw the highest prices ever paid for steers on the Chicago market. One bunch of nineteen, averaging 1,572 pounds in weight, brought $9.50 on the open market, while a single animal of about the same weight sold for an even $10 per hundredweight.

There are 40,000,000 acres of land in the United States susceptible to reclamation by irrigation. Of this area there will have been reclaimed by 1911 by projects at present completed or under way 2,000,000 acres at a cost placed at $70,000,000, or an average of $35 per acre.

The hens of the country never did so big a business as during 1909, the total value of poultry products being $625,000,000, of which amount the value of eggs alone was $300,000,000. The total egg crop of the year is placed at 1,500,000,000 dozen and cost the consumer, at from 30 to 60 cents per dozen, close to $540,000,000.

It is a quite generally accepted fact that apples from an orchard kept in sod are better colored, but smaller in size, than those from trees given continuously clean cultivation. A further fact that seems to have been demonstrated is that the trees under the latter condition not only attain a greater size, but produce a considerably larger quantity of fruit.

Generally speaking, roup in chickens is a chronic cold or catarrh brought on by housing under damp and unfavorable conditions or allowing the flock to roost where direct drafts will strike them. Dry feet and freedom from drafts are the best preventives. Roup is not only brought on by the conditions referred to, but is contagious as well when once it gets a foothold.

Much can be done to give the limbs of young pear and apple trees which grow too close in the right direction by pulling them out to the proper position and inserting a cornstalk brace of the desired length. If from a stalk of sufficient size such a brace is both strong and light, while the ends are easily notched with a sharp knife to fit the limbs on which they are to rest.

A large per cent of the hogs produced in the south would be a real curiosity at a fat stock show, not having been perverted by the artificial conditions imposed by their owners. Such hogs range wild in woods and swamps, live on grass, roots, acorns and grubs, breed at will and are slaughtered at two or three years of age, weighing from 50 to 125 pounds, a far cry to the corn belt porker that tips the scales at 350 when ten months old.

The practice followed by some of feeding spoiled or moldy corn or grain with a view to saving it is a very questionable one, merely from the standpoint of dollars and cents, often impairing the condition and retarding the development of a feeding animal to an extent greater than the value of the feed involved. It is safe to assume that it is much the same with animals as with human beings—that what they do not eat with a relish does them little good and often harm.

Many an animal abundantly equipped with pedigree is put up at the dispersion sale as a full blooded animal fit for breeding purposes when in appearance and getup it is essentially a scrub and instead of becoming sire or dam—the progenitor of other scrubs—ought to be converted into beefsteak or pork chops and its pedigree used to light the fire. Atavism, this tendency in an animal to show scrub traits of an ancestor, is perhaps more often seen in cattle than in sheep or hogs, but when it or other disqualifications appear in any pedigreed animal it should serve as a bar to its sale as a breeding animal.

When the owners of fruit ranches in the Grand valley, Colorado, fought frost last spring it was done on a grand scale. The mature value of the fruit on the trees was placed at $3,000,000, and it was this stake the owners worked for. Over an area of twenty-seven miles the temperature was raised from 8 to 9 degrees F. by means of 300,000 fire pots, part of which burned oil for fuel and part coal. All operations in the fighting of the frost were directed from Grand Junction by means of telephone connections with weather stations here and there over the valley, from which reports as to the temperature were received every half hour. When the danger point approached the signal for lighting the fires was given, and they were kept up as long as there was need. In the manner described 75 per cent of all the fruit trees in bloom were cared for directly, while the trees of many a skeptical ranch owner were protected from frost damage by the fires in adjacent orchards.

—PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

The contest for the office of state treasurer is going to be the warmest kind of a fight, and it is possible a dark horse may win.

Senator Ole Sageng, will not be a candidate for congress from this district this year. He announces that he will again ask the voters of Otter Tail county to return him to the senate.

The Minneapolis Journal states that Jens J. Opsahl, of Bemidji, who for the past two terms has represented this district in the legislature, is going to become a candidate for congress.

Just why any voter in the state should desire to see a change in the state auditor's office is hard to understand. When the state has the services of so thoroughly competent a man as S. G. Iverson there should be no doubt about his renomination and election.

In Maine a hunter has been fined $400 because he thought another man was a deer and shot him. Shooting men by mistake for deer is no longer to be passed over with mere expressions of regret, if the shooting occurs in Maine. These evidences of advancement are always encouraging.

The Bemidji Pioneer says that there is much favorable mention of the candidacy of Al Jester in the southern part of Beltrami county and very little sentiment in favor of Albert Berg, the other Beltrami candidate for the state senate. Outside of Beltrami county there is little sentiment for either as yet.

W. E. Lee, of Long Prairie, is quite sure to become a candidate for governor in opposition to A. O. Eberhart. The contest is sure to be an interesting one, but the chances in favor of Eberhart are the best. The big counties of Hennepin, Ramsey and St. Louis are quite sure to be for Eberhart and that alone is nearly enough to nominate.

There are a few of our farmers who are selling clover seed these days at the measly price of only $12.00 per bushel. Now since they threshed only five bushels of that stuff to the acre, it only brings $60.00 to the acre. This goes to prove that this country is not good for much—does it not? Next time you meet some one who is knocking this country, tell him to go to grass—or rather to clover raising. Hallock News.

Minnesota Mascot: Under the impression that they were performing a patriotic duty, the rank and file of the republicans and democrats have been fighting each other for fifty years. They started out by dividing on matters of principles, but as these problems from time to time adjusted themselves, the division became more and more a matter of office, a matter of spoils, a matter of whose cock should do the crowing on the day after election. In this way the people have been fighting each other, while the trusts and "interests" have been winking the other eye, filling their money bags and shouting "sic'em". The people are beginning to see the folly of all this. They are beginning to see that their party loyalty is being used as a weapon against themselves by those interests to whose advantage it is to keep the attention of the people concentrated upon something, anything, but themselves.

Annual Report of Public Library.

The Public Library is growing, as are our other public institutions, and keeping pace with the growth of the city. A glance at the following figures will give an idea of our growth during the years since the city took charge of the library in the spring of 1906. We regret that we have no record of the circulation of books prior to August, 1906, as it would be interesting to have statistics from the very beginning of the work, when a few ladies started the work, which meant a continued struggle at the beginning and all the time until the city took charge of the library. Their labor was not in vain. They turned over to the city at that time about seven hundred books. At the present time we have 1323 books for circulation, and about 200 reference books and public documents. We have 16 of the leading magazines, with a circulation of 1254 for the past year. 251 new cards were issued during the year, 94 adults' and 157 juveniles, making 842 cards in all; adults' 450, juvenile, 392.

The circulation since the city took charge of the library is as follows:

Yr.	No.
1906	5500
1907	6557
1908	7735
1909	11202

The receipts for 1909, from fines and five cent books, were $79.15.

The expenses for the same year were as follows:

Books and Magazines	$246.65
Labor	16.25
Librarian's salary	208.00
Total expenses	$470.90

About forty per cent. of the total circulation belongs to the childrens department, and our greatest need at present is new books for the children. We ought to have at least two hundred new books, besides replacing many that are entirely worn. Our city cannot spend its money for better purposes than putting good books in the hands of its citizens.

Mrs. Elizabeth Blanchard, Librarian.

(2.) Indicate whether you desire lodging for Thursday or Friday night, or both.

(3.) Indicate the hour and train of your arrival.

At the present rate of increase it will be but a few years until rubbers and overshoes will be luxury far beyond the purse of the laboring man. The price of rubber has jumped over 50 per cent in a few years. A pair of overshoes that you bought here about five years ago at $1.25 will cost you $1.75 and your local merchant makes less profit on the sale today than he did five years ago. Ten years ago crude rubber sold in Minneapolis for 60 and 65 cents a pound. Today crude rubber is worth $1.95 in otherwords it has gone up 272 per cent in ten years.—Ex.

More people are taking Foley's Kidney Remedy every year. It is considered the most effective remedy for all kidney and bladder troubles that medical science can devise. Foley's Kidney Remedy corrects irregularities, builds up the system, and restores lost vitality. Sold by all druggists.

The farmer who owns a farm is the particular person who is fixed, says an exchange. Banks may fail and factories close, workmen strike and suspend, merchants fail and towns burn, times may be panicky and even crops be short, but the farmer who owns his acres will get along. He will live in comfort and quiet, with plenty to eat, drink and wear. He is the most independent man on earth. Yet there are lots of them who do not appreciate their situation.

The property know as "Moylan Park" just at the west end of the bridge, is offered for sale in single lots or as a whole. Parties desiring to purchase the same or any part thereof are requested to see P. Moylan. Also lots 23 and 24, block 13, in Porter's addition, will be sold. (7tf.)

Mr. E. A. Kelley, Belvidere, Ill., writes us: "I am an ex-engineer with 22 years active service to my credit. About three years ago my kidneys were affected so that I had to give up my engine. First I was troubled with severe, aching pain over the hips. Then followed inflammation of the bladder, and specks appeared before my eyes. A sample of Foley's Kidney Pills that I tried, so benefited me that I bought more, I continued to take them until now I can safely testify, they have made me a sound and well man". Sold by all druggists.

One Man Convicted.

Dr. Bockman, Capt. Wistie and Policeman James Farr, who were over to Hallock last week as witnesses against the Karlstad bank returned Saturday. Only one of the four men—Williams—were convicted.

Four men were seen in Thief River Falls three days before the robbery who answered the description of three of the men arrested and two days after the robbery were seen by section men between St. Hilaire and Wylie and they testified that the three men answered the description of the men on trial.

W. H. Taylor, who runs a saloon with rooms to let overhead in Minneapolis, gave damaging evidence against Williams, one of the trio, who was convicted, stating that Williams had told him in Minneapolis that they did not get much at Karlstad, handing him a torn $10 dollar bill at the same time.

The corner of the bill torn off was produced as evidence by the state and just fitted the bill Williams gave Taylor, the latter formerly having been a pal of Williams, but has since been acting as detective for the Banker's Assn.

Grygla May Have a Bank.

There were rumors in circulation about the city last week to the effect that County Attorney Brown, of Warren, had removed out to Grygla, was going to start a bank, organize a new county, build a railroad and do other big things for Eastern Marshall county. Mr. Brown was in the city last Saturday and to a NEWS representative he stated that the organization of a bank at Grygla was among the possibilities, but that he was not going to build the railroad or do the other stunts in any great rush. Mr. Brown believes that Eastern Marshall county will soon be the best part of Marshall county and is investing his surplus money in farm lands there.

Enjoying Prosperity.

Carl Magnell and Charles Johnson both of the town of Mayfield, where five short years ago not a settlers cabin was to be seen, are making preparations to erect two large barns so as to properly house their growing herds of stock. The two barns, which will rival any seen in the southern part of the state will be 42 by 72 with lean-tos and a full loft and will be but another addition to the many landmarks of a similar kind that now loom up on that fruitful prairie.

The many fine buildings, the sleek looking herds of dairy cattle, the ditches and graded roads that keep on making their appearance are but a few of the many signs of the prosperity that the farmers of this section having well earned are enjoying. With the advent of more intensive farming and co operation in breeding Red Lake County will take her place second to none among the counties in the state.—Plummer Pioneer.

A Plummer Man Caught.

Albert Wanstad, a bartender in a saloon at Plummer, was brought to this city last Thursday by the United States officers, charged with having sold liquor to an Indian. He was bound over to the U. S. grand jury, which convenes at Fergus Falls. It is rumored that all saloons are to be closed at Plummer in a short time, as the officers fear that the building of the Soo line from there east will bring the town into too close touch with the Red Lake Indian reservation, and the village is not large enough to have to support a large police force.

Had a Big Time.

The special session of the K. of P. lodge last Friday evening is said to have been the biggest event in secret society circles ever before attempted in Thief River Falls. A large number of candidates were given the third degree and the work was done by the Warren lodge, which organization was here in a body. The local members speak very highly of the efficient way in which the Warren lodge did the work, and say that it could not be improved. After the work was over, a banquet was served.

Hearing Postponed.

The hearing on the removal of County Commissioner Lindquist and County Auditor Letandresse has been postponed from the 15th of February to the 23rd, owing to the fact that the attorney general's office was unable to send a representative on the 15th.

The Salvation Army.

Don't forget that the Salvation Army is having a coffee and cake social in their barracks this week, Thursday, Feb. 17th.

The tickets for this social will cost only 10 cents each and we will appreciate your presence there and your help, financially, toward our work.

Don't forget this please, and bring your friends along with you.

Yours to serve,
CAPT. C. PITT.

STAY IN MINNESOTA

Montana Real Estate Firm Gives Good Advice to a Friend.

Everything Is Not as Pictured Out in Montana, They Say.

B. E. Schuster, a brother of Charles Schuster, of this city, is in the real estate and homestead locating business at Malta, Mont., and his partner is C. H. Stevens. A short time ago Mr. Schuster wrote to his Montana brother regarding conditions out there with a view of locating in the west. The following letter, therefore, will be of interest to those who have been thinking of locating in the west:

"Your brother Ben has asked me to drop you a few lines in answer to your letter to him, and says he will write you personally, when he can get to it.

"We are of the opinion, and let it be said frankly, that any man who is comfortably fixed, healthy, and doing well in Minnesota, had better stay where he is. Remember this is a new country, and many of the comforts and conveniences are missing. If you, personally, have a strong desire to come this way, sell nothing until you come and see for yourself.

"So far as land is concerned, there is no better part of the west than hereabouts, for we have more water, at a less depth, than further west. At Galata, Chester and Shelby, the want of water will prove a serious drawback, not to mention the quality of the water there if they get any. That country is much higher than this, and more thoroughly drained. Flax is a good crop on spring breaking. There are practically no cows here for sale. A twelve hundred pound, young team is worth about $350. There are no oxen. Great soil for potatoes. Can sell all the fresh eggs you can handle at from thirty to fifty cents per dozen according to time of year. Never less than twenty-five cents.

Express Rates 60 per ct. Too High.

The hearing of express companies by the interstate commission on the charge of extortionate rates, brought by Senator B. E. Sundberg of Kennedy, Minn., closed at New York last Monday. Briefs will be submitted and arguments heard later.

During the course of the investigation Senator Sundberg proved to the satisfaction of everybody, but the express companies that express rates could be reduced 60 per cent and the companies would still be making money.

Traffic Manager Ludlow of the Wells-Fargo company took exceptions to Sundberg's testimony. He declared that if the reduction be demanded of 60 per cent in rates to be put into effect, express companies would be swamped with business that it has no desire to handle. He declared express matter is handled on fast trains, many of them passenger trains, with the result that express business was necessarily limited. He insisted that a reduction of rates would operate "against the present excellent service".

Rural Carriers Not Required to Lift Loose Coins From Rural Mail Boxes.

This office has been advised that, commencing Feb., 15, 1910, rural letter carriers will not be required to collect loose coins from rural mail boxes. Patrons should enclose coins in an envelope, wrap them securely in a piece of paper, or deposit them in a coin holding receptacle, so they can be easily and quickly taken from boxes, and carriers will be required to lift such coins, and, where accompanied by mail for dispatch attach the requisite stamps. Patrons will please govern themselves accordingly.

JOHN ANDREWS THE COWARD.

The Way He Acted When the Fearful Cyclone Came.

By MARVIN DANA.

Roundabout him in a straggling parallelogram stood the ungainly wooden houses of a cyclone district county seat. Beyond lay the level brown of prairies, shot with the ocher of ripening grain, gray blue where it merged into a horizon's sky of appalling bronze. His sight was blurred by dancing currents of hot air. In the shade of the hotel porch the thermometer registered 110 degrees, and there yet remained two sweltering hours before sunset.

"Thank heaven, I've inspected the last acre and can start for New York in the morning," was his thought. Instinctively his hand touched his pocket and her letter. He smiled, then frowned.

"Am I a coward?"

A paragraph in her letter had started the self inquisition.

"I shall be so glad when you are safe home again," it ran, "even though I have no real cause for alarm. You are so big and strong and brave, and I love you for it. I could never love a coward."

Was he one? Yes—no! A flush not born of the sun flooded his face. His mind traveled back twenty-four hours, and he cursed his weakness, his timidity, which he had never realized until that awful storm had broken. It was when the terrific lightning peculiar to this region had played about him that he had suddenly found himself trembling, gasping with horror. The memory of those moments still sickened him and filled him with contemptuous self hate.

The proprietor of the hotel came out and balanced on two legs of a chair beside his guest.

"Reckon we'll have another bit of a shower tonight," he drawled amiably.

The careless words filled his listener with dumb anguish, half fear, half shame. Must he again endure that racking torment—the blue glare of electricity, the deadly crackling of the bolts, the horrible realization that multiple death mocked him from every side?

"I don't see any clouds," he ventured.

"You can tell 'weather same as you can cloth, more by feelin' than by looks. I've been forty years in these parts, an' I calc'late we'll have it hammer an' tongs before midnight. Lucky if a regular cyclone don't blow along with it."

"Does lightning do much damage around here?"

"Burns a lot of barns mostly; but, takin' it one time an' another, we've had quite a few folks killed, 'bout twenty in my time. It's a nice, easy death, but I don't like cyclones. One hit me, an' that was enough. The durned thing killed off half the town, includin' all my best friends an' four mules, which was all I was worth. Cyclones, blast 'em, always come in the night, when you can't see 'em."

The listener drew his breath sharply.

"But how do you tell a cyclone, even in daytime?"

"Well, Mr. Andrews, you can always tell it because the sky looks like nothin' you've ever seen before—yellow, green an' ornery. An' if it's comin' your way you'll see what the papers call a funnel shaped cloud, but what looks more like a big balloon, dancin' along. When the gale raises an' that balloon seems to stop bouncin', but stands still, gettin' bigger an' bigger, you dust for a cellar. It's close."

"Do all the places here have cyclone caves?"

"Everybody in town ain't got one, but there's enough to go round. Want to see mine?"

Any diversion from his mental anguish and self pity was welcome to Andrews, and he followed his host to the middle of the back yard, where he saw a mound of earth. In the end nearest them was a swinging shutter, which the landlord raised. Within was space for perhaps six persons comfortably placed by crowding compactly. Twice or even thrice that number might seek refuge for a limited time. The odor of damp earth suggested the grave, and again Andrews shuddered.

By the time he sought his room at 10 o'clock that night Andrews had argued himself into believing that this new terror of storm and wind was a constitutional peculiarity for which he was not morally culpable, and, exhausted by heat and mental strain, he quickly dropped asleep.

He awoke with the trump of doom buffeting his eardrums. The crash of a falling thunderbolt brought him to his feet, and he stood dazed amid the lurid radiance of the lightning. In an ecstasy of fear he sprang to the window and closed it. Then he drew the shade and struck a match. Two flickered and died in his trembling hand before he could light the lamp. In a very spasm of horror he sat huddled on his bed. He thought of no one and nothing save himself and—death!

But there remained another note yet to be sounded in the gamut of his terror. Suddenly the hotel commenced to shake and reel under the assaults of the wind. With cringing dismay he recalled the landlord's warning against cyclones in the night. At any moment one might burst upon him, restless, remorseless, overwhelming. Within him rose the instinct of flight. To the cave, to safety!

Mechanically in the midst of his alarms he dressed himself, and as he stepped into the dark hall he recoiled before a sudden glare of lightning. But he was now too desperate in his fear to be checked. No one else was astir, and he tore open a side door, leaped to the entrance of the cave, crept through the narrow opening and sank down, his face buried in his folded arms.

He was safe at last, and a great joy of salvation welled in his heart. For a time he slept, waking with mind cleared and body refreshed. He listened intently, but no sound reached him. He crawled from his refuge, but the thought of returning to the room where he had suffered such mental tortures was hateful to him. He crossed the yard, climbed the fence and started toward the outskirts of the town. The air was of a hue strange to him, sullenly luminous, and he had gone not more than a quarter of a mile when he saw to the south, directly opposite from where the storm had come, a menacing bank of restless clouds. They were ablaze with ragged fire. The boom of thunder rose afresh. Yes; there could be no further question—a second tempest was approaching. Already the sickness of terror was upon him, the nausea of cowardice, and he again faced toward his refuge, the cave! But something in the sky held him fascinated, something shaped like a titanic top, hung from the heavens and spun by demon hands. Then it stopped moving, growing larger and larger.

What had the landlord said that afternoon? When it stops "bouncin'" it's close!

He turned and fled for his life, but even as he ran a new thought came to him. It was not yet morning. None in the sleeping town knew of the doom racing toward their homes. He had a pitiful vision of shattered houses, littered with mutilated bodies, women and children caught from their slumbers in the crunching maw of the cyclone.

He forgot himself and—fear. He had passed the cyclone cellar and was rushing through the hall of the hotel.

"Cyclone! Cyclone! To the cave for your lives!"

The house sprang into instant life, but before the first startled guest reached the main floor Andrews was again in the street. He carried the dinner gong, which he had seized in an inspiration born of anxiety. Between each shout of warning he drummed mad, quivering alarms on the eloquent brass.

He made the round of three sides of the square when of a sudden a mighty roaring was all about him. He paused, bewildered, and a crashing thunderbolt seemed to strike his temple; a burning splendor blinded his eyes. Then an invisible power struck full against him, seized him and wrapped him in its crushing embrace, bore him aloft, tossed him here and there and finally into a blackness that swallowed him completely.

Three days later he woke to see an angel bending over him. No; it was flesh and blood, after all. It was she. He blinked at her uncertainly.

"You are a hero!" She spoke softly, with shining eyes.

Then he remembered.

"Were many saved?"

"All," she answered proudly. "Those you saved roused the others; and only a few, who sought refuge in cellars instead of caves, were hurt by falling timbers. But you suffered most. Oh, it was noble!"

Andrews spoke with sudden vigor.

"No; I am a coward. The storms frightened me shamefully. You cannot understand how I quivered and trembled like a child. I am not worthy of you. I had already hidden in the cave that night. I came out only when I thought all danger was over. The rest was—an accident."

He stopped, exhausted, and she bent close to him.

"Don't talk that way, dearest. You are not a coward, but a conqueror of fear, and you will be my hero always."

MacGregor's Name.

From 1603 to 1661 the name of MacGregor was proscribed in Scotland. Certain oppressed Scots of that clan took the name of a loch. These were the Docharts of the Dunblane district, who were descended from a group of the MacGregors. Fleeing from their pursuers, a party of the fugitives saved themselves by swimming the stream which issues from Loch Dochart and in gratitude for their deliverance assumed the name Dochart. Dean Ramsay tells how a lad going to Glasgow gave his name to a minister as Dochart, while his letter of introduction called him MacGregor. "I fear there is some mistake about your identity; the names don't agree," said the minister. "Weel, sir, that's the way they spell the name in our country."

Salmon Rounded Up by Seal.

While sitting on the shore of Inverness firth one day a correspondent observed about half a dozen seals, each a short distance from the other, moving in a kind of semicircle toward a small bay. Curiosity made him follow their movements as the seals slowly made for the shore. Each kept his place well, though occasionally disappearing and reappearing. To his great surprise, he saw that a shoal of salmon were being herded toward the shore, where there was little chance of escape and where they ultimately fell victims to the seals. What struck the correspondent most was the intelligent way in which the salmon were chased into the bay, reminding him of the manner in which a collie dog brings sheep to a fold.—Scotsman.

TABLE D'HOTE WITH MUSIC.

When I'm in funds, as sometimes haps,
I frequent one of those cafes
Where in an artificial bower
Some gifted aggregation plays.
How strangely dulcet music sways
Digestion! No star dish appeals
To me 'less flanked by rondelays
When I have music with my meals.

With oysters let them rattle off
Some syncopated ditty gay,
But plaintive music I prefer
When they bring on the consomme.
"My Rosary" is fitting. Say,
A tear into my soup oft steals.
But, then, I like to be distrait
When I have music with my meals.

The roast, an overture with this—
Say "Carmen" and her Don Jose.
That intermezzo's sure to come
Accompanied by the entree.
Strauss, rendered in a dreamy way,
An added charm in grouse reveals.
Vin ordinaire acquires bouquet
When I have music with my meals.

"Soul Kiss" and cigarettes! Here's food
For poppy dreams, thoughts far away.
"Waiter, the bill." I've lingered long.
Now apropos that Kipling lay
With its refrain of "Pay, pay, pay,"
An empty pocketbook reveals
I've nothing for a rainy day
When I have music with my meals.

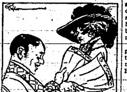
Running No Risk.



Wifey—Don't you want to go shopping with me?

Hubby—No, thanks.

Wifey—You don't love me!

Hubby—Yes, I do. I love you so much that I don't want to run the risk of a permanent separation.

An Unpleasant Surprise.

A fussy passenger in a suburban trolley car suddenly discovered that he had a grievance against the road and forthwith proceeded to abuse the conductor.

The latter was a small man who persisted in saying that rules were rules and that he had no discretion in the matter.

Finally the fussy man became so very warm and seemed so determined to resort to fistic hostilities that an innocent bystander felt compelled to interfere.

"Don't lick the conductor," he said. "Lick the superintendent."

And just then a two fisted six footer who must have weighed 200 pounds at least arose from a nearby seat.

"That's a very good suggestion," he quietly remarked. "I'm the superintendent."

Whereupon the fussy man quietly slid into the nearest empty seat.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Calamity Averted.

"If I remember rightly what the psalmist says about bloody and deceitful men," remarked Uncle Allen Sparks, "it's to the effect that they shall not live out the half of their days. You see from this that if old King Leopold had been a little better man he might have hoped to live to be 150 years old, and what a calamity that would have been!"—Chicago Tribune.

Frank About It.

HIS POINT OF VIEW.

Uncle Ransom, Told to Quit, Is Anxious About His Master.

"Uncle Ransom," said the planter, "you rode my best horse twenty miles to that festival Saturday night. You kept him out all day Sunday and nearly killed him Sunday night. How many times have I told you to let my horses rest on Sunday?"

"Yes, suh, Marse Robert; dat's so, but"—

"How many times have I told you if you didn't quit that you and I could not get along together on this place?"

"Dat sho' is the trufe, Marse Robert. You p'intedly tole me dat. But you knows a nigger. He jes' nacherly forgits."

"Every negro on this place believes that he can do exactly as he pleases."

"Dar now, bless Gawd, you sho' spoke a parable. Dese young niggers is gittin' mighty triflin'."

"It has come to this, Ransom—Reveille is not big enough for you and me. Tomorrow morning we part. You go your way and I go mine."

"Yes, suh."

The old negro looked sorely troubled and bewildered. He glanced over his shoulder at the rippling lake, the open cotton, the perfectly level fields. Ransom had been born on Reveille and had never known any other home. His heart went out in supreme pity for the man who had to leave it.

"Well, Marse Robert, ef we jes' can't git along together, if we's jes' boun' ter sep'rate, would you mind tellin' me whar'bouts you spects ter go?"—Everybody's Magazine.

Speaking of Bromidioms.

"Yes, I think my baby is not at all pretty. There are a number of babies in the community much better looking than mine. My baby gets its ugliness for my side of the house and not from its father's."

"I have no opinion about governmental affairs. I regard problems of statesmanship too deep for me, so I never meddle."

"Yes, I tried to get him, but I am glad he chose the other girl. She is so much more attractive than I am."

"I like my husband to cultivate the acquaintance of other women. It would be manifestly unfair to expect him to devote his time exclusively to me."

"I appreciate highly the confidence my party has thrice expressed in me, but I feel that I have no right to enter another race or to meddle with public affairs."

"Undoubtedly Mr. Taft's quiet regime is preferable to my egotistic foolhardiness."

"Looking over my Christmas presents, I was convinced that my wife is an excellent judge of cigars and neckties."

"The theater is all right, but for entertainment I prefer going to church."

Too Much Persistence.

Sanford—Is Trailer making a good detective?

Tittsworth—No. He has too much persistence.

Sanford—Too much persistence? I should think the more persistence he had the greater his success would be.

Tittsworth—But Trailer's persistence is fool persistence. Four days ago a thief whom Trailer was chasing jumped from a bridge into the river below, and ever since that time Trailer has been waiting for the man to come to the surface.—Chicago News.

THE ZANZIBARIS.

Dense Stupidity and Amusing Blunders of the Natives.

In the "Autobiography of Sir Henry M. Stanley" the author says of the colored natives of central Africa:

"Good as the majority of Zanzibaris were, some of them were indescribably and for me most unfortunately dense. One man who from his personal appearance might have been judged to be among the most intelligent was after thirty months' experience with his musket unable to understand how it was to be loaded. He never could remember whether he ought to drop the powder or the bullet into the musket first. Another time he was sent with a man to transport a company of men over a river to camp. After waiting an hour I strode to the bank of the river and found them paddling in opposite directions, each blaming the other for his stupidity and, being in a passion of excitement, unable to hear the advice of men across the river, who were bawling out to them how to manage their canoe.

"Another man was so ludicrously stupid that he generally was saved from punishment because his mistakes were so absurd. We were one day floating down the Kongo, and, it being near camping time, I bade him, as he happened to be bowman on the occasion, to stand by and seize the grass on the bank to arrest the boat when I should call out. In a little while we came to a fit place, and I cried, 'Hold hard, Kirango!' 'Please God, master,' he replied and forthwith sprang on the shore and seized the grass with both hands, while we, of course, were rapidly swept down river, leaving him alone and solitary on the bank. The boat's crew roared at the ridiculous sight, but nevertheless his stupidity cost the tired men a hard pull to ascend again, for not every place was available for a camp.

"He it was also who on an occasion when we required the branch of a species of arbutus which overhung the river to be cut away to allow the canoes to be brought nearer to the bank for safety actually went astride of the branch and chopped away until he fell into the water with the branch and lost our ax. He had seated himself on the outer end of the branch."

A Bunch of Kicks.

"I'm in hard luck!" sighed the steel rail.

"Look at me! I get nothing from morning till night but hot air," groaned the pumping engine.

"I'm always in hot water," sighed the boiler.

"Consider my plight," cried the macadam road, "invariably walked over and trodden under foot."

"I'm used to it, for I'm always up against it," philosophically remarked the wall paper.

"You're none of you as badly off as I am," said the furnace, "for, no matter where I go, I'm generally fired."—Baltimore American.

KING GUSTAF IS RECOVERING

No Complications Have Followed Recent Operation—For a Time, However, There Was Much Anxiety Among the People.

SWEDEN.

It was officially stated on Feb. 8th that King Gustaf who was operated on a few days ago for appendicitis, was progressing toward recovery as rapidly as possible. No complications have arisen from the surgery, the announcement of which in the morning papers took the capital and the entire country by surprise. Early in the day a crowd gathered in the vicinity of the capital eagerly awaiting news from within. For three days the king had suffered with pains which an early diagnosis seemed to indicate were due to catarrh of the stomach. On a more thorough examination, however, the physicians reached a conclusion that appendicitis had developed, necessitating an immediate operation. The royal family, several members of whom were spending the evening at a concert, were summoned to the palace and soon afterwards the operation was performed. The monarch, who was proclaimed king of Sweden on the death bed two years ago of King Oscar has endeared himself to his subjects by the intelligent and marked concern which he has manifested in all matters that appertain to their welfare. The official bulletin issued read: "Upon recovering from the effects of the anaesthetic the king suffered comparatively no discomfort. His majesty slept well without the use of sleeping potions. "There was much popular relief when this bulletin reached the public with its assurance that no bad effects had followed the operation. King Gustaf had enjoyed two hours of natural sleep during the forenoon and his general condition showed quite an improvement. For a time there was much anxiety among the people and they evinced a genuine interest in knowing every detail of the king's condition.

A Stockholm dispatch dated Feb 6 says: In an effort to check emigration from Sweden, King Gustaf has just approved a plan for a series of rural plays in Swedish theaters to awaken a more patriotic feeling among the people. The enterprise will be pushed with especial vigor at Gothenburg, where most emigrants bound for America embark. The king says that emigration has for years drained Sweden of a large proportion of its best and most enterprising blood.

Engineer J. G. Artberg started for a trip around the world the other day. Mr. Artberg will also make the long trip for business purposes for he is at the head of a great Japanese importing firm in Stockholm. The long journey goes through Siberia to China and Japan, thence to Siam, Java and Sydney, thence direct to South America to the exposition at Buenos Ayres so on to Chile, Mexico and North America. Mr. Artberg calculates to be absent about seven months.

Good old Queen Sofia continues to make donations to the charity institutions of Stockholm. On the late King Oscar's birthday, she donated 1,000 crowns to the Stockholm Protection society ordering that this sum of money be divided among seventy-five deserving families. On the same day she donated 500 crowns to poor women teachers of Stockholm. If ever there was a good and benign old queen it is Sofia.

Dr. Sven Hedin departed for Basil, Switzerland, a few days ago, where he will deliver a series of lectures on his trip into the heart of Asia. From thence he will journey to Rome, where he will lecture under the auspices of the Roman Geographical society.

NORWAY.

The Norwegian Storthing influenced by Socialism two years ago gave to every woman above twenty-five years and paying taxes the right to vote and to be voted for. The Socialists were sure that the women would vote for the "red" candidates. To their angry surprise at the recent election all the women, even those whose husbands, sweethearts and friends are Socialists, cast their vote for the conservative instead of for the radical and destructive men. One lone woman, a teacher, was elected to the storthing, but she, too, is on the right and not the left side of the house of deputies. The Socialists feel very sore about the ingratitude of the sex they wanted to liberate.

The illness of the aged Norwegian poet, dramatist and novelist, Bjornstjerne Bjornson arouses sympathy among the lovers of true literature all over the world. Bjornson is seventy-seven years old. He was born on Dec. 8, 1832. In his youth he took up journalism after leaving college and early turned his attention to the drama. He was director of the Bergen theater in the latter fifties, after which he resided for a time in Italy, Germany and Denmark. Returning to Norway, he took charge of the Christiania theater, which he directed for several years. He was in America in 1881 and 1882, lecturing in all the larger cities.

A barrel of whisky can cause all manner of trouble and came very near causing loss of life at a party in Sogn not long ago. It appears that a party of twenty persons had sent for a barrel of whisky to Denmark and also a barrel of beer. They had a party and the result of it was that a general fight ensued in which eight persons were injured, two of them seriously so that at times their lives were despaired of. Knives and axes were used freely.

Major H. L. Rustad, well known in military circles, and chief of the Third Military Division of the regular army died during the latter part of last month. He was very popular in military circles and enjoyed the respect of all those with whom he came in contact. He was born in 1848.

The Grisbadde affair cost Norway 939 crowns.

DENMARK.

That Iceland desires to sever her connections with Denmark is becoming more evident every day. They desire to be independent and have an official of their own, who practically corresponds to a minister of foreign affairs, who is working for Iceland's independence night and day. His name is Bjarni Jonsson, who recently has spent a month in Norway for the purpose of negotiating commercial agreements with that country without even a single reference to Denmark, whatsoever. He had also intended to go to Sweden in the same errand, but he had to return to his own country owing to pressing business there. There is one feature about this fight on the part of Iceland for her independence. The Danish people do not understand the Icelandic language and so what it written in the Icelandic newspapers, is as good as dead matter to the Danes. An interesting situation has developed and one thing is certain that the Icelanders mean business about becoming an independent nation and the Danes of course are equally determined not to let them go. Therefore some mighty interesting developments between the island dependency and Denmark may be looked for in the very near future.

According to the Danish statistical bureau for 1909 the exports for that year amount to not less than 400,000,000 crowns. The butter export has been increased by about two million pounds and the export of pork has been increased by about 20,000,000 crowns. The exports of meat, horses and live stock has been steadily increasing especially to Germany. Decorative furniture and Sloyd articles have been exported to the amount of at least 40,000,000 crowns. So it may be gleaned from this that Little Denmark is more than holding her own when it comes to exports.

Arrangements have been completed for a new cable between Norway and England. It will run from Egersund, Norway, to Peterhead, Scotland, and will be controlled by the governments. One result of the new line will be a reduction in cable tolls between the two countries of 2 cents a word, the new rate being placed at 4 cents.

MRS. LEDBETER ARRAIGNED

Woman Once Tried for Murder Again Indicted.

Mrs. Grace Ledbeter, recently acquitted of complicity in the murder of her husband, appeared in court at Mankato and was arraigned on an indictment charging murder in the second degree.

She was indicted as Grace L. Ledbeter, but she stated her true name was Emma Grace Ledbeter and she will be proceeded against hereafter under that name. She stated that she has no property or means with which to retain an attorney, nor any near relatives able to assist financially, and she asked the court to appoint a lawyer to defend her. Judge Quinn appointed C. L. Laurisch, who was one of her attorneys at the December trial.

The indictment charges that on May 4 last "Mrs. Ledbeter did, with instruments and weapons unknown to the grand jury, make an assault on her husband, Holland J. Ledbeter, and, willfully and feloniously cause his death."

CONVICT HEIR TO FORTUNE

Imprisoned Sailor Will Get Over Eighty Thousand Dollars.

Jackson McPherson, a salt water sailor who has for the past two years been on the Great Lakes and who was convicted of second degree murder in Duluth a few days ago for killing a shipmate, Otto Frey, on the ship North Lake last September, has announced that he has fallen heir to approximately $81,000.

He displayed letters in proof, together with a draft for £52 interest money on a part of his property. The money, according to McPherson and the letters, was left him by the late Thomas Smith of Edinburg, Scotland, an uncle of the convict.

McPherson says he will carry his case to the supreme court. He claims to have killed Frey in self-defense. McPherson is about thirty-five years old and unmarried.

ORGANIZATION OF FARMERS

Will Make War on Commission Men at Duluth.

The Producers' Co-Operative association is the name of an organization effected at Duluth at a meeting of delegates from the numerous farmers' clubs of St. Louis and adjoining counties. They purpose to develop a market at the Head of the Lakes for the products of that region. L. H. Bugbee of Wrenshall is president and E. A. Schulze of Duluth is treasurer of the association.

The association will at once employ a competent man to represent them in Duluth and Superior in opening up a market for the farmers of Northeastern Minnesota.

WERE MENACED BY FLAMES

School Children at Rochester Coolly March From Building.

Only the great presence of mind of the instructors in the Northrop school building at Rochester and the willingness of 160 children to obey the command given them prevented a panic when fire threatened the destruction of the building. That not a soul was injured seems a miracle.

The fire had gained considerable headway when discovered and by the time the alarm was given smoke and flames were in evidence in the hallways through which the children marched to safety, though without their outer clothing.

MANY PERSONS ARE INJURED

Passenger Train Is Derailed Near Walker.

The Minnesota and International northbound passenger train was derailed seven miles southeast of Walker. Six people were seriously injured. They are:

Charles Eichman, Alexandria; Miss Mitchell, Alexandria, of the Ernest Fischer theatrical company; Charles Burns, of the Ernest Fischer Theatrical company; Harry Lacour, Hibbing; Mrs. George Coppersmith, wife of the conductor of the passenger; unknown man, probably laborer, may die.

RECOVERS BUT $1 DAMAGES

Minneapolis Woman Asked $10,000 for Breach of Promise.

The jury in the $10,000 breach of promise suit of Miss Martha Harper of Minneapolis against Patrick McTighe, on trial at Mankato, brought in a sealed verdict finding in favor of the plaintiff and assessing her damages at $1. The woman, aged forty-seven, said McTighe, who is sixty-seven, courted her daily and told her he would marry her. The defendant denied he proposed marraige.

Spectacular Escape From Fire.

By means of a derrick used for handling building material in the next lot six men made a spectacular escape from the top floor when flames cut them off from the regular exits in the three-story building occupied by Schulze Bros. at Duluth, manufacturers and wholesale dealers in harness and saddlery.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

Governor Eberhart, in addressing the Political Equality club of St. Paul, gave his approval of the woman suffrage movement, saying that there was no reason why the women should not vote if they wanted to. He told the women frankly, however, that he did not propose to lead any militant movement just yet, and he did not think that a majority of the women cared for the ballot at the present time.

The largest mine stripping contract ever awarded on the Messaba range has just been received by Winston Bros. & Dear. The Rogers-Brown company, which owns the Susquehanna mine at Hibbing, has given a contract to strip that property. The contract calls for the moving of over 6,000,000 cubic yards of material. The work will occupy about six years.

Asserting that they are not getting a square deal on the price of milk about fifty dairymen of Ramsey, Hennepin, Washington and Dakota counties held a meeting at St. Paul and formed a temporary organization, which has for its principal object the procuring of more money by the producer for the milk he sells to consumers in the city.

Attorney General George T. Simpson has begun proceedings in the name of the state to enjoin the Great Northern railroad from transferring upon its books the shares of stock held by the late John S. Kennedy of New York to the heirs of the estate before the inheritance tax upon the estate is paid.

Pawnshops using the word "bank" in their signs as a lure to the stranger have fallen under the ban of the state superintendent of banks, J. B. Galarneault. Two such have been ordered to retire from business as banks and hereafter to advertise plainly as loan agents.

The reported purchase by Armour & Co. of a track of hardwood timber land near Hill City, this state, is expected to result in the removal ultimately of the Armour factories for the manufacture of pails and tubs from Ithaca and Marble, Mich., to the Minnesota location.

Two million acres of homestead land are yet unclaimed in Minnesota, according to George Welsh, commissioner of immigration. He is preparing a booklet which will show the location and description of these lands. The lands are largely in the northern counties.

St. Paul paid over $1,000,000 to insurance companies for fire protection during the year 1909 and got back over 90 per cent of it in payment for fire losses, according to compilations from annual reports made to Insurance Commissioner J. A. Hartigan.

The senate has passed a bill authorizing a bridge across the Mississippi at Hill City, Aitkin county, and appropriating $25,000 for a new fish cultural station in Northern Minnesota.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Irvine Cline, convicted at Minneapolis of "selling" Carrie Foster, his niece, into white slavery, was sentenced to seven years at Stillwater by Judge Hale in the Hennepin county district court. In passing sentence the jurist declared that he intended the sentence to be "an example to the public and a stop toward the extinction of the white slave traffic."

The mangled body of Gus Sneder was found on the tracks of the St. Paul road midway between the Twin Cities. Sneder was an employe of the Dana Warehouse company and it is supposed that he was going to work in the dusk of the early morning when he was hit by an engine.

Carl Bruder, a farmer living near Mendota, was struck by a St. Paul train near his home, receiving injuries which proved fatal a few hours later. He was rushed to Minneapolis, where the police ambulance met the train. On the dash for St. Barnabas hospital the man expired.

Fred Noyes, proprietor of the Brunswick cafe at Minneapolis, was held up by masked men at his place of business, robbed of a $50 diamond pin and forced to enter the cafe refrigerator. He was not rescued till two hours after, when nearly frozen to death.

Hattie Koetnick, aged twenty-two, of Minneapolis, was held up and robbed by a man while crossing a bridge. The robber accosted her with a leveled revolver and compelled her to hand over a gold locket and chain and a diamond ring valued at $100.

The final report of the accountants who recently looked over the books of the city of East Grand Forks has been filed and it shows that the actual shortage under the regime of Recorder C. M. Zimmerman is $4,917.78.

A cablegram received at Hastings from Shanghai announces the death of James R. Hull, son of Mrs. Lou R. Hull of Hastings. He did newspaper work in the Philippines after the Spanish-American war and for several years past has been correspondent in China. Prior to going to the Philippines he was for a time employed on Minneapolis newspapers.

Robert Willis, aged fifty, of Minneapolis, fell from a city garbage wagon he was driving with a violent coughing spell. When picked up he was dead. Death was due to hemorrhage.

GOOD YEAR FOR RAILROADS

Gross Earnings in Minnesota in 1909 Show Big Increase.

"The gross earnings of the railroads for 1909 will amount to over $500,000 more than in 1908," said State Auditor Iverson.

"There is an increase of nearly 15 per cent shown in all the reports at hand, in addition to the phenomenal advance in the business of the two iron range roads," he said. "Of these roads, the Duluth, Missabe and Northern jumped from $328,971 to $495,866 and the Duluth and Iron Range from $232,118 to $346,231.

"This condition is indicative of the great growth of the state and shows that affairs during the year were decidedly favorable to the transportation companies."

TWO SCORE INJURED IN CRASH

Three Bobsleds In Collision at St. Cloud.

Nearly forty persons suffered injuries in the collision of three bobsleds on Remer hill at St. Cloud and several are in a serious condition.

Mrs. F. Marchant suffered a compound fracture of the thigh. Mrs. E. M. Larsen's shoulder was broken. A girl named Wheeler was severely bruised and her leg was broken.

A sled containing sixteen coasters went down Remer hill, from the bottom of which rises another hill. Up the latter incline the sled flew and, reversed in its course, descended to the bottom. When it reached the base of the hill it was struck by another sled loaded with merrymakers. Immediately behind the latter vehicle came another and the occupants of all three were hurled against one another into snowdrifts and upon the frozen slide. Men, women and children were among the victims of the accident.

BOOKER HELD RESPONSIBLE

Duluth Man Accused of Killing His Stepfather.

A coroner's jury at Duluth has held George Booker, a Zenith City teamster, responsible for the death of his stepfather, Charles Clark, and Booker was served with a warrant charging him with first degree murder. The coroner's jury has been probing the mystery surrounding the death of Clark for several days, with the result stated.

Booker and Clark hauled a load of machinery to French River recently. The same evening Booker hauled the dead body of his stepfather to Duluth.

Booker said that Clark had been taken suddenly ill and had died on the road. The autopsy disclosed that Clark had several broken ribs and one penetrated the lungs. This led to the coroner's acting and the arrest of Booker, who is charged with having caused his stepfather's death.

ARRESTED BY THE POLICE

Armed Italian Who Insisted on Seeing Governor Eberhart.

Michaelangelo Scavo of St. Paul, who acquired notoriety by having his throat cut last March, tried to force his way into Governor Eberhart's office at the capitol, the police charge, and was subdued only after a struggle with several guards.

Scavo, according to the story, insisted on seeing the governor to present a petition. When the guards blocked his way he produced a revolver and flourished it. A telephone message brought the police, who put the man into a patrol wagon and took his to the station.

Scavo was held by Judge Finehout under $200 bail. He is charged with carrying concealed weapons.

YOUNG ITALIAN WOUNDED

Shot and Stabbed in Saloon Fight in St. Paul.

Revolvers, dirks and razors were the weapons used by thirty Italians in a battle in a St. Paul saloon and when a sergeant of police and several patrolmen broke in the front door of the place they found a young Italian, Salvatore Brizzi, lying unconscious on the floor in a pool of blood. He had been shot through the neck and cut with knives across the hands.

When the police arrived a bartender in the saloon was holding a crowd of excited Italians lined up against the wall, their hands above their heads while he leveled a gun at them and threatened to shoot if they tried to escape. Three had already run from the scene of struggle.

A NEW ARSENICAL SPRAY.

In view of the fear which is felt by some orchardists as to the effects on their fruit trees resulting from a continued use of arsenate of lead as an insecticide in their spraying operations from an accumulation of arsenic in the soil and because of the fear felt in some other quarters as to the effect on the public health of an extensive spraying of trees and fruit with arsenic lead compounds, keen interest will be felt in the work of two French scientists, Vermorel and Dantony, who, with a view to overcoming the dangers referred to, have conducted extensive experiments the past three years in the use of ferrous arsenate as a substitute for arsenate of lead and with a remarkable degree of success. The solution which they have used is made as follows: Twenty ounces of arsenate of soda are dissolved in five gallons of water, making solution A. Twenty ounces of iron sulphate are also dissolved in five gallons of water, making solution B. Solution B is poured into solution A gradually, with continued stirring. Toward the end of the operation the mixture should be tested with potassium ferrocyanide test paper, and when this turns blue no more of solution B should be poured in, as it is important not to have too great an excess of the iron sulphate. The combination should then be diluted to fifty gallons. Besides ten ounces of ferrous arsenate, it will contain also some sulphate of soda and ferrous hydrate. When in contact with the air the ferrous arsenate turns greenish, while in contact with the air the ferrous hydrate turns to ferric hydrate, which is the best antidote against arsenical poisoning. The general color of the spray is a dirty green and cannot be mistaken for any other product. The experimenters found the spray very adhesive; that when used twice as strong as the above prescription there was no burning of the foliage, while at half strength it had an effect as an insecticide equal to the usual formula of arsenate of lead. Moreover, the foliage of trees sprayed with the ferrous arsenate looked healthier and of a darker green than those treated with other sprays. Besides the advantages mentioned—adhesiveness, insecticide value, freedom from burning, a characteristic color and the presence of an antidote with the poison—would be the cheapness of the product, owing to the low cost of sulphate of iron as compared with acetate of lead.

THE LIME-SULPHUR SPRAY.

Last summer, when it was too late to apply it effectively, the writer had an inquiry from a Pennsylvania reader asking for the formula for making the lime-sulphur spray used in combating the San Jose scale, which had appeared in his orchard. For the benefit of this reader and any others who may have to fight this pest we give below the formula and how to prepare it. This spray should be applied to the trees while the buds are dormant, preferably during the months of February and March. To make fifty gallons of the spray mixture fifteen pounds of lime and fifteen pounds of sulphur are required. Many include fifteen pounds of salt, but recent experiments show that this adds no particular value. To prepare the mixture fresh stone lime should be slaked to a whitewash; then add the sulphur, which has been made into a paste by means of hot water. The mixture should then be stirred thoroughly and boiled for two hours, when enough hot water should be added to bring the whole mixture up to fifty gallons. Best results will be had if the spray is used while hot. To prevent a clogging of the spray nozzle by particles of lime the mixture should be strained through a twenty mesh brass strainer or two thicknesses of gunny sacking before being poured into the spray tank. The liquid should be applied to the trees under high pressure, so as to give a finely divided spray, and all parts of the trunk and limbs should be reached.

PRACTICAL CO-OPERATION.

Two Minnesota Holstein breeders hit upon a very sensible plan when in purchasing sires for their herds they did so with the agreement to exchange sires at the end of two years so as to prevent inbreeding. The plan works well with two breeders and would give just as satisfactory results and cover a much longer period if from four to six breeders were to co-operate in it, each buying a good sire and passing it on to his neighbor at the end of the time mentioned and in turn receiving one from his neighbor. In the older dairy sections of the country this plan is followed to quite an extent and with very satisfactory results, for it permits a sire to remain in a neighborhood long enough to demonstrate beyond question the type and capacity of his get.

If the hens should scratch the covering from the strawberry bed during the coming three or four weeks the bare spots should be recovered, as it is the late winter and early spring freezing that plays smash with the plants.

The feed for brood animals of whatever kind should be flesh and bone building rather than fat forming. On this account the corn should be reduced to a minimum and oats, bran, barley, peas, alfalfa and clover substituted.

It is a compliment to the native strength of soil that it will grow even weeds. It is just as great a compliment to the soil and a good deal greater one to the fellow who works it if it produces some more useful crop than weeds.

We saw a team of $400 horses the other day which had been driven to town all a-sweat and were allowed to stand without blanketing. The man who is compelled to buy such a team will concede that this kind of treatment is likely to prove a bit expensive.

There are quite a good many things to take into account in getting ready for the spraying campaign, and for this reason preparations should be made some time before the actual work is begun. Not only should the chemicals be on hand for the various solutions which are to be used, but the spray tank, hose, cutoff, nozzle, etc., should be carefully inspected.

The check habit is a mighty good habit to get into not only because it means that a fellow who uses a check book has money in the bank, but also that when a bill has been paid by check not only the stub, but the canceled check, serve as conclusive evidence that the account for which it was drawn has been paid. More men ought to have money in the bank, and more ought to use check books.

Some observations which have been made by the poultry department of the Maine Agricultural college show that eggs from hens kept in houses with curtain instead of tight board fronts are not only more fertile, but produce a larger per cent of strong chicks. This is attributed to the fact that with the curtain front the houses are better ventilated and result in a more vigorous physical condition on the part of the hens, which accounts for eggs of greater vitality.

Every orchard owner who would attain best results in the management of his trees should spray them at the proper season for the several pests which may affect them, and to do this most effectively he should have in his possession the spraying calendar issued by his state experiment station. This not only tells when to spray and how, but gives the formulas for the spray mixtures which should be used for the several kinds of fruit trees and shrubs and how to prepare them. Such bulletins are suited to the seasonal needs of the states in which they are published.

Not infrequently the cow in the herd that gives the largest flow of milk may be the most unprofitable, due to her large consumption of food and the low per cent of butter fat in her milk. Cows vary from 2.75 to 6 per cent in butter fat showing, and the only accurate way of telling where on the scale they belong is to apply the Babcock or butter fat test. It may be a bit hard to act on the results of the test and dispose of animals that are not paying for their keep previously supposed to be money makers, but it is the only course to follow if a fellow is in the dairy business for the money there is in it rather than for glory and health.

Perhaps no figures that have lately been published give a better idea of the ruthless destruction of our timber resources as a country than the statistics of the cut of white pine and included species for the year 1908. That year the cut was less by 847,737,000 feet than that of the preceding season, or a decrease of 20.2 per cent. In 1908 Minnesota, which for several years past has led in white pine production, produced 448,512,000 feet less than in 1907. Wisconsin ranked second in the cut of white pine, while Michigan, which in years gone by used to lead all states, was outranked by three New England states which were stripped years ago, but are now coming to the front with a second growth of pine.

The Kansas experiment station recently concluded some experiments with a view to determining the cost of egg production. Two pens of fowls were taken, one of White Plymouth Rocks and the other of White Leghorns. Tab was kept on the hens between Feb. 1 and Oct. 1, 1909. The best two hens in its first pen laid 181 and 174 eggs each respectively, the average of the whole pen being 143 eggs per hen. The total cost of feed for this pen was $8.81, receipts from eggs sold $25.56, leaving a profit over cost of feed of $17.75, or about $1.61 per hen for the eight months. While the best hen in the pen of White Leghorns made a record of only 172 eggs, the average of the whole pen was 132 eggs. In the case of the Leghorns the cost of the feed was about a cent less per month, while the net profit on eggs above cost of feed was $1.81 per hen.

SOLD BONDS TO J. DUFFY

Red Lake Falls Financier Makes a Good Deal With the County.

Purchases Bonds of County from the County Commissioners Last Week.

The board of county commissioners last week sold the bonds of Red Lake county to the amount of $37,000 for the purpose of building a court house—that is three of them did. There were quite a number of bond houses represented in the bidding, and, according to one gentleman, who represented a bond company, it was about the rankest piece of work he had seen in a long time and he questioned whether or not loan companies would care much for the bonds of Red Lake county in the future, if the business of the county was to be conducted as the county commissioners are doing it at the present time.

The bonds were awarded to John A. Duffy of the Merchants' State Bank of Red Lake Falls, and we are going to let our readers judge as to whether or not Mr. Duffy had in the lowest bid. When the sealed bids were opened, Mr. Duffy offered to take the bonds at 5½ per cent and give a premium of $1,000. This was about the highest bid received and so Mr. Duffy was allowed to lower his bid to 5 per cent and a premium of $1,800 and this bid was accepted. A rival bank in Red Lake Falls had in an even lower bid than that of Mr. Duffy, but the lowest bid was that of the N. W. Harris Trust company, of Chicago, one of the biggest bond companies in America. This company offered to take the bonds at 4½ per cent and pay a premium of $1,285. It will thus be seen that while Mr. Duffy offered a premium of $515 more than the Chicago firm, the difference between 5 per cent and 4½ per cent for a period of twenty years—the length of time for which the bonds are issued—on $37,000 amounts to $3,700, and thus the Chicago firm was really $3,185 lower than Mr. Duffy. It don't take many deals of this kind to increase the taxes of Red Lake county, and that is the kind of deals Red Lake county is making at about every meeting of the county commissioners.

Dr. Mellby was down to Crookston last week attending the meeting of the St. Olaf's club.

Wants Arctander Investigated.

Mr. R. A. Tanner comes out in the Halstad Journal and excuses John W. Arctander for his failure to make the famous "Goldship" a success. The article is well written and comes mighty near making the impression that it is the work of Artander himself. This R. A. Tanner whoever he may be, gives several reasons why Arctander's venture was a failure, and tries to convey the idea that Arctander was entirely sincere and himself had faith in the undertaking. All who heard him speak must certainly know better, as at every moment he held forth the absolute safety of his scheme. Then, why should this article appear in the above named paper? Because he feared investigation. Arctander SHOULD BE INVESTIGATED. If the good people of Halstad, and the Red River Valley where Arctander made his biggest stakes, did the right thing, they would take the above mentioned article as an insult and institute an investigation of the whole business and settle forever what appears to be a controversy. The reason why no one takes the lead in this matter is that only the losers are interested, and they do not wish publicity. They think that by keeping quiet, nobody will know that they were one of the suckers, and therefore, their honor preserved. But they should regard their duty to their fellow men more than honor and furthermore, it would not be a disgrace to come right out in the open and admit their loss. Again we want to urge the people of this valley to come together and send a representative to Colorado and ascertain the exact situation. It would be fair to both Arctander and to yourself.—Crookston Press.

Lots of Men at Work.

About 1,000 men are now at work on the new Soo line from Thief River Falls to Duluth in the country north of Bagley. Most of the grading of the new road will be completed early in the spring and it is said to be the intention of the Soo to start laying track from both ends and thereby complete the line at an early date.

Roseau to Exhibit.

The representatives of the several commercial clubs of Roseau county and the Roseau county exhibit club met at Badger last week to take action toward placing a grain exhibit at the conservation congress, which is to be held at St. Paul, March 16, 17 and 18, and for which space has been allotted by the department of immigration. The co-operation of farmers, who can furnish samples of grain is requested. Samples of good corn and grass seeds is desired also.

Farmers' Attention.

I have opened up a feed mill in building just west of the creamery and will be prepared to grind feed on three days each week—Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Elias M. Erickson. (2t.)

Minnesotians do not think that they have money to burn, but last year they burned $4,000,000 worth of property, according to the insurance commissioner. Most of the cases were due to carelessness. The most frequent causes were defective electrical wiring, overheated stoves and furnaces, and carelessness in the use of gasoline.

Statistics compiled by the State Immigration Commissioner show that the average value of farm crops per acre raised annually in Minnesota is 50 per cent, of the present value of the land, while in Iowa the average is 16 per cent, and in Illinois less than 10 per cent. No wonder the farmers in those states are selling their $150 an acre land and are seeking farms in this section. Five times as much can be made on an investment in our lands than in Illinois.

To Take a Trip West.

Geo. L. Austin, of St. Hilaire, the representative of the Hazelwood Produce Co. of Spokane, who buys butter, eggs, etc., in carload lots from this section, two cars a week being about the average, will leave about March 1 for a month's visit west, spending most of his time with the company officials at Spokane. This is his first trip west, though the officials of the Hazelwood Co. have been here several times, one remaining here two weeks last fall, and looks to the Red River valley for still more butter, etc., this year than was bought by Mr. Austin last year, which was his first with that concern. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Austin, who is also making her first trip west.

About Seed Potatoes.

The State Agricultural Experiment Station in its bulletin on potatoes says: Almost every variety of potatoes tested at the station have run down in yielding power very rapidly, where the same seed has been used from year to year.

The practice of saving the small potatoes for planting and eating or selling the best ones, contributes much to the running out of seed stock. The small potatoes are more likely to have all the weaknesses and degenerate qualities of a variety and less of the good qualities, and these weaknesses are probably intensified when small potatoes are used year after year.

Another class of potatoes to avoid is the long drawn out potatoes, especially the slender tapering ones. They are the degenerating forms of the better potatoes.

Experience has proved that in growing potatoes much may be gained from changing the seed. Large growers find it profitable, because of the increased yield.

Peat in Minnesota.

This state has ten times as much peat as Ireland and Scotland combined, yet for a century these two countries in Europe have been famous the world over for their deposits of peat. One of the features of the coming Conservation and Agricultural Development Congress in St. Paul, will be an address by Max Toltz, a consulting engineer, who will speak on "Peat an Inexhaustible Fuel Resource of Minnesota". This address will be given on the evening of March 16th the first day of the congress, and will alone be worth a trip to St. Paul. Mr. Toltz will not only tell where this peat is, but how to get it out and utilize it for fuel. The saving to farmers will be tremenduous when this material is used as lignite coal is used in North Dakota and Montana.

A Safeguard to Children.

"Our two children of six and eight years have been since infancy subject to colds and croup. About three years ago I started to use Foley's Honey & Tar, and it has never failed to prevent and cure these troubles. It is the only medicine I can get the children to take without a row." The above from W. C. Ornstein, Green Bay, Wis., duplicates the experience of thousands of other users of Foley's Honey and Tar. Sold by all druggists.

Believes in This Section.

Jacob Anderson, one of the pioneer settlers up near Jelle and, who owns about as fine a farm as there is in Beltrami county, was in the city last week attending to some business matters. Mr. Anderson is a firm believer in the future of that section and says that when the ditches are completed it will be the garden spot of the state. He feels sure that a railroad will run through that section inside of a year or so.

A remarkable accident occured last week at Herman, near Fergus Falls. Herman Becholt, a boy of thirteen, living near there, picked up a dynamite cartridge which some men had carelessly left near a big ditching machine. He took it into the house and he and his younger sister began to examine it. He finally began picking it with a pin, with the result that the cap exploded, tearing the boy's left hand into shreds and fracturing the bones of the hand. The metallic portion of the cap hit the boy in the breast, and but for the fact that it struck a heavy silver watch he was carrying, it would have killed him. Doctors amputated the injured hand.

OPENING TO BE IN MARCH

Thief River Falls' Large Auditorum to Be Opened Week of March 28.

Committee Making Arrangements to Have a First Class Attraction.

It is now positively announced that the opening of Thief River Falls' magnificent new auditorium will be sometime during the week commencing Monday, March 28. The committee having charge of securing a first class attraction for the opening night, are in correspondence with C. P. Walker, the Winnipeg theatrical manager, and he has guaranteed to furnish a first class attraction.

The auditorum is without doubt the finest in the entire northwest, and Fargo or Grand Forks will have nothing that will compare favorably. It's cost is in the neighborhood of $45,000 and will have a seating capacity of nearly 1,500.

The contractors are still busy at work completing the building, but they are positive that everything on the first floor will be completed by the 28th.

Just what the price of admission is to be on the opening night is not stated, and the committee will not know until the attraction has been booked.

The Best Investment on Earth is the Earth.

Buy a little farm where you can raise all kinds of vegetables, can keep a cow, pigs, raise chickens, etc. I own and will sell some of the big lots in Fairfield addition, close to the city line and adjoining the Central School Dist. Prices are low and payments easy. Situated on LaBree and Horace avenues. Herman Berndt, Route 2, City.

"As much can be raised on Minnesota land purchasable at $22 per acre as on Illinois property valued at $200 per acre", said I. B. Gault of Oxford, Ill. Mr. Gault has bought two large farms in Becker county and will go into the dairy business extensively. He has sold his farms in Illinois.

A bill has been introduced in congress for the establishment of a school in Northern Minnesota for Chippewa Indians. It is to cost $150,000, and the Indians will have the right to locate the school at any place they may select.

Charles E. Boughton, the Red Lake Falls Attorney, was in the city last Saturday attending to business matters.

Plenty of Government Land.

Gov. Eberhart calls attention to the fact that there is much government land in Minnesota subject to homestead entry. In his proclamation calling Conservation Congress to meet at St. Paul, Mar. 16-19, the governor says this land will be settled if the citizens of Minnesota will help state wide movement for development. The immigration commission gives the following figures in acres for various counties:

Koochiching, 367,700.
Lake, 82,000.
Cook, 75,000.
St. Louis, 122,000.
Atkin, 1,800.
Cass, 262,000
Itasca, 2,400.
Kittson, 9,344.
Red Lake, 3,928.
Roseau, 247,000.

With others scattering, making a total of 1,550,000 acres.

Candidate for Congress Here.

Henry O. Bjorge, who is a candidate for the Republican nomination for congressman in this district in opposition to Congressman Steenerson, spent last Saturday in the city. Few people here know of Mr. Bjorge's visit, and he called upon only one or two personal friends.

A Successful Meeting.

Daniel Shaw, D. P. O'Neill, Math. Barzen and A. H. Fasel, who were over to Bemidji last week attending the Northern Minnesota Development convention, returned last Saturday. They report that the meeting was a success in every way and the attendance was large. Crookston was selected as the next meeting place of the association.

Mr. E. A. Kelley, Belvidere, Ill., writes us: "I am an ex-engineer with 22 years active service to my credit. About three years ago my kidneys were affected so that I had to give up my engine. First I was troubled with severe, aching pain over the hips. Then followed inflammation of the bladder, and specks appeared before my eyes. A sample of Foley's Kidney Pills that I tried, so benefited me that I bought more, I continued to take them until now I can safely testify, they have made me a sound and well man". NORDENSKIOLD IS BACK AGAIN Explorer Has Returned to Stockholm from His Fourth Expedition to South America—Encountered Many Indians.

SWEDEN.

Erland Nordenskiold returned to Stockholm during the latter part of last month after completing his fourth exploration expedition to South America. His journey has this time been as good as through altogether unknown regions between Bolivia and Brazil. After leaving the Brazilian railway Nordenskiold with two companions, a young sergeant by the name of Anderson and Carl Moberg, rode not less than 1,000 miles into the interior on horseback. They afterwards continued their journey by canoe for 500 miles, traveling on rivers where the scenery was at times wonderfully beautiful and again exceedingly desolate. They encountered many Indian tribes, many of whom had never seen white persons before. Their expedition lasted fully two years and Mr. Nordenskiold, who was the leader of the expediton and his two companions, have brought with them many collections of great archaeological interest. Nordenskiold will give a series of lectures in Sweden, Denmark and possibly Norway and England.

Count Birger Morner, who is at present traveling in Australia warns in a letter to a Stockhlom paper, his countrymen from coming to Australia. He states that the Swedes who have emigrated to Austrialia and all who are there have great difficulty in making even a living and some of them that he found in the country districts and towns, were on the point of starvation. He urges Swedes to stay away from Australia if they do not want to starve to death. Mr. Morner is a Swedish count, who has written a number of novels and has traveled extensively. He is in Australia at present for the purpose of gathering material for a new book that he intends to write upon his return to Sweden.

The result of the investigations showing that the Swedish government had been defrauded by private companies selling lubricating oil to the navy, will be that the government will establish an oil factory of its own in Karlkrona. The new establishment will only cost about 12,000 crowns and that's a great deal cheaper than being defrauded out of about 75,000 crowns a year, which was the case last year. This time the government proposes not to run any risks and will therefore have a factory of its own under the supervision of its own men.

Gradually things are beginning to pick up a trifle after the big strike, but it all works slowly. Wages are not going to increase very rapidly although there is a sign of it so far as the railroads are concerned. The scale of wages of men employed has lately been having an upward tendency, but after the wages of railway employees have been increased, there will be no free passes. So therefore the increase so far as the employees are concerned, will not amount to much.

At present there are two Swedish Americans in Stockholm on a visit who are exceedingly prominent in mining circles in Alaska. They are Messrs. Johnson and Lindblom, both of whom are large stockholders in the Pioneer Mining Co. of Nome, Alaska. They have been visiting old friends in Stockholm and the papers have been advertising them very generously.

It is learned from good authority that Sweden last year spent on lotteries not less than 40,000,000 crowns. This is certainly a surprisingly large sum of money to be expended in this manner, but it must be taken into consideration that in Sweden lotteries are legal.

During the year of 1909, official figures show that money orders amounting to not less than 12,461,081 crowns were received from the U. S. Judging from this it would seem that Swedish Americans as a rule are pretty loyal to the home folks.

Professor Borjesson's health has again become seriously impaired and his most intimate friends have grave fears that he will never recover sufficiently to be about his duties.

From the province of Blekinge alone last year there were 499 persons who emigrated to foreign lands. Nearly all of them came to America.

The value of real estate and personal property in Sweden at the end of last year amounted to 907,852,492 crowns.

According to recent dispatches King Gustaf stood the operation splendidly and is now on the road to recovery.

NORWAY.

Owing to the storthing's resolutions passed relative to the tax on liquor, the import of liquors has been steadily increasing. On one single steamer from Russia the other day there arrived a cargo of liquor for which a tax of not less than 500,000 crowns will be paid. Formerly Norway used to export liquor to Russia and Germany. Now Norway is importing liquor from Russia.

The Norwegian Women's Temperance Union in Christiania has issued an appeal to the Norwegian people for funds with which to erect a home for women hopelessly addicted to the use of alcohol. Such a home the women maintain will be organized and maintained on christian principles and the best of medical care will also be given the patients.

Careful estimates show that the value of the merchant marine of Norway is about $85,000,000. It is growing from year to year, but not so fast as that of some of the competitors. As late as 1906, the merchant marine of Norway ranked as number three among nations, but since that time that dropped to sixth place.

The export of fish, such as herring and mackerel to America from Norway seems to be steadily increasing. Last year there was shipped from Stavanger alone herring and mackerel to the amount of 1,200,000. In this figure is also included $712,000 worth of sardines.

King Haakon's speech at the opening of the storthing contained much of interest and importance and was listened to intently throughout. The king made a decidedly favorable impression and the many recommendations presented by him were sound in character.

An international syndicate contemplates the erection of a large department store in Christiania, but the Christiania papers are against the proposition claiming that they do not wish "a department store for Norwegian money."

The old Norwegian Ministers hotel in Stockholm will be torn down in the near future. Whether the Norwegian storthing will decide to erect a new hotel for Norway's official representatives in Stockholm is a matter which is still undecided.

The funeral of Colonel Herman Lovenskiold was held in Christiania Jan. 21. He was born in 1838 and was one of the principal court figures in the Norwegian capital during the reign of King Oscar.

A weekly paper will be published in Bergen in the near future. It will be known as "Fiskets Gang" and will receive financial backing from the Bergen Fisheries association.

The Nordviske Coffee Co., will move from Fredriksstad to Christiania. The company pays duties on imported coffees amounting to 100,000 crowns annually.

A French syndicate has purchased all the factories in Stavanger manufacturing hermetically sealed utensils of all sorts. The new syndicate will employ about 500 men.

Bergen's new theater will cost when everything is completed about 667,000 crowns. It is one of the finest theaters in the country.

The Munkholem walls are to undergo thorough repair in the near future. The amount expended will be about $5,000.

The Kristiandsunds Saving bank celebrated its seventy-fifth anniversary jubilee Jan. 29. There were about 150 guests present.

Professor Hans Egeser has been appointed professor of Mechanics at the Technical Institute in Christiania.

DENMARK.

The funeral of Emma Thomsen, the renowned actress, who has appeared for many years at the Royal Opera was held Jan 31 in Holmen's church in the presence of a large number of sympathizing friends. The funeral was held in the evening and the old church had been beautifully illuminated for the occasion. The floral tributes were the largest that have ever been seen at a public funeral in Copenhagen. The king and queen sent a beautiful wreath and there were floral contributions from Princess Dagmar, Prince Gustav, the Royal Opera directors and a large number of theatrical societies from various parts of the country. Hundreds of women admirers were present who literally fought their way into the church which at last had to close its doors to the crowds. Rev. Emeritus Lindemann was the officiating minister Members of the royal family attended the funeral.

The most successful aviator, in fact the only one who has made any successful attempt with a flying machine in Denmark is R. Svensen, who last month made an aerial trip from Amaber park. He journeyed two miles and kept his machine in the air for 17 minutes and 50 seconds. During the entire experiment he had his machine under perfect control and had no trouble in directing any way that he chose.

The signal station at Skagen has again been opened. That its service is well needed can be gleaned from the fact that 3,000 steamers pass Skagen annually, besides any number of sailing craft.

The Danish charity stamp, which was placed in the market during the holidays netted 105,570 crowns. All this money will go to Danish Charity institutions.

By April 1912, the meter system will have been introduced in Denmark, but before that time it will be used in many of the various branches of industry.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

The steel steamship Yucatan of the Alaska Steamship company, bound from Valdez to Seattle with sixty-five passengers, struck an iceberg in Icy strait and sank eight minutes later in six fathoms of water. There was no loss of life.

Five hundred persons attending a small theater at Patton, Pa., were precipitated into the basement of the building when the floor collapsed during a fire and one person was killed and a number seriously injured.

A head on collision between north and southbound passenger trains occurred on the Georgia Southern railroad near Macon, Ga. Five persons were instantly killed and forty injured.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

The slow progress being made by congress in disposing of the important measures which the president has specially urged is causing him extreme dissatisfaction and he is taking measures to let that fact be known. He was called upon at the White House, presumably at his own request, by several legislators in charge of the various measures and he urged upon them the necessity for prompt action.

Data recently collected by the geological survey indicated that the public lands in Wyoming and Montana contained valuable deposits of coal and to determine the question the secretary of the interior has withdrawn from coal entry 1,208,206 acres in the former state and 860,286 in the latter pending a detailed field examination.

The announcement from the White House that President Taft had by his own motion cut down to four the number of administration measures he would demand at the present session of congress is received by Republican leaders with unmixed feelings of relief.

Major General William H. Carter, U. S. A., has been detailed by the president as a member of the general staff corps, to take the place of Brigadier General William W. Witherspoon, who is at the head of the army war college.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

One man killed and three wounded is the result of an attack on the jail at Cairo, Ill., by a mob which tried to lynch two negroes who were arrested for snatching two purses from women. When the attack was made Sheriff Nellis ordered his deputies to fire and the effect of the volley cooled the ardor of the mob.

At Birmingham, Ala., George Stephens, son of a prominent mine owner, shot and killed three of his little children, shot and fatally wounded their colored nurse and then turned the pistol on himself, ending his own life.

The safe of the Citizens' bank of Chatsworth, Ill., was looted of $10,000 in cash by five masked men. The robbers escaped after binding and gagging a night watchman and a citizen who attempted to interfere.

ORGANIZATION IS PERFECTED

Northern Minnesota Development Association Formed.

The first session of the Northern Minnesota Development association, which was held at Bemidji, adjourned after a two days' session which, from the viewpoint of enthusiasm and definiteness of action, will be remembered as one of the most successful ever held in the state.

As stated in the closing minutes of the session by Hon. P. E. Dowling of Eveleth a movement had been inaugurated which was to create a new empire and a set of resolutions had been adopted which would honor any political party which would adopt them.

A strong plank in favor of a reapportionment of the state, which would give an equal and fair representation to every section of the commonwealth, was first passed with the greatest enthusiasm.

Permanent organization was effected by the election of the following officers:

H. J. Maxfield, Wadena, president; W. R. MacKenzie, Bemidji, secretary; W. J. Smith, Eveleth, treasurer.

Crookston was the unanimous choice for the next convention, which will be held next December.

CASE UP TO SUPREME COURT

Woman Objects to Second Trial on Murder Charge.

Mrs. Grace Ledbeter, on trial at Mankato, has withdrawn her plea of not guilty to the indictment charging her with murder in the second degree and entered a special plea to the effect that she was not guilty, that she had already been tried and acquitted, that A. R. Pfau, Jr., one of her attorneys, was a son of the trial judge, A. R. Pfau, Sr., and that no objection was made by the opposing attorneys or any one else to Judge Pfau presiding at the trial, nor to A. R. Pfau, Jr., acting as one of the attorneys for the defendant at the trial and no motion for a change of venue or another judge was made.

H. L. Schmitt, special assistant county attorney, interposed a demurrer to the special plea for several reasons, one being it appeared upon the face of the plea and the records of the court that Judge Pfau was legally disqualified from sitting at the trial and that all of the proceedings were absolutely void and of no effect for want of jurisdiction. Judge Quinn sustained the demurrer and agreed to certify the proceedings to the supreme court.

SAYLOR CHOSEN PRESIDENT

Buffalo Man Is Head of Minnesota Editorial Association.

With the election of H. S. Saylor of the Buffalo (Minn.) Journal as its president the forty-fourth annual meeting of the Minnesota State Editorial association at Minneapolis came to a close. Members report that the meeting was one of the most successful in the career of the organization and it is doubtful if ever a session was held when political issues were more ardently discussed.

Other officers elected were: First vice president, S. Y. Gordon, Browns Valley Tribune; second vice president, F. E. Hadley, Winnebago City Enterprise; third vice president, W. F. Mahler, Springfield Advance; secretary, Charles P. Stine, St. Paul; treasurer, David Ramaley, St. Paul.

The committee on resolutions ignored a request in the form of a resolution passed by the body asking their committee to embody in their report a request that the governor call a special session of the legislature to consider the proposed constitutional amendment to provide a tax for good roads.

WOMAN DROPS DEAD AT FIRE

Several Other Occupants of Apartments Overcome by Smoke.

One woman dropped dead with heart failure and several occupants of the Holland flats at St. Paul were overcome by smoke when fire burst from the basement of the building occupied by the Western Art company and quickly spread into the apartments.

Miss Marie Martinke, fifty years of age, proprietress of a millinery store, who lived in the rear of her place of business, was aroused from sleep and told that her life was in jeopardy. She hurried scantily clad into the street, saw the flames and smoke and, uttering a shriek, ran back into the store.

Firemen a few minutes later found her lying on the floor in an unconscious condition. They carried her to the apartments of Mrs. Thomas L. Bird in the Holland apartments, where she died a short time afterwards.

Teamster Crushed to Death.

Peter Tanscheck, aged forty-five, teamster for the Villaume Box and Lumber company at St. Paul, was instantly killed while at work. He was loading a wagon with lumber from a car. He got under the wagon to adjust a pin, joining two parts of the vehicle. The horses started and the wagon came apart, the load falling on Tanscheck.

No Congestion of Freight.

The state railroad and warehouse commission has found no freight congestion as a result of the switchmen's strike. The commission has reported to Governor Eberhart on the investigation which it has just completed. While the investigation covered the entire state it deals specifically with St. Paul and Minneapolis.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

UPHELD BY HIGHEST COURT

Minnesota's Gross Earnings Tax Constitutional.

Minnesota won a complete victory over the Great Northern and Chicago Great Western Railway companies when the supreme court of the United States affirmed the decision of the state court holding that the railroads were liable to a 4 per cent gross earnings tax.

The law increasing the gross earnings tax on all railroads in the state to 4 per cent was passed by the state legislature in 1904 and was immediately made the object of an attack by the Great Northern and Chicago Great Western railways.

The companies contended that the charters under which they were operating were contracts between the state and the railroads by which the taxes were fixed at a lower rate.

Attorney General George T. Simpson, in discussing the decision, said: "This victory means that the state becomes possessed of $800,000 back taxes, as well as being assured an annual additional revenue of $200,000."

FOR LOWER EXPRESS RATES

Attorney General Simpson Files Complaint Against Carriers.

Attorney General George T. Simpson has filed a complaint with the railroad and warehouse commission charging the express companies of the state with demanding extortionate and unreasonable rates.

This is the first move in the fight of Minnesota against the express tariff now in effect. The complaint follows a preliminary examination by the railroad commissioners. This fight will equal in importance, it is said, the freight rate probe now in progress.

"This will be the first exhaustive investigation of the express rates ever made in the United States," said Mr. Simpson. "It will bear to the express companies the same relation the rate inquiry bears to the railroads."

The initial inquiry is directed against the Wells-Fargo Express company. The decision to do this was arrived at in a conference some time ago in New York. The Wells-Fargo company was picked because it has the largest mileage in the state.

The complaint against the Wells-Fargo company alleges that its rates are unequal, unreasonable, discriminatory and extortionate and that 75 per cent of each rate would be reasonable; that prior to Oct. 15, 1909, the company adopted a certain graduate scale and tariff known as "official express classification No. 19," and is now using this rate and that each rate in that schedule is extortionate.

The petition asks that the commission establish a reasonable schedule of rates. The complaints against the other companies are similar.

DARING ST. PAUL ROBBERY

Two Men Hold Up Cashier of Fashionable Cafe.

Stanley Colburn, cashier of Carling's Uptown cafe at St. Paul, was held up by two men, who robbed the cash drawer of $300 and made their escape after shooting at Clarence Thompson, the negro doortender of the place, and firing seven shots at men on the street who tried to stop them. There were thirty or more after theater parties in the place at the time of the robbery.

The two men went into Carling's place several hours before the holdup. They were attired in ultra full dress wearing military top coats, and ordered lavishly, drinking several bottles of wine with their supper. Both telephoned from the desk a couple of times, thus making themselves thoroughly familiar with the lay of the land. They awaited the most opportune moment for their play, when the several parties were engrossed in conversation and the cashier was alone.

CRACK TRAIN IS DERAILED

One Man Killed and Scores of Persons Narrowly Escape Death.

John Willis, baggageman, was killed and scores of passengers had a narrow escape from death or serious injury as by miracle when the Pioneer limited, the crack Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul train, was wrecked two miles east of Hastings.

The wreck was caused by a broken rail and six cars, including the baggage car and five sleepers, left the rails and went down a twelve-foot embankment. The baggage car turned over and over, but the sleepers remained upright.

This no doubt accounts for the small list of injured, as at the worst the passengers were scarcely thrown from their berths.

The accident happened about breakfast time and a majority of the Pullman passengers were in the diner, which remained on the track.

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

That the rivers of Minnesota are capable of producing 1,000,000 horse power; that the waters of this state if properly harnessed would produce the equivalent of 2,900,000 tons of coal in heat, and that this power could create electricity energy enough to maintain over 7,000,000 sixteen-candle-power electric lights, were some of the statements made to the members of the Traffic club at its annual banquet at the Merchants hotel at St. Paul by Colonel James H. Davidson, chairman of the waterways commission.

The Equitable Loan association of Minneapolis has filed its articles of incorporation with Secretary of State Schmahl. The organization is a novel one. It proposes to take the place of the so called "loan sharks" and furnish money to persons temporarily in need of funds. The plan of the company is to charge not more than the legal rate of interest, 10 per cent, instead of the 50 to 200 per cent usually charged by the salary or chattel loan companies.

A woman's suffrage club has been organized at Mankato by teachers and students of the state normal school, as a result of an address by Mrs. Agnes Whitney Savage of Minneapolis, who represented the State Woman's Suffrage association at the recent meeting of the Minnesota State Conference of Charities and Correction in Mankato.

Andrew French, state dairy and food commissioner, from incomplete returns to his office for 1909, estimates that the creameries of Minnesota paid to the farmers nearly $25,000,000 in twelve months. This is an increase of 16 per cent, although the butter output fell 1.4 per cent. Prices, however, advanced.

The thirty-sixth annual convention of the Y. M. C. A. of Minnesota was held at Duluth last week. There were 275 delegates in attendance, representing twenty-five of the Minnesota associations.

Governor Eberhart has announced the appointment of W. B. Douglas, former attorney general, as a member of the state forestry board, to succeed the late S. M. Owen.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Mark Christensen was discovered in a box car at Merriam Junction nearly dead from exposure and starvation. The man entered the car at Marshalltown, Ia., at least a week before he was found at Merriam Junction. Christensen was taken to Shakopee and placed in the poorhouse. His hands and feet are frozen and it is thought his feet will have to be amputated.

M. R. Dean, a trainman working in the railroad yards at Montevideo, was so seriously injured that he died three hours after the accident. He was switching cars on the track and in stepping from one track to another he did not notice a caboose backing up. He was thrown to the track, one leg cut off and one hip mangled.

Several young people in a coasting party received injuries at Hastings by the capsizing of a big bobsled. The most severely injured were Miss Alma M. Hanson of Hastings and Miss Lila Nelson of Etter, the former sustaining a fracture of the right hip and the latter a broken leg.

Travel over the Rochester-Winona branch of the Great Western road was delayed for twenty-four hours by the burning out of two spans of the bridge near Bear creek. The fire started from a defective fire box in the engine of an extra train.

Hiram Bockholter of Herman, thirteen years old, was seriously injured by a dynamite cartridge which exploded in his hand. He was picking it with a pin, which caused the explosion. The boy's hand was literally torn to shreds.

Fire which broke out in the general store of Schreiner Bros. & Moulton at Two Harbors destroyed the building and practically the entire contents. The loss on stock is $75,000 to $80,000 and on building $20,000.

Westbound passenger train No. 3 collided with two switch engines at Ortonville. The passengers were badly shaken up, but considered themselves fortunate in escaping injury.

D. P. Brende of Ortonville, this state, committed suicide by hanging in a hotel at Emerson, Man.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

George Washington Benedict, who was the first citizen of Sauk Rapids and the oldest newspaper man in Minnesota, died at his home in Sauk Rapids of old age and rheumatic complications. Mr. Benedict was born in Rochester, N. Y., on March 20, 1824, and was eighty-six years old. In 1854 he removed to Sauk Rapids and established the Frontiersman. Later he was connected with a number of other publications in different parts of the state.

Mrs. Hannah L. Winkley, wife of J. H. Winkley, is dead at Faribault at the age of eighty-four years, death resulting from old age. She was one of the oldest residents of this state, having lived here over fifty-four years, and was a member of the Minnesota Territorial Pioneers' association.

Elisha Flogel, eighty two years old, one of the state's oldest Masons, first superintendent of schools in Wabasha county, teacher for many years in the pioneer days in 1877 and later head of the Wabasha academy, is dead.

NEBULA HYPOTHESIS.

One of the Most Interesting Propositions of Science.

WHAT IT ACTUALLY MEANS.

That the Sun, Planets and All Matter Were Once a Vast Mass of Incandescent Gas All Jumbled Together in an Enormous Chaotic Cloud.

Everybody has heard the phrase, the nebula hypothesis, but what is it?

In a few words this is the meaning of "nebula hypothesis." That the sun, the planets and all that is in them were at one time in the inconceivably remote past a vast mass of chaotic, incandescent gas all jumbled together in an enormous nebula, or cloud.

To begin with, the first conception that science has dared to make, however, takes us one step further back. Without mentioning the origin of matter itself science conceives that in the beginning all matter was uniformly distributed throughout space—that there were no stars, no planets, no satellites, but that all space was filled with the matter we now have divided up into very fine particles some distance apart. The consistency of such material was perforce very thin indeed, much more rarefied than the highest vacuum we can obtain now by air pumps. From this state to the nebulous state the theory has a missing link, one that can only be satisfied by supposing divine command, for it assumes, in the words of Professor Todd, that "gradually centers of attraction formed and these centers pulled in toward themselves other particles. As a result of the inward falling of matter toward these centers, the collision of its particles and their friction upon each other the material masses grew hotter and hotter. Nebulae seeming to fill the entire heavens were formed—luminous fire mist, like the filmy objects still seen in the sky, though vaster and exceedingly numerous." This process is supposed to have gone on for countless ages, faster in some regions than in others. Many million nebulae were formed and set in rotation around their own axes. This happily can be explained by science. Whenever particles are attracted toward a center and are kept from falling directly to this center a whirlpool is formed, rotating in one direction. An example of this, though humble and not exactly analogous, is the rotation of water in a basin when the stopper is pulled out of the bottom. Gravity attracts the water immediately above the hole, which starts flowing out, thus leaving a space to be filled. The rest of the water rushes in from all sides to do this, and the whirlpool is the result.

Now each of these whirling nebulae became exceedingly hot, and each formed what is known as a star or sun, our sun being one. The earth and other planets had not then come into separate existence, of course, as it is supposed that they were thrown off later from the sun.

Our sun in its nebulous form and rotating swiftly on its axis gradually flattened at its poles on account of centrifugal motion. This phenomenon is entirely familiar to those who have seen a ball of clay on a potter's wheel gradually flatten. The motion was so swift and the mass so nebulous that the sun to be took the shape of a disk. As time went on the outer part became cool and somewhat rigid, while the inner part continued its cooling and contracting. Thus the inner part drew away from the outer, leaving a ring of matter whirling around on the outside. This breaking off of the ring is supposed to be hastened by the inability of the outside to keep up the swift motion of the central mass, both on account of the slight cohesion and of the centrifugal force. But this particular part of the argument has nothing to stand on if the first law of motion is true.

In the successive stages of the sun's contraction this process was repeated over and over again, until several rings were whirling around the central orb. They would necessarily be in the same plane. Now, these rings, not being uniform in mass or thickness, would each gradually accumulate toward the densest portion until they, too, would form a ball which would subsequently flatten, and if the substance continued nebulous and the ball was large enough they would also slough rings.

Of course the rings the sun discarded have become the planets, which, as required by the theory, are all very nearly in the same plane. The rings that the planets formed have become moons or satellites. So we are driven to conclude that our sun at one time filled all the space from his present position to the farthest planet in the solar system.

From this theory there is another thing that we have to believe, and that is that every star in the heavens has gone through this same process and has a family of planets sailing around it, just as our sun has. It would be impossible to see these planets, of course, for it is impossible to see a star, even with the greatest telescope, except as a mere point of light.

As regards the proving of this nebula hypothesis, of course it cannot be done. But everything points to its accuracy. Many nebulae are seen even now among the stars that seem to be going through the delayed process of world forming. Around one of the planets of our own solar system, Saturn, are three rings, which are probably destined in time to become moons, in the opinion of some scholars.—A. T. Hodge in New York Tribune.

Ten cents' worth of creosote will add more than a dozen years to the life of a twenty cent post. At these figures it pays to give the treatment.

White strawberries imported from the West Indies a number of years ago are still grown in a limited way in one or two sections of Massachusetts and Michigan.

Besides taking an annual toll from the western farmers of $10,000,000 annually, the California ground squirrel has recently been found afflicted with germs of plague and thus likely to be ready distributers of it.

There are times when it is better for the small boy not to take a dare. One who didn't have the backbone to do so, whose case was reported in the papers a short time ago, left a good chunk of the peeling of his tongue on a frosty wagon tire.

Orchard work is a most fascinating occupation for those who love outdoor work, and one is well repaid in the responsiveness shown by the trees to the thoughtful care bestowed upon them. More than this, they never bite or kick or talk back.

On an area of 11,000 square miles Belgium supports a population of over 7,000,000 people. Were any one of several of the north central states, which are richer than Belgium agriculturally, as densely populated they would be supporting populations of from 30,000,000 to 50,000,000 inhabitants each.

Many a native milk cow is cheap at $60 or $70 as a producer of butter fat, while many another, possibly better bred, would be a costly investment at $10. It is not a cow's appearance, but the cash margin lying between total annual returns from her products and the cost of her feed, that determines her worth as a factor in the dairy.

Contracting one's crop a year in advance is advantageous sometimes, and at other times it is not. The western hop grower, notably in the Willamette valley, in Oregon, who year before last thought he was saving his bacon by contracting his crop at 9 cents per pound, is at present gnashing his teeth when he sees prices mounting to from 20 to 25 cents. He will know better next time.

A flock of forty goats has been doing a good work in a county in Indiana. They were taken to the section five years ago to clear up brush land and during the interval since have changed hands ten times, in every instance being employed to do the same work. They are turned loose on a brush patch, and as soon as the piece is cleared they are put on another or sold to a neighbor.

At the land and irrigation show held lately in Chicago one interesting exhibit was samples of woven materials made from Arizona cotton, which passed the highest grade tests for Egyptian cotton. In view of the fact that the United States imports annually $16,000,000 of this product, the discovery that there are large areas in Arizona suited to the production of this type of cotton is a most interesting and valuable one.

The job of basting the roasting fowl may be simplified if it is not supplied with a good coat of natural fat if slices of salt pork are stuck on to the legs and breast with toothpicks, the melting fat serving the same purpose as the basting and preventing the upper portions from being baked too hard. The strips should be removed from twenty minutes to half an hour before the baking process is completed so that the bird may be evenly browned.

The boy and girl will give a fair indication of the kind of grown folks they will be by the kind of reading they do in their spare hours. The kind of reading they will do will depend to quite an extent upon the kind of books placed in their hands, whether inspiring, stultifying or positively pernicious. It is at this point that the good judgment of the parents should come in and where a very heavy responsibility rests with them for what they do or do not supply. Good books and magazines were never cheaper, and it's a very destitute home which cannot provide a few of the best and most wholesome.

A reader of these notes told us the other day that he was nearly mobbed once for making a suggestion in a meeting of the patrons of a creamery of which he was a director that a resolution be passed requiring all cows supplying cream to the creamery be tested for tuberculosis. He added that as a result of using the buttermilk from this creamery for his pigs about half of them were infected with tuberculosis as a result of eating it. It does not require a great stretch of imagination to suppose that the conditions here referred to could be duplicated in thousands of places all through the dairy sections.

Now and then one wishes to stop a newspaper or magazine. It is very easily done. First pay the subscription in full to the time when it is ordered stopped and notify the local postmaster that you want him to order the publication discontinued, at the same time refusing to take it from your box, and see to it that it is not taken out by any member of your family. If this does not stop the paper coming, instruct the postmaster to send a second notice to the publisher and keep shoving the paper back. If it keeps coming after this, the postmaster throws it into the wastebasket, which means an end of the nuisance.

Death on the Guillotine.

Sardou, in order to be present at the execution of Tropman in January, 1875, spent the night before with La Roquette, the prison director. In his description he says: "At daybreak the guests went out upon the cold, bleak execution place, where the guillotine had already been erected. The bedraggled crowd, which had spent the night in drinking places, sang ribald songs and from time to time shouted for Deibler, the executioner, who meanwhile was explaining the mechanism. The basket in which the head was to drop was brought, and while looking at it I was horrified to see the lid arise and a human form emerge. 'Don't worry,' said Deibler, with a smile; 'that is only my wife, who wanted to see the execution, and I chose the simplest way to secure a good place for her.'" Clemenceau saw Emile Henry decapitated on May 22, 1894, in his capacity as a journalist, and, describing how the culprit was dragged to the machine, strapped upon the plank and there tortured by awaiting the pleasure of Deibler till the knife finally ended it all, said that the "horror of it" made him sick.

Why Blinds Were Drawn.

The Edinburgh landlady of the seventies who astounded James Payn by her stern determination to have the blinds drawn closely down on the Sabbath, was but carrying on the tradi*tions of her great-grandparents.* The Scot of the early eighteenth century had a reason for drawing his blinds on Sunday. Mr. Thompson in his "Weaver's Craft" gives it. "Sometimes the minister himself," he wrote, "when he got a colleague to preach for him would make the rounds, accompanied by an elder, to spy with his own eyes the sins of the absentees. Here one man is found romping with his bairns, another as the minister peeped through the window was detected kissing his wife, two men were found drinking ale, and one was found with his coat off, as if he were going to work, and still another was seen eating a hearty dinner. All were pulled up before the session of the kirk and repentance forced upon each."—London Standard.

Bread and Cheese.

A couple advanced in years got married lately.

The husband had a room in the house securely locked, the inside of which his wife had never seen, and, being curious of its contents, she begged again and again to see the room.

At last he consented, and, lo and behold, the room was full of whole cheeses!

He explained matters by telling her that for every sweetheart he had in his young days he bought a cheese.

His wife began to cry.

"Don't cry, dear," he said. "I've had no sweethearts since I met you."

"It's not that," she replied, still sobbing. "I only wish I had been as thoughtful as you and bought a loaf of bread for every man that kissed me. We could have had bread and cheese enough to last us all our days."—London Tit-Bits.

Trouble For Creditors.

Even the simplest law transactions seem to be beyond the comprehension of some people. An old farmer went into a grocer's shop a short time ago, ordered a sovereign's worth of goods and when they were ready for delivery laid down a five shilling piece in payment thereof.

The shopkeeper called out, "Here, this isn't right!" as the customer started to leave.

"Oh, yes, that's all right," replied the man. "I've got permission from the judge to pay 5 shillings in the pound."

A heated discussion revealed that the man had lately settled an insolvency upon this basis and expected to continue that method indefinitely. When he was shown his mistake he was very indignant and evidently considered himself a much abused man.—London Globe.

She Wasn't Superstitious.

"Mary, Mary," cried Mrs. Johnson to her maid, "what shall I do? I've just had a most dreadful accident and don't know what's going to happen. I've broken my new hand glass, and you know how unlucky it is to break a looking glass. It means seven years' unhappiness."

"Lor,' mum," replied Mary, "don't you set no heed on that. Look at me. I'm not fretting, and I've just broken the large pier glass in the drawing room."—London Fun.

Leftover Material.

Barbara, aged four, had always been allowed to make small cakes out of the scraps of dough left from the morning's baking, so one morning after being sent to gather the eggs she came running in with a very tiny one and exclaimed: "Oh, mamma, see this little egg! It must be that's all the dough the hen had left!"—Delineator.

The Art of Saving.

I believe that if somebody could invent unique ways of saving money the public would have an assured future. Men, women and children would regard saving as a game and play it with all their heart. There are penny savings banks where newsboys and bootblacks carry their tiny savings, but other children regard their penny bank at home with unfriendly eyes. There are working girls who put away their five cent pieces and fatten their small bank accounts by walking instead of riding and making other petty sacrifices. But the majority of working girls spend as fast as they can earn and declare that they cannot help it.

One reads of a man who began his career by regarding every dollar as a worker and getting all the profit he could. With that quaint conceit in his head saving became a pleasure, and he won riches without realizing that it was a struggle. I know of more than one woman who receives each night from her husband every dime he has received in change through the day, for he is careful to avoid spending such a piece of money. These, with her own savings in the same direction, make a respectable weekly showing.—Kansas City Journal.

Only Seeking Information.

The average New York boy is not a wonder of wit and wisdom, but most of them know a good thing when they see it. Also the contrary. Not long ago one of them saw a sign in front of a Sixth avenue place, "Boy Wanted." He was looking for something of that kind and walked in. There was nobody in sight, and he stood gazing. Presently the proprietor, a most grouchy person, appeared.

"What do you want here?" he inquired with scant courtesy.

"Well," replied the boy, disturbed by the man's manner and hesitating, "do you want a boy here?"

"That's what the sign says, don't it?" snapped the man.

"Yep," responded the boy, getting his second wind.

"Then we want a boy."

"Aw right," grinned the boy, backing away. "You git one. You can't have me," and he wiggled his fingers at the man and went out quickly.—New York Herald.

Tire Themselves Getting Ready.

Washington Irving tells a story of a man who tried to jump over a hill. He went back so far to get his start for the great leap and ran so hard that he was completely exhausted when he came to the hill and had to lie down and rest. Then he got up and walked over the hill. A great many people exhaust themselves getting ready to do their work. They are always preparing. They spend their lives getting ready to do something which they never do. It is an excellent thing to keep improving oneself, to keep growing, but there must be a time to begin the great work of life. I know a man who is almost forty years old who has not yet decided what he is going to do. He has graduated from college and taken a number of postgraduate courses, but all along general lines. He has not yet begun to specialize. This man fully believes he is going to do great things yet. I hope he may.—Success Magazine.

The Paper They Were Written On.

The average author would probably laugh at the statement that at one time in the world's history manuscripts, simply as such, irrespective of the nature of the text, were immensely valuable. In ancient times manuscripts were important articles from a commercial point of view. They were excessively scarce and were preserved with the utmost care. Even the usurers were glad to lend money on them when the owners were obliged to offer them in pawn. It is related in an ancient tome that a student of Pavia, who was reduced by his debaucheries, raised a new fortune by leaving in pawn a manuscript of a body of law, and a grammarian who was ruined by a fire rebuilt his house with two small volumes of Cicero through the ready aid of the pawnbroker.

Highest Cross In the World.

The highest cross in the world is said to be that which caps the loftiest peak of the Harz mountains. The cross is in reality a tower, and it commands a magnificent view of the country around. The height of the tower is 120 feet, and it stands on a mountain 1,731 feet above the sea level. A stair of 200 steps leads to the top of the cross, but there is an elevator of which people may avail themselves who for any reason wish to avoid the long climb.

Grateful.

Young Lady—Give me one yard of—why, haven't I seen you before? Draper's Assistant—Oh, Maud, have you forgotten me? I saved your life at the seaside last summer. Young Lady (warmly)—Why, of course you did. Then you may give me two yards of the ribbon, please.—Illustrated Bits.

Lettuce Salad With Fried Cheese.

Dress the lettuce in the usual way with French dressing. Have a mild cheese, rather dry, cut in strips like French fried potatoes, dip the strips in beaten egg, roll them in fine breadcrumbs and drop them into boiling fat to brown as quickly as possible. Serve with the lettuce.—Boston Post.

Passing Events.

Time is a sort of river of passing events, and strong is its current. No sooner is a thing brought to light than it is swept by and another takes its place, and this, too, will be swept away.—Marcus Aurelius.

Vengeance should be left to women.—Petrarch.

BY JOHN W. EASTMAN

ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

It begins to look as if there would be other delegates to the next Republican state convention besides Dar Reese and Ed Smith.

The price for hogs in the St. Paul market last week reached $9.50 per hundred, the highest price ever paid. The farmers, who have hogs to sell, are not kicking on the high cost of living.

The county option convention to be held next Wednesday at St. Paul promises to be a big affair. With Young and Jacobson as the star attractions, those who attend will be sure to be entertained.

Ripley Bower is still undecided whether or not he will be a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor. He has been undecided so long that the people don't care what his final decision is to be.

Pat McGarry, of Walker, is to be a candidate for congressman in the Sixth district in opposition to C. A. Lindbergh. It does not seem probable that the people down there would be foolish enough to make the change.

According to reports, other things besides drainage, reapportionment and developement of Northern Minnesota were discussed at the recent conference at Bemidji. There were a large number of politicians and candidates present.

Interviewed by the Minneapolis Journal, Senator A. D. Stephens, of Crookston, states that considerable effort is being made to secure his consent to become a candidate for the Republican nomination for congressman from this district, and he intimates that later he may become a candidate. The NEWS is of the opinion that if Senator Stephens thought he had fighting chance, he would enter the contest without being urged.

E. H. Herringer, of Ada, is to be a candidate for the office of state auditor. Mr. Herringer's candidacy is not taken seriously in this section, due to the fact that reports come from Norman county to the effect that he will not have the support of his home county. The Herringer-Lighthourn-Ward combination in Norman county is as dead as a smelt, and the friends of Senator Hanson are in full control. The people of Norman county do not believe that Herringer is a candidate in good faith, and that he simply entered the race for the purpose of controling the delegation from that county.

The Bemidji Pioneer published last week a table of comparison showing the need of reapportionment. The vote in some of the southern senatorial districts and that of our own is here given:

First district—Houston, 2,725 votes, one senator, one representative.

Seventh district—Dodge, 2,259 votes, one senator, one representative.

Tenth district—Waseca, 2,913 votes, one senator, one representative.

Twentieth district—Nicollet, 2,529 votes, one senator, one representative.

Sixty-first district—Norman, Mahnomen, Red Lake, Clearwater, Beltrami, 10,311 votes, one senator, two representatives.

It will thus be seen that four districts in the southern part of the state having a total vote of 10,426 have four senators and four representatives, while the Sixty-first district with 10,311 voters only had one senator and two representatives.

The state's victory in the 4 per cent gross earnings case is a feather in the cap of several men. The most credit of all, of course, must be given to J. F. Jacobson, who fathered the law in 1897, lost his fight that year and in 1899, but won in 1901 and at last, in 1904, saw it placed on the statute books. Now the measure so often declared "unconstitutional" is upheld by the highest court in the land. It is not, of course, the original Jacobson bill, but the improved draft of 1903 that is now sustained. With Mr. Jacobson it is the triumph of an idea. Credit is due to the present and past administrations of the attorney general's office for their successful handling of the case in the district court, the state supreme court, and finally at Washington.—Minneapolis Journal.

E. Erickson of Bagley, county commissioner of Clearwater county, under certain conditions will be a candidate for the house of representatives from his county. He will run as an independent.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Clearwater county has a candidate for state treasurer, and will also have a candidate for the Republican nomination for representative from this district. Although the smallest county in the district, it seems to have the largest number of office seekers.

Gilbert Gutterson, of Mankato, is the latest candidate to enter the field as a candidate for state treasurer. This makes five candidates. The job seems to have considerable attraction for the politicians.

The Insurgency of Northern Minnesota.

The following strong editorial published in the Minneapolis Tribune last week will be of interest to all the people of this section:

It is dangerous for any party or government to continue to treat with neglect and injustice any section of its territory that is increasing in population and power. The Republican party in control of the United States government has long persisted in this error in relation to the rich and populous Mississippi valley. The Republican party in control of Minnesota persists in it in relation to the northern part of the state.

Northern Minnesota has been the vital and growing part of the state for years. In the west its fertile lands invite new culture that would return many fold their present product with proper encouragement of scientific redemption. In the east its mineral wealth has furnished that variety of industry and diversity of occupation without which no civilization can reach its highest development. Between east and west the remnants of our devastated forests present the only field for that rational conservation of wood and water that begins to be recognized as the only permanent security for society.

Northern Minnesota has been neglected by everybody but the tax gatherer. Selfish politicians have denied it just representation in the legislature. The constitution has been evaded and decent fairness shamed by delaying reapportionment that would give it power in the government in proportion to its population and taxation. Its just demands have been refused and its highest interests neglected by a legislature in which one southern vote counted as two in the north.

The patience of northern Minnesota is wearing thin. From protest it begins to resort to agitation and to think of action. The industrial convention at Bemidji covers a political purpose as well advised as it is determined. The Republican party and the state legislature, as well as candidates for state office, will do well to give careful heed to its proceedings. It is no new thing for economic oppression to breed political revolution.

There are thousands of so-called "just as good" Emulsions, but they are not—they are simply imitations which are never as good as the original. They are like thin milk—SCOTT'S is thick like a heavy cream.

If you want it thin, do it yourself—with water—but dont buy it thin.

School Notes.

The High School building exhibit is now hung for examination in Miss Johnson's room in the Dobner building. The most of the material belongs to the grades, and the high school portion consists almost exclusively of examination papers with the actual standings marked thereon. The commercial department has some work especially of interest to those working along lines of business. The domestic science classes have some garments of their own manufacture and some attractive eatables, the latter being for exhibition only, though they are guaranteed to be cookery of such a nature as to tempt the appetite of the most exacting person. All are invited to call on Thursday and Friday afternoons and look the exhibit over.

The first team of high school boys turned the tables on the city team Tuesday evening and defeated them by a 9 to 8 score. The second team also sent the militia boys down to defeat by a score of 19 to 8. Thus the fortunes of war vary at times. The sophomore girls proved too much for the freshmen girls and won by a score of 4 to 0. The high school boys will send a quint of their best players over to Warren Saturday to play the high school team of that city and next week the Warren people will bring over their teams of boys and girls and play the locals in the rink.

The cold weather has interfered not a little with the regularity of attendance in the three buildings. The janitors are working heroically to have the rooms warm enough for the young people every morning, sometimes staying up more than half the night to do so.

Miss Schwalbe and Miss Wold are unfortunate enough to be absent from their rooms for a day or two this week by reason of illness.

No school was held on Tuesday, it being a legal holiday. The high school building floated the only flag in the city. Steps will be taken ere another holiday arrives to have flags floated on all the school buildings. The flag poles at the present time are in such condition that this is impossible.

The board of education is struggling with the difficulties of the building problem. What with architects, building plans and other puzzling problems for solution, they have not far to go for trouble. When some definite propositions have been evolved by the members of the board and the requirements have been sifted down to a certainty, the result of their labors will be submitted to the public for approval or disapproval.

County Superintendent of Schools, H. F. Anderson, was in the city this week enroute to the educational meeting at Warren.

State Truant Officer Walz was in Warren Tuesday and may make a visit to this city this week.

He is a wise farmer who not only inspects and tests his seed corn, but also keeps an eye on his congressman down at Washington, for important things will be doing in the next few weeks.

In the same way that a milk or beef habit may be developed in the case of cattle, so the wool yielding habit may be increased by the process of selection in the breeding of sheep. In this way the annual clip may be increased from three to five pounds per head.

More folks starve from lack of consideration and appreciation than ever do from the wherewithal to satisfy their physical appetites, and this in spite of the fact that the things referred to cost nothing, but in the bestowal rather enrich than impoverish the giver.

The cultivated strawberry of the garden is a descendant of a variety introduced into this country from Chile some 200 years ago and a native variety common to the United States and southern Canada. The choicest market varieties are the result of man's intervention in cross fertilization.

The most vital question which is before the corn grower to settle the coming spring is "Will my seed corn grow?" The answering of this question by giving the seed saved a thorough individual ear test is the only sensible course to adopt in getting at the kernel of the matter.

The Shasta daisy, the best floral creation of Luther Burbank and a flower much in evidence at the Seattle exposition, is a beautiful member of the composite family, with long white strap shaped petals and a beautiful yellow heart. It is very hardy, a vigorous grower and prefers a rich, loose, well drained soil and frequent watering. The one thing to guard against in the culture of the plant is its tendency to overbloom.

Every hog raiser might reduce the cost of pork production materially if he would provide a field of rape of sufficient size for his pigs to range in during the summer months. It is estimated that an acre devoted to rape will produce a food supply in one season worth from $20 to $25. It may be sown as soon as the ground works well and at the rate of about three pounds per acre. It should be allowed to get a good start before the pigs are turned into it.

George III. and the Wigmakers.

When George III. ascended the throne of England his wealthy subjects were beginning to leave off wigs and to appear in their own hair, "if they had any." As the sovereign was himself one of the offenders, the peruke makers, who feared a serious loss of trade, prepared a petition in which they prayed his majesty to be graciously pleased to "shave his head" for the good of distressed workmen and wear a wig, as his father had done before him.

When the petitioners walked to the royal palace, however, it was noticed that they wore no wigs themselves. As this seemed unfair to the onlookers they seized several of the leading processionists and cut their hair with any implement that came most readily to hand.

From this incident arose a host of curious caricatures. The wooden leg makers were said to have especial claims on the king's consideration, inasmuch as the conclusion of peace had deprived them of a profitable source of employment; hence the suggestion that his majesty should not only wear a wooden leg himself, but enjoin the people to follow his laudable example.

As Others See Us.

"The man who can pick out the best picture of himself is a rare bird," said a photographer. "Even an author, who is reputedly a poor judge of his own work, exercises vast wisdom in selecting his best book compared with the person who tries to choose his best photograph. Every famous man or woman who has been photographed repeatedly has his or her favorite picture. Usually it is the worst in the collection. It shows him or her with an unnatural expression, sitting or standing in an unnatural attitude. The inability to judge of his best picture must be due to the average man's ignorance of how he really looks, or perhaps it can be partly attributed to a desire to look other than he does. A stout man will swear that the photograph most nearly like him is the one that makes him look thin, a thin man the one that makes him look stout, the solemn man selects the jolliest picture, the jovial man the most cadaverous.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Famous Quotation.

A story about Keats is quoted by the late Sir Benjamin Ward Richardson in his "Lives" of disciples of Aesculapius. Mr. Stephens, a friend of the doctor, once told him that one evening at twilight when he and Keats were sitting together in their student days, Stephens at his medical books, Keats engrossed in his dreaming, Keats called out to his friend that he had composed a new line—"A thing of beauty is a constant joy."

"What think you of that, Stephens?"

"It has the true ring, but is wanting in some way," replies the latter as he dips once more into his medical studies.

An interval of silence, and again the poet, "'A thing of beauty is a joy forever.' What think you of that, Stephens?"

"That it will live forever."

A happy prophecy indeed!

The Forests on the Niger.

The insects of Africa are expert disease carriers, and they come in such numbers on the Niger that one hardly dares to use one's lamp or go too near a light of any sort at night. These forests on the Niger are deadly places for all their haunting attraction and take a big toll both of European and native life. Yet the first three days on the Niger, with all its mud and its smell and its mangrove flies and its frogs and its crickets, are enough to give the newcomer an inkling of the drawing power, the fascination, of what is probably the most unhealthy country in the world.—W. B. Thompson in Blackwood's.

Dodging a Slander.

During a suit for slander brought in an Ohio town one of the parties was asked by the presiding magistrate:

"Is it true, as alleged, that you declared that Thomas Mulkins had stolen your pocketbook?"

"Your honor," responded the man, "I did not go so far as that. I merely said that if Mulkins had not assisted me in looking for the pocketbook I might have found it."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Before and After.

She was a frivolous, fashionable young woman with beaux galore, but one man with only a small income seemed to be the favorite.

"You'll have to work hard before you win that girl," said his mother.

"And a good deal harder after you win her," answered his father, who knew what he was talking about.

His Poems.

"May I offer you this little gift, Fraulein Kate?"

"Excuse me—I never take presents from men."

"But it is only a copy of my book of poems."

"In that case I will accept. I thought it was something valuable."—Fliegende Blatter.

The Place For It.

An old Scotswoman was advised by her minister to take snuff to keep herself awake during the sermon. She answered briskly, "Why dinna ye put the snuff in the sermon, mon?"

The Shake.

"What did you say last night when Jack asked you to marry him?"

"I shook my head."

"Sideways or up and down?"—Boston Transcript.

Had a Narrow Escape.

Arpin's "Muskeg Limited," on its return from the Grygla country last Friday and while "putting up" for the night at Germantown, came near being the scene of a disaster which would have caused the death of the inmates, due to escaping coal gas, if it had not been discovered in the nick of time. The men, as usual, betook themselves to their respective "bunks" about eleven o'clock and were fast asleep, when, about an hour afterwards one of the men awoke, apparently from a severe headach, and arose to find the room filled with the deadly fumes and finding his strength fast giving away quickly opened a window and gave an alarm and fell to the floor unconscious, the others hearing the alarm arose only to find their strength also failing and were soon overcome, and it was not until about three hours later that they regained consciousness. They state that they are not over-anxious to encounter a similar experience again.

Big Job to Be Let Next Tuesday.

Contracts for the construction of the immense Beltrami-Marshall county judicial ditch will be let at Warren next Tuesday, March 1, jointly by R. C. Hayner, county auditor of Beltrami county, and A. G. Lundgren, county auditor of Marshall county.

This ditch is some 550 miles in length and will require the removal of 5,539,578 cubic yards of dirt in the construction of same, and the estimated cost is considerable over $500,000.

There will be two bridges for every mile, which necessitates the construction of 1,110 bridges. The ditch will drain a large area of the northwestern portion of Beltrami county, running west, well into Marshall county.

This is said to be the largest judicial ditch, which has yet been undertaken in the United States, and a prominent contractor states that it would take ten large dredges, working day and night, four years to complete the ditch.

It is expected that at least 150 contractors from different parts of the United States will be present to bid on the construction of Judicial Ditch, No. 11.

A Warm Meeting.

A special meeting of the county commissioners was held yesterday to consider the building of ditches in the vicinity of Highlanding. About fifty farmers from that section who were interested in the matter, went down to Red Lake Falls Tuesday evening to attend the meeting and it is reported to have been a warm one. Practically all were in favor of building the ditches, but a number were not satisfied with the course and others with the assessment.

WORK OF THE CENSUS MEN

Provisions and Exceptions Give Enumerators a Hard Problem.

Some of the Rules and Regulations That Will Govern Them.

As the requirements, which will be exacted of census enumerators are gradually divulged by the census director at Washington, the necessity of the test of Feb. 5 last is understood. It is going to take something of a legal mind to fill the position properly.

For instance, if a man dies after April 15, which is census day, until the enumerator gets around, he is counted as living, but babies born between April 15th and the time the enumerator appears have not standing with the bureau. If a man is single April 15th and gets married the next day he is just as single in the eyes of the government enumerator as if he were married. If a man's wife dies on April 16, he must not tell the enumerator he is a widower, for the enumerator will put him down as married. If the wife dies on April 14th, he is a widower. If he gets a divorce on April 15th, he is qualified to go as a divorced man, but if the judge grants his divorce on April 16, the census department regards him as still married.

These are not the only entangling situations the enumerator must unravel. Anyone temporarily away from home on April 15th is to be counted, nevertheless. Servants, laborers, or employes sleeping on the premises, are counted with the family.

On the other hand, persons "present and perhaps lodging and sleeping" in districts at the time of enumeration who do not have their usual places of abode there are not to be counted.

When the numerator has these directions thoroughly digested and feels that he understands what to do on the fateful April 15th he runs across a paragraph which makes exceptions of the following classes. Unless the enumerator is positive that the persons excepted willl be enumerated somewhere else, he is not to count:

Persons having a family;

Transient boarders or lodgers who have some other usual or permanent place of abode;

Students or children living or boarding with a family in order to attend some school, college, or other educational institution in the locality, but not regarding the place as their home;

Persons who take their meals with a family but lodge or sleep elsewhere;

Any person who was formerly in a family, but has since become a permanent inmate of an asylum, almshouse, home for the aged, reformatory, prison, or any other institution in which the inmates may remain for long periods of time.

FARM, ORCHARD AND GARDEN

BY F. E. TRIGG

REGISTER, ROCKFORD, IA.

CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED

[This matter must not be reprinted without special permission.]

PRUNING THE ORCHARD.

The best time in which to do pruning work in the orchard is from Feb. 1 on to blossom time. Were it possible to get all of this work done at one fell swoop the best time for it would be the week just before the blossom buds open, as from this time on is the period of quickest growth and hence most rapid healing of pruning cuts. But since the work cannot be done in a week it has to be started earlier and extended through a period of several weeks. For the one learning the orchard business a few simple directions will be helpful. Aside from giving the tree the type of head, low or high, whichever may be desired, by means of the pruning process, all cross limbs, those that rub one another and water sprouts should be cut out. In a choice between two limbs the one should be left which is more vigorous and will at the same time add most to the symmetry of the tree and its value as a fruit producer. The head of the tree should be kept sufficiently thinned so that a good sized cat can be thrown through from almost any direction. More exactly, it should be kept open enough so that the spray rod may be inserted to the center without inconvenience and the work of picking the fruit done without a fellow's having his shirt torn off.

With trees which have a tendency to spread too much one should prune the outspreading branches to an inside bud or shoot, which will tend to give an upright growth. With trees of the upright habit of growth breadth of top may be secured by pruning the upright limbs to outside buds. No two trees are exactly alike, and on this account each presents an individual problem for the pruner, who must be guided to some extent by the ideal tree type he has in mind, but even more largely by the needs and possibilities of each individual tree. Like boys and girls, trees to attain their best must be given continuous attention, it not being possible in the case of pruning any more than in the case of training to do all of the work at one time. Best results are obtained where it is started early and persisted in carefully until maturity is reached.

BIG CORN PRIZES.

The Hoosier State was very much in evidence at the national corn show held in Omaha in December. F. C. Palin of Newton, Ind., won the prize for the best single ear of corn and also the Kellogg trophy, valued at $1,000; J. R. Overstreet of Franklin got first prize on the best ten ears of corn and also the $1,000 trophy put up by the Indiana Corn Growers' association, while C. L. Kerlin exhibited the best bushel, or seventy ears, of corn and received therefor prizes aggregating $500. This makes the third consecutive year that Indiana has won the leading prizes at the national corn show. Mr. Palin states that his prize ear was the result of seven painstaking years of seed selection, the seed which produced the prize ear being descended from Reid's Yellow Dent and the Alexander Gold Standard. Judges pronounced the ear in question by far the superior of any ever exhibited. Its kernels were three-fourths of an inch deep, with very little room left for cob.

CORN FREAKS FROM PERU.

Two cereal freaks exhibited at corn shows held the past season have been the primitive or wild husk corn, in which each kernel is incased in a husk of its own, as in the case of grains of wheat, and the giant Cuzco corn, grown in Peru, South America. The husk corn is supposed to be the parent of the varieties of cultivated American maize, the husk of the original type being reduced to the light chaff to be found incasing the germ of present day corn. The kernel of the primitive corn is short, nearly round and flinty in character and about one-third of the size of an average kernel of corn. Samples of the Peru corn exhibited were twenty-two inches long and fourteen inches in circumference, the kernels being three-quarters of an inch long, nearly as broad and having a surface as large as a nickel.

OILED ROADS GOOD.

The people of Sedan, Kan., have had a good object lesson the past season in the use of oil as an aid in road making. A mile of road running south of the town was oiled at an expense in crude petroleum and dragging the road of $50. The road was well rounded, and the oil was applied in May and when once packed down was firm and smooth, much resembling asphalt. The road is the talk of the farmers of the locality, and they will go a long way to get a drive over it. In California, where crude oil is generally used as a dressing for highways, the same results are noted, it being necessary to apply oil but once a year after the road is put in shape. The oil road is not only dustless, but quiet and very light in wear and tear on horses and vehicles.

Every farm worth $100 per acre should have a herd of dairy cows, a flock of fifty sheep, a silo and a manure spreader.

It is not only the height of cruelty, but bad management, to keep an active, full lived horse, or, for that matter, an old plug, tied up in a stall week after week without driving it or giving it opportunity for exercise by cavorting about in a yard.

The housewife who takes a just pride in a clean kitchen and dining room floor will doubtless appreciate it if the muddy boots or overshoes are left in the back room and some lighter, cleaner footwear put on when the men enter the living rooms.

A housewife who has given it a trial recommends a lotion of equal parts of turpentine, ammonia and raw linseed oil as a ready means of relief from frosted feet and chilblains. The liniment should be applied three or four times a day, as conditions seem to demand.

Rotation as a principle of soil culture is not only good for the field crops, but for those raised in the garden patch as well. Such rotation not only rests the soil, but tends to check the development of fungous and other pests which are likely to infest the ground if the same crop is produced on the same plot year after year.

There are many farmers who could have or carry out no more practical New Year's resolution than the purchase and use of a good manure spreader. It will not only mean fewer blisters and callouses on the hands through freedom from forking the stuff off the wagon, but will likewise mean a great many dollars more in pocket as a result of a more economical handling of the farm fertilizers and from realizing a larger per cent of their value in increased crop returns.

As a result of three years of careful testing in the seeding of oats at the Illinois experiment station it has been found that when drilled oats produce on an average 5.3 bushels per acre more than when sown broadcast in the common slipshod fashion. The increased yield is attributed to more uniform germination and stand and more even growth and maturity. It was also found in this connection that clover drilled with oats seemed much better able to withstand the dry weather just following harvest.

If there is any ground for the statement alleged that many a farmer in dairy sections is selling his butter fat at 30 to 35 cents per pound and buying butterine—beef suet and cottonseed oil, etc.—at 18 to 20 cents a pound to grease his pancakes with very little enthusiasm will be aroused on his behalf on the part of the day laborer who is buying butter or some other kind of fat all of the time and has none to sell. Country people should use creamery butter or go without if they expect to win public favor in their war on the oleomargarine trust.

A lot of feeders should realize more fully than they seem to the difference in revenue between the scrub, ill favored steer that has a hard time fetching $5 per hundredweight on the market and the quickly grown, blocky Hereford, Angus or Shorthorn grade that weighs 1,300 to 1,450 pounds and brings $8.50 per hundredweight. The chances are that the scrub, pound for pound, has cost more to produce than the fat, sleek grade, yet he has brought 3½ cents a pound less. Another feature of the situation worth remembering is that the market is usually flooded with the five dollar stuff, while the good grade steer is always at a premium and buyers are anxious to get them.

Why does one fruit tree of the same age, size and apparent thriftiness as others in the same orchard tract yield a larger quantity of fruit as well as a better quality? Many horticulturists believe that such a trait is due to tree individuality in the same way that exceptional milk capacity is an individual trait in dairy cows and vigor and large size and symmetry traits of representatives of beef types. Moreover, the horticulturist believes that, just as characteristics may be transmitted in the animal kingdom, so tree traits may be through bud or scion to its descendants. The Colorado and some other horticultural stations are experimenting along this line and in the near future hope to furnish conclusive proof of what seems to be a very reasonable hypothesis.

Southern corn belt and cotton belt states are coming to look upon soy beans as a legume of exceptional value for use in crop rotations as a soil renovator. In this respect being a desirable substitute for clover and alfalfa. It thrives under the same general conditions as does corn, though flourishing on much thinner soils. The soy beans not only serves the purpose well as a pasture and makes good hay if cut before the vines are too ripe, but makes excellent silage when sown with corn or a fine green manure if plowed under. In sections where the conditions are favorable and the season long enough the soy bean will produce from fifteen to twenty bushels of beans per acre, these making an excellent ration when ground with corn and having twice the feeding value of that cereal. In getting a start with the legume best results are secured by inoculating the field with soil from an established field or by inoculating the seed with cultures which one can secure free and reliable from the department of agriculture at Washington.

Professor Willard of the North Dakota experiment station has lately completed a soil map which should be of practical value to every intelligent farmer and landowner of that state.

Sensible parents will keep the sick cat and dog confined in some place away from the little children who may be in the home. A sick cat often transmits disease, while no one ever knows when a sick dog is going to run amuck.

Thirty inches of snow on a level in most of the north, central and eastern states, accompanied by blockade of railroads, scarcity of fuel and intense cold, suggests the fact that the climate has not changed enough so that we are rid of the "old fashioned winter."

Latest reports show that there are now in operation throughout the country 40,004 rural mail routes, aggregating more than 1,000,000 miles and serving about 20,000,000 patrons. To date the innovation has cost the government $170,000,000. The system lacks about $17,000,000 a year of being self maintaining.

If there is any one condition that a dairy or meat animal should be spared during the winter months it is a wet and nasty place in which to rest at night. Not only does such a condition mean lack of comfort for the animals, but they are likely to produce or aggravate tubercular tendencies and any other ailment that is promoted by dampness and filth.

The apple maggot is a pest which affects this fruit in some sections of Maine, and it is said to be infinitely worse than the larvae of the codling moth, as many of the maggots will infest a single apple and often entirely honeycomb it. One of the worst features in connection with the pest seems to be that it cannot be readily reached by the arsenical sprays which are so effective in holding the codling moth in check.

Often the stand still condition of the house fern or palm is due to the roots having completely occupied all of the available space in the pot. In such case the plant should be removed from the pot, placed in a larger receptacle and new soil added, with such fertilizer as the particular plant may need. Where the plant looks rather tough it is sometimes advisable to cut the leaves or body back rather sharply, thus inducing a rapid growth of new stuff.

It is entirely in place to talk of a conservation of forest and water power resources, but far transcending this is an agitation looking to such handling of the rich soils to be found almost anywhere as will result in a conservation of their fertilizing elements, those factors that really give them worth as soils. Could the loss which we have sustained in this regard be known and the figures representing it be expressed in black and white it would be a total staggering belief.

One of the best features connected with the agricultural short courses which are being conducted by agricultural college instructors at important points in their respective states is not only that it gives practical agricultural instruction condensed and simplified for the benefit of those not used to technical study, but it arouses in many a bright boy and girl a desire to know more about the subjects presented, thus influencing them to take the more extended courses at the state agricultural college. The short course is thus a sort of agricultural entree, whetting the appetite for a good square meal.

Next in importance to having the right kind of soil in proper tilth is the point of securing seed for such soil that is of strong vitality and free from weed seeds and other adulterations. Small grains, especially oats, should be given a thorough cleaning in a fanning mill under a good blast of wind. If the hand mill will not do this work the way it ought to be done one can hire the cleaning done at small cost at the elevator. If there is question about the vitality of seed which seems to be plump and ought to grow it is an easy matter to test it by spreading a representative handful between a couple of sheets of blotting paper and keeping the seed warm and moist for a few days. Should a considerable per cent of the sample not grow it would indicate that a larger per cent would need to be sown to secure the necessary stand.

Wounds that may have been made on the trunks and low branches of fruit trees by the gnawing of rabbits and mice will heal more readily if the spots are covered with grafting wax, which will exclude the air and moisture. This may be made by melting together four parts of rosin, two parts of beeswax and one part of tallow. When melted the mixture should be thoroughly stirred until cold, or it may be poured while warm into a pail or tub of cold water. When it has cooled sufficiently to handle the hands should be greased with tallow and the mass pulled and worked until it becomes quite light in color. It may then be made into balls or sticks of convenient size and is ready for use. It should be warmed slightly to work well. Where the wound to be treated is large very good results may be had by dipping strips of cotton cloth in liquid grafting wax and winding it spirally about the trunk, allowing the edges to overlap so as to make the wrapping as nearly air tight as possible. We have had injured trunks heal completely under such a covering as this.

Russia's 1909 crop of winter wheat aggregated a little over 200,000,000 bushels. The production of rye, the cereal on which the nation relies for its food supply, is placed at 834,000,000 bushels.

A fact that it is well for the one just starting in orchard work to remember is that winter pruning, as a general thing, tends to induce production of wood, while pruning in the late spring and early summer encourages a setting of fruit buds.

Not all western fruit ranchmen are wise, as one we came across the other day neglected a thirty acre ranch which would have increased in value at the rate of $150 per acre during the year to handle an automobile agency through which he got a $200 commission on a $1,500 machine. He lost just about $4,300 by the deal.

The reason why tuberculosis as a bovine ailment afflicts the dairy cow more seriously than the steer in the feed lot seems largely traceable to the fact that the steer rarely lives beyond the age of three, while the dairy cow may be doing service at the pail when ten or twelve. The average steer doesn't live long enough to be sick.

While the volcanic ash soil to be found in some sections of the west makes a fearful dust during the summer months, the fact remains that it is marvelously rich in fertilizing elements. This is especially noticeable in the Yakima valley, where in places this soil, as fine as bolted flour, is said to extend to a depth of seventy feet.

In all agricultural communities our standards of good citizenship should more and more come to give high place to the man, whether owner or tenant, who at the end of a season leaves the soil which he has tended in as fertile and productive a condition as when he found it. And it should class as very real traitors to the country's best interest and welfare the very large class who despoil and rob the soil ruthlessly.

The English potato crop for the year 1909 averaged 238 bushels per acre as against an average in the United States of about 105 bushels. It is well to remember, too, in this connection that the English average was secured on lands which have been tilled for 700 or 800 years, while here the land has not been cultivated on an average sixty or seventy years. There ought to be a suggestion in these figures for the American agriculturist.

The agricultural department is continuing its vigorous warfare against the weevil pest, which has exacted such heavy toll from southern cotton growers, and as a result of its efforts parasitic enemies have been introduced which are greatly lessening the damage sustained. In some fields in Louisiana as high as 77 per cent of the boll weevils have been destroyed by these insect enemies, and at various points in Texas from 21 to 48 per cent of the weevils have been destroyed by the same agency.

Investigations which have been made by the Nebraska experiment station into the causes of sorghum poisoning show that this result is due to the presence of prussic acid in the green leaves of young and old sorghum plants and Kaffir corn. The poisons seem always to be present in minute quantities, but is developed in dangerous quantities when the plant is arrested in certain stages of its growth by dry weather. It is more than likely that to this same poison is due the frequent death of stock which has eaten of the green shoots and suckers in a field of corn following a period of retarded development.

The present session of congress promises to have on its hands another seance with the oleomargarine question. The present tax on this hog fat, beef fat, cottonseed oil mixture when uncolored is but one-fourth of a cent per pound, but if colored to imitate butter the tax is 10 cents per pound. It is this little tax that the oleo chaps are trying to get reduced in order that they may have a still larger profit on the sale of the product, which is disposed of at a handsome profit even with the present tax, at from 10 to 12 cents a pound less than is asked for best grades of butter. On the one hand the laboring man contends (or the oleo producer contends for him) that butter at 35 cents a pound is decidedly a luxury and out of his reach, that if he wants to buy a fatty product colored to imitate butter it is nobody's business but his own and that if he chooses to purchase it he ought not to have to pay a tax to the government any more than the more well to do citizen should who elects to eat butter. There is much force to his argument. The dairymen, on the other hand, contend that the coloring of this oleo product is done so that it may be sold under the belief on the part of the purchaser that it is butter or that when eating it it will be easier for him to think that it is butter, which the farmer contends is essentially a fraud and works a hardship on his industry in that with feed stuff so high it is impossible for him to produce butter at lower prices without actual loss. It looks very much as if the controversy involved a conflict of interest between the packing house owners and the dairymen, with the chances that the dairymen will win out, because they are in a majority.

THE MAN AND THE METHOD.

Among many interesting and instructive features of the late national horticultural congress at Council Bluffs, Ia., perhaps none has received greater commendation and publicity than the apple exhibit of a Mr. Mincer of Hamburg, Ia., a little town located in Fremont, the southwest county of the state. It seems that Mr. Mincer has for several years past had charge of a twenty acre orchard, which for some time previous had been badly neglected. On taking charge he began spraying and gave the orchard in other respects the best care he could. Last year he attended the horticultural show at Council Bluffs and exhibited a few apples, but they were not up to the standard of the western fruit. However, he kept his eyes open, took notes and pumped the western ranchmen as to just how they produced their fine fruit. He found that it was by giving intensive, painstaking care to a few acres which made improved methods possible. He acted on this suggestion and devoted most of his attention last season to seven acres. When he appeared at the fruit show last November he had an exhibit which was considered by both visitors and judges to be one of the very finest in the hall. He had gained size and color, while in the packing of his exhibit he had been assisted by a young lady who had had experience in Idaho packing houses. The net result of his efforts was that he was awarded a number of the most valuable prizes and trophies which were put up. On the business side he not only received a high price for the choice apples left after his show stock was selected, but was offered $3 a box straight for his exhibit fruit. This instance not only points to the immense educational value of these national fruit exhibits in providing a stimulus for better efforts, but shows what is even more important—that after all is said and done it is more the man and his method than it is climate and soil that are the chief determining factors in the attainment of success in the fruit business. This man's achievement should be a source of encouragement to fruit growers in all sections.

POOR CLAY TILE.

Not long ago there appeared an article in this department warning prospective users of draintile against cement tile improperly made. A friend who is engaged in the manufacture of cement tile in a letter received a short time ago admits the truth and fairness of the article, but thinks it gives the impression that no poor clay tile are made. We are glad to state that this is far from the truth. If the clay body from which the tile is made contains an excess of lime and magnesium or other ingredients aside from the silicon and aluminium compounds, which should largely compose it, they are quite likely to lack uniformity of texture, will be too brittle and are apt to go to pieces when exposed to ordinary soil or air conditions. And it goes without saying that a collapsed clay tile is just as worthy of condemnation and strict avoidance as a shoddy cement tile. As in the case of the cement tile, much will depend upon the integrity and reputation of the firm manufacturing. The only point in favor of the clay tile is that there is not the incentive present to scrimp expense in the cost of manufacture, as is the case with the manufacturer of cement tile in the use of poor sand and in the reduction of the per cent of cement below the proper amount. A tile drain system is no better than the poorest section in it; hence he who has in view such a system of drainage should exercise the greatest caution that the tile used should be above defect or reproach, and this holds true equally of both the burned clay and the cement product.

FAMILY AND MARKET ORCHARDS.

For the apple orchard which is to produce fruit for family use only it does very well to set several varieties, which will answer the several purposes for which the fruit is used and will cover as long a season of consumption as possible. But if the apples are to be grown for the market it is by all means best to restrict the varieties set to one or two kinds which are known to be prolific and hardy and will fetch a good price at the season when one must market them. A buyer would always prefer to handle a carload of fruit of uniform quality and one variety than a conglomerate, mixed up assortment, even if the several varieties ripened at the same time, which is rarely the case. We are well aware of the fact that if left to himself many a nurseryman will load his patrons up with just as many varieties—good, bad and indifferent—as he will take, but be ignores the conditions which make the largest success possible when he does so.

With the poultry and egg business of the country aggregating close to $650,000,000 annually, it will have to be styled as a pretty good sized side issue.

The Japs seem to have caught on to the benefits to a country of the dairy business and are picking up some fine dairy animals in this country for shipment to the Flowery Kingdom.

All too often a breachy, runaway team and an ancient, toggled up harness belong to the same man. Either one alone is bad enough, but together they are calculated to make a fellow lose what little religion he may have cultivated.

Many a colt is weak and wabbly at birth because its dam has had little or no exercise during pregnancy, coupled with a diet in which corn has formed too large a part. Moderate work will keep the mare in the best of health, and this is also best for the colt.

The young things—the lambs and little pigs—will be putting in appearance within a few weeks now, and if suitable quarters, dry and clean, are not already provided for lambing and farrowing they should be before the time arrives. Much young stuff is annually lost through neglect in this one particular.

In localities where the winter weather is cold and the snow so deep as to keep the fowls from having free range a scratching shed with south exposure should be provided adjoining the poultry house. Here in the warmer hours of the day the hens will gather and should be made to scratch for their small grain ration.

Where the manure cannot be spread at once on accumulating it should be so handled that there will be the least possible loss of its fertilizing elements from rain and weather until the job can be done. Careful tests which have been made show that if left to leach manure will lose half of its value in the course of four or five months.

In several states dogs are considered property and are given a nominal value of a dollar simply to establish their legal status. In these states an owner may recover damages if his dog is killed without good excuse and is also held responsible for damage that the dog may be responsible for, be it killing sheep, causing runaways or other form of trespass.

As a rule the low, wet acres are the richest in fertilizing elements and will be the most productive if properly tiled. In the inauguration of the more intensive type of agriculture which must surely come with a steady increase in population and cheap lands about all taken up, this redemption of the wet acres ought to receive an ever increasing attention.

Individuality in cows has been given a thorough test of late at the Wisconsin experiment station. At the end of the testing period, three years, it was found that the receipts from one cow exceeded her cost of keep by $110, while the combined profit of five other cows for the same time was only $114, but a trifle more than the same return, and that, too, with nearly five times the amount of feed and work bestowed on the one. There ought to be a suggestion or two in these figures for the practical dairyman.

A friend who has a wideawake boy sent him to the state fair last fall, let him attend the agricultural short course at the county seat a few weeks ago and says he is going to have him attend the international live stock show at Chicago next December. It is a fair assumption that this lad is being impressed with the importance of agriculture as a business by these means to such an extent that he will not be lured from the farm by the glitter of electric lighted streets and the chance to wear a standup collar and earn $3.50 a week behind a dry goods or clothing counter.

The claim has been made within the past few weeks that the packer has been doing the farmer a kindness by boosting the prices of live stock to such unusual levels. This is nothing the packing interests deserve any particular credit for, for the supply has been so scarce that high prices have had to be offered to supply the fresh meat trade. It is safe to say that when the rank and file of feeders have sent stuff into which they have been cramming high priced feeds to market the prices will have suffered a disastrous slump. Judging from his past conduct, when you find the packer doing anything on the benevolent order for the stock raiser the devil will have turned saint.

When rural carriers have to make a daily round of from twenty to twenty-five miles, rain or shine, snow or mud, the matter of good roads is a mighty pertinent one, and it is so held by the postal authorities at Washington, as a good many patrons in the northern snowbound states have likely concluded during the past few weeks. Some patrons we heard of the other day who live not more than forty miles away came to town following a big snowstorm which blocked the roads and gave a particular carrier fits because he did not make a certain piece of road and distribute mail along it. When they were asked if they came to town via this piece of unbroken road they answered: "Why, no. We came around the other way." The incident needs no further comment to make its point plain.

The world may owe every man a living, but with prices of foodstuffs where they are the majority of us have to scratch good and lively if we elect not to starve.

The earliest returns from the garden stuff will be secured from that planted on ground that was fall plowed. Owing to its physical condition such soil is warmer and hence makes possible a more rapid growth of plant life.

Peggy, the famous $10,000 Crystal White Orpington hen belonging to Ernest Kellerstrass of St. Louis, was exhibited a short time since at a poultry show in Madison Square Garden, New York city. So highly is she prized that detectives were stationed near at hand to see that no harm befell her.

There is no better way to dispose of an article or implement which one does not longer need or of getting track of that which one does not have than by the insertion of a two or three line local in the home paper. We have in mind a number of farmers who employ this method and find it very satisfactory.

Many a boy or man has been able to live a clean and decent life because of a feeling of self respect—a regard for the worth and sacredness of his own personality—or from consideration of a family record before him in which he has felt just pride. Fortunate indeed are those who have an anchor of this type when times of stress and temptation come on.

The potted house roses may be kept free from the minute red spiders and the green flee by dipping the plant in a soapsuds of fair strength every two or three days and by an occasional spraying with a tobacco solution made by steeping tobacco stems and leaves or cheap smoking tobacco in warm water. Should the plants be troubled with mildew sprinkling with flower of sulphur will correct the trouble.

In buying a sow for breeding purposes it is well for the purchaser to take account of the number of pigs there were in the litter in which she was born. There may have been three, maybe eight, and possibly eleven or twelve. The young sow is quite likely to follow the breeding habit of her dam in respect of the number of the litter, and if a good producer is wanted a sow from a large litter should be selected.

In selecting seed corn for planting in the northern portion of the corn belt, where the season from planting to frost is barely more than a hundred days, a fellow will do well to steer shy of ears having too deep a kernel, as this type of corn, while handsome to look at and all right when planted in its proper clime, is almost sure to be late in maturing, to get caught with the frost and sour on the cob, making it impossible to properly cure and keep it.

It is conceded quite generally now by poultrymen who have made a study of food rations for laying hens that in the past fat forming foods, especially corn in its various forms, have constituted too large a per cent of the ration for the largest egg production. Tests recently made show best results from substituting the nitrogenous foods—clover, alfalfa, bran, etc.—in place of most of the corn. Under favorable conditions otherwise this one change in the diet of the hens has given remarkable results.

In a recent address before a North Dakota stock and grain growers' association a well known writer on agricultural subjects brought the charge against the manure spreader that its use means the distribution of large quantities of weed seeds in the raw and unfermented manures which it handles. There may be something in this on a farm that is badly fouled with weeds, but the way to remedy the evil is not by dispensing with the use of the manure spreader, but by getting rid of the weeds, and to accomplish this a clean cultivation of tilled crops and a sensible system of crop rotation are the only methods that need be adopted.

There hasn't been a spring in years when the roads over so large an area were in as bad shape as they will be during the next two or three months. This is in part due to an unusually heavy October and November rainfall, coupled with an unprecedented fall of snow during the past three months. There is no agency by which the highways can be made shipshape in a shorter time than by the judicious use of the King road drag—in brief, the two halves of an eight or ten inch diameter log cut to a length of about eight feet and fastened together, one about three feet in front of the other, with flat side to the front, so that when pulled along the road they will work the loose surface earth toward the middle of the road, leveling down the bumps and filling up the cuts and chuck holes. Where a log of the type described is not available a very satisfactory substitute is oak planks 2 by 10 inches and of the desired length with a quarter inch thick strip of strap iron fastened on the planks so as to project enough to give the planks a scraping edge. It will not be long after the snow goes off that such a drag can be used, as there will be little frost in the ground and the roads will dry out fast.

Why He Was Deaf.

Scene—Stable of Scottish village inn. Landlord is busy repairing a piece of harness and is carrying on at the same time a conversation with the village blacksmith. Enter farmer.

Farmer—Look here, landlord! Can ye gie me a bottle o' yer best whisky?

Landlord—Weel, ye see, the horses are a' oot, an' I dinna ken when ony o' them 'll be hame.

Farmer—It's no a horse I want; it's a bottle o' whisky.

Landlord—Aye; but, ye see, they're a guid bit awa', an' it'll be late before the first o' them's back.

Farmer (louder)—I tell ye, it's no' a horse, but a bottle o' whisky, I want.

Landlord—Weel, ye see, the beasts 'll be tired, an'—

Farmer—Gang awa' wi' ye an' yer beasts!—

Blacksmith—Man, John, ye're gettin' as deaf as a doorpost. It wasna' a horse, but a bottle o' whisky, the man was askin' for.

Landlord—Ou, aye, I heard him fine, but he didna' pay for the last bottle he got.—Pearson's Weekly.

The Order of the Bath.

The last Knights of the Bath made according to the ancient forms were at the coronation of Charles II., when various rites and ceremonies, one of which was bathing, were enforced.

According to Froissart, the court barber prepared a bath, and the candidate for membership in the order, having been undressed by his esquires, was thereupon placed in the bath, his clothes and collars being the perquisites of the barber. He was then removed from the water to the words "May this be an honorable bath to you," and was placed in a plain bed quite wet and naked to dry. As soon as he was quite dry he was removed from the bed, dressed in new and rich apparel and conducted by his sponsors to the chapel, where he offered a taper to the honor of God and a penny piece to the honor of the king. Then he went to the monarch and, kneeling before him, received from the royal sword a tap on the shoulder, the king exclaiming, "Arise, Sir ——," and then embraced him, saying, "Be thou a good knight, and true."—London Strand Magazine.

England's Patron Saint.

The story of England's patron saint is surrounded by a mixture of truth and fable which defies definite sifting. He is generally believed to have been born at Lydia, but brought up in Cappadocia, and suffered martyrdom in the reign of Diocletian, A. D. 303. The legend of his conflict with the dragon may have arisen from a symbolical or allegorical representation of his contest with the pagan persecutors. When our crusaders went to the east in 1090 they found St. George elevated to the rank of warrior saint, with the title of the "victorious," and as they believed that they were indebted to him for aid in the siege of Antioch they adopted him as the patron of soldiers. Edward III. was thus led to make him patron of the Order of the Garter, and so gradually St. George became the tutelary saint of England.—London Mail.

Eve and the Apple.

Princess Duleep Singh at a dinner in New York said that she found the American woman a marvel of beauty and the American man a model of good looks and kindness.

"The American man," said the charming princess, "is rightly held up to the world as the pattern husband. In Europe they have a saying about Eve and the apple which shows how wretched a failure the European husband is. This saying is unknown in America, I am sure. It would have no point, no application, here in the land of pattern husbands. The saying is this: 'The evil one didn't give the apple to the man, but to the woman, because the evil one knew well that the man would eat it all himself, but the woman would go halves.'"

Aisle of the Car In a Railroad Wreck.

A veteran railroad man gave a piece of valuable advice not long ago.

"If you ever get into a wreck," he said, "and have time to follow out this suggestion remember this! Always stand in the aisle. Most of the injuries that are suffered occur because the victim is crushed between the seats. If you are in the aisle you may be thrown forward and bruised a little, but there is much less chance of receiving serious hurts. It isn't always possible to get out of your seat before the crash comes, but if it is follow that advice."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Use For Arithmetic.

"My boy," said the head of the firm, "I've noticed that you have a great head for figures, although you don't seem to be able to spell or write at all. How does it happen?"

"I studied 'rithmetic," replied the office boy, "'cause I wanted to know how to figure de battin' averages."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Myth Chaser.

"What makes your youngest son so eager for athletics?"

"Filial admiration," answered the worried looking mother. "He believes all the stories his father tells about the wonderful things he did when he was a boy and is trying to equal the record."—Washington Star.

Perseverance.

Perseverance is more prevailing than violence, and many things which cannot be overcome when they are together yield themselves up when taken little by little.—Plutarch.

Late repentance is seldom true, but true repentance is never too late.—Venning.

What a Dollar Dog Can Do.

A man in a nearby city bought for his wife and child a year ago a dog, for which he paid a dollar. It was obviously nothing wonderful in the canine way—merely a mongrel, with the bulldog strain predominant. The owner was a man in humble circumstances, and the dog in his modest dwelling was the principal asset aside from a few sticks of furniture. The other night Tom was tied to a leg of the kitchen sink, as usual, and the family went to bed. They were awakened by the dog at midnight scratching at his master's door. When his master came out to see what was the matter the dog, with a remnant of chewed rope hanging from his collar, whined and ran to the head of the stairway. The house was on fire, and shortly after woman and child and man and dog made their escape their poor dwelling was a mass of glowing embers. The owner of the dog has been urged to part with him for a large cash consideration; but, though he is penniless, he will not part with the four footed savior of his family. Neither has the dog at any time had thoughts of leaving them for luxurious kennels.—New York Times.

Slaves to the Servants.

"I am very tired," said the fashionably dressed woman. "I have been working dreadfully hard all day."—Doing what? Why, seeing to my servants—working for them. Didn't you know that the more servants you have the harder you must work? Certainly I have to do all the shopping for my servants. I have to buy their uniforms, the caps and aprons of the maids, the clothing of the housekeeper, and have to see to the marketing, too—yes, and very often, in spite of the fact that I have a housekeeper. I must, or they will form a combine to rob me of everything I have. The housekeeper will get a rakeoff that will enable her to retire in a few years. Then perhaps it is I who must hunt a place as housekeeper for some one else. Oh, yes, if you want to keep your position as mistress of a household of servants you must keep hustling! You can't afford to let the grass grow under your feet to any great extent."—New York Press.

He Got a Hundred.

Sammy's mother talked to him long and earnestly about the poor marks he had been getting in his work at school. She painted in alluring colors the career of the little boy who studies his lessons and gains the love and respect of his teachers. She went even farther. She promised him that if he got good marks she would give him a whole dime all for his own. Sammy seemed impressed.

That afternoon he returned from school fairly dancing with joy.

"Oh, mother," he shouted, "I got a hundred!"

"Sammy!" cried his delighted mother. She hugged him and kissed him and petted him and—gave him the dime.

"And what did you get a hundred in?" she finally asked.

"In two things," replied Sammy without hesitation. "I got forty in readin' and sixty in spellin'."—Everybody's Magazine.

Trapping the Parson.

William Morris did not always get his jokes right end first. In a biography of her husband, Mrs. Edward Burne-Jones tells of the ease with which he reversed them.

A dinner gathering had all been asking conundrums.

"Who killed his brother Cain?" asked Burne-Jones.

Morris fell into the trap at once. "Abel!" he shouted.

Later in the day he came in laughing.

"I trapped the parson, by Jove!" he exclaimed. "I asked him, 'Who killed his brother Abel?'

"'Cain,' he said at once.

"'Ha!' I said. 'I knew you'd say that. Every one does.' I came away and left him puzzled enough, and I doubt if he's found out yet what the joke was."

Not Qualified.

Two men were getting warm over a simple difference of opinion.

They turned to the third man.

"Isn't a homemade strawberry shortcake better than a cherry pie?" demanded one of them.

"Isn't a homemade cherry pie better than any shortcake?" inquired the other.

The third man shook his head.

"I don't know," he said. "I board."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Tripping Tongue.

"Henry Peck, you're a fool!"

"You didn't seem to think so when I was single."

"No, you never showed what a big fool you were until you married me."—Exchange.

Not an Umpire.

A clergyman startled his drowsy congregation the other day as follows: "My dearly beloved friends, permit me to remind you that I come here to preach, not to act as umpire in a snoring match."

The Explanation.

Fred—There seems to be a lot more fuss made of Miss A.'s singing than Miss K.'s, and I am sure Miss K. has by far the richer voice. Jack—Ah, yes, but Miss A. has by far the richer father.

Made Sure of the Pie.

A young girl who carried her dinner was observed to eat her pie first. When asked why, she replied, "Well, if there's anything left it won't be the pie, will it, now?"

Animals and Instinct.

It is a mistake to imagine that animals are prevented by instinct from eating injurious food. A chicken will drink paint; a cow partakes of water in which noxious chemicals have been washed; ducks cheerfully swallow snails and choke themselves in the process. No; animals, like children, need watching.

Recently numerous cases of poisoning in ducks, which followed the consumption of cabbage leaves, have attracted much attention. A few hours after feeding poisoning has manifested itself by loss of appetite, great weakness, tottering steps and sometimes death. From time immemorial ducks have thrived on cabbage leaves. The poultry farmers were greatly puzzled.

Then it was discovered that various caterpillars were concealed in the cabbage leaves; hence these tears. But the point is that, far from instinctively detecting any danger and behaving accordingly, the ducks consumed great quantities of the leaves with much apparent relish.—London Answers.

Pleasure and Sacrifice.

An alert little five-year-old was visiting a city park with her mother for the first time. She had noticed the beautiful red and white swan boats as they passed through in the morning, and her mother had promised they should come back after the shopping was done and have a ride.

Shortly after dinner they stood on the bridge over the lagoon watching the boats below and listening to the cry of the barker as he tried to induce the passing crowds to patronize his swan boats.

But when her mother started toward the boat landing little Elsie declared very vigorously that she did not want to go at all and, as her mother urged her, broke forth in tears.

This sudden fear was so different from her former eagerness that her mother could not understand it until she noticed the boatman's call.

He was crying: "Come along! Come along! Ride clear round the pond. Only 5 cents for ladies and gents! Children thrown in!"

Apples as Omens.

In parts of England many quaint superstitions still center round the apple. Apples hung on strings and twirled before the fire are said to fall off in the order that the marriages of the various owners will proceed. An apple eaten before a looking glass is supposed to give a view of the inquirer's future husband, who will be seen peeping over milady's shoulder. Peel safely taken from an apple, tossed three times round the head and thrown to the ground unbroken forms the first letter of a future lover's name. A more recent, though hardly more serious, custom necessitates a bowl of water in which are floating a number of apples. Mothers must drop forks into the bowl from a distance of about four feet. If the fork pierces an apple the feat is believed to protect the performer's children from catching cold.—London Scraps.

Early English Scare.

In 1370 a report was circulated that "certain galleys, with a multitude of armed men therein, were lying off the foreland of Thanet," and an order was at once issued that "every night watch shall be kept between the Tower of London and Billingsgate, with forty men at arms and sixty archers." The watch was kept in the following order: "Tuesday, the drapers and the tailors; Wednesday, the mercers and the apothecaries; Thursday, the fishmongers and the butchers; Friday, the pewterers and the vintners; Saturday, the goldsmiths and the saddlers; Sunday, the ironmongers, the armorers and the cutlers; Monday, the tawers, the spurriers, the bowyers and the girdlers." Even in 1616 pirate vessels were captured off the Kentish coast, between Broadstairs and Margate.—London Chronicle.

The Label-Language.

"There's a language in hotel labels, the same as in stamps or flowers," said a courier. "All over Europe the hotel porters paste the hotel labels on your trunks in such a way that the porters in future towns will know what sort of a tipper you are.

"Up at the top of the trunk the label means you are generous. In the middle it means you're a middling sort. Down very low it means you are no good."

Willing to Help.

"Ma, what are the folks in our church gettin' up a subscription for?"

"To send our minister on a vacation to Europe."

"Won't there be no church services while he's gone?"

"No, dear."

"Ma, I got $1.23 in my bank. Can I give that?"—Cleveland Leader.

Franklin and the Balloon.

When the balloon was first discovered some one said to Franklin, "What will ever come of it?" Franklin pointed to a baby in its cradle and said, "And what will ever come of that?"

A Truthful Sign.

Mr. Longear—By the way, did you ever know that large ears are a sign of generosity? Miss Beauti—of course, Mr. Longear. They are a sign that nature has been generous.

The Spelling Class.

Teacher—Spell coincidence, Willie. Willie—I can't spell it, but I can tell what it means. Teacher—Well, then, what does it mean? Willie—Twins.—Judge.

He who relies on posterity to do him justice will not feel the pain of disappointment.—Puck.

WOMEN AND CARDS.

The Newest Fad of the Fashionable Set in New York.

Card playing for money among the fashionable women of New York has become such a craze that they have found it expedient to emulate the example of their husbands and brothers to that extent that there are few games now that "kitty" doesn't play an important part—that is to say, a percentage of the stakes goes to pay for a hired room and refreshments.

The big Broadway and Fifth avenue hotels are the scenes of many quiet little games of bridge these wintry afternoons, and here is how they are arranged: Women who launch upon shopping or calling tours in the morning hours agree to meet for luncheon at some well known hotel. One woman in the party is designated as cashier, and she pays the bills. While the luncheon is in progress orders are given that a room be reserved and the furniture so arranged that one or two tables of bridge can be indulged in.

Play starts, and the cashier of the party "cuts" each hand or pot until a sum sufficient to defray the cost of the luncheon, hire of the room and whatever refreshments might be ordered while the game is on has been provided for.

The Waldorf-Astoria, the Knickerbocker and the New Astor of the Broadway hotels and the Plaza, St. Regis and Gotham are the favorite rendezvous just at present for those women who wish to buck the tiger outside the prosy confines of their homes.

"Yes, afternoon bridge parties have become quite the rage," said one of the managers at the Waldorf a few days ago. "It is such an easy matter for women to meet in the restaurant and then adjourn to a private room for a quiet game of bridge.

"Run a 'kitty?' Oh, dear, yes, and there are many lively scenes, I am told, when some grand dame who happens to be losing thinks that the kitty is getting more than its share."—New York World.

Alaska's Wealth of Coal.

Alaska contains the only first class bituminous and anthracite coal on the Pacific coast. From the Bering river district railroads can be built to the sea, not more than 110 miles long, over perfectly level country, and, according to a published statement by Alfred H. Brooks, head of the government's geological survey work in Alaska, there are 6,000,000,000 tons of it in both fields—more than one and a half times all the coal that has ever been taken out of Pennsylvania. Two-thirds of this has been filed upon by claimants—that is, as much coal as has so far come from the mines of Pennsylvania Mr. Brooks estimates to be worth a dollar a ton as it lies; that is, he estimates the coal in the two fields at $0,000,000,000.—McClure's.

A London Fog.

Six thousand tons of coal, it is said, are in suspension in the London atmosphere every day during the winter months—enough to encourage any fog—and 2,000,000 chimneys, all burning soft coal, are throwing off incessant volumes of smut laden smoke. These are the things that scientific people talk about when they try to explain fogs. And then they go on to tell us that fogs are expensive, that they cost London £5,000,000 a year, that a single day's fog causes the metropolis to consume enough gas and electricity in excess of her ordinary requirements to supply a town of 50,000 population for twelve months and that fogs leave behind them a deposit of six tons to the square mile.—London Post.

The Paris Apaches.

Police of Courbevoie, a suburb of Paris, noticed two burglars climbing into the garden of an uninhabited house one night. They called up their dogs and made for the burglars, but the burglars had brought trained dogs with them, too, and their dogs raised the alarm. A pitched battle between the police and the Apaches and the police dogs and the Apache dogs took place. The two burglars were arrested, but their dogs left one of the police dogs dead on the field and escaped. The police have information that a large number of dogs have recently been trained by malefactors to fight the trained dogs of the police and to help their masters, the Apaches, to break the laws.

He Wouldn't Sue Them.

In a sketch of Admiral Seaton Schroeder the New York Globe says: "The following story rests on no more substantial foundation than fleet gossip. But just before the fleet left for that trip around the world there was some newspaper talk of a possible clash with Japan. The yarn goes that a highly placed person asked Schroeder in the course of a chat what he would do if the Japs fired on his ship. Schroeder sniffed. 'They won't fire on my ship,' said he positively. 'But if they did?' 'Now,' said Schroeder angrily, 'if they did, hey? What the dickens do you think I'd do—sue 'em?'"

Voting by Electricity.

It is proposed that the French chamber of deputies shall vote by electricity in future. A screen containing the names of the deputies will be placed near the secretaries' table, and against each name will be five spaces, marked "Present," "Absent," "Yes," "No," "Vote Uncontested." At the beginning of each session when the deputy takes his seat he will press a button in front of him and so record his presence. Then at the time of the vote he will vote "Yes," "No" or his wish to abstain by pressing the necessary button.

A RACE FOR FAME.

How Robert Barr Managed to Get a Book to a Friend.

Robert Barr, the novelist, was one day at Euston station, London, to say goodby to Dr. McKenzie of McGill university, who was taking the steamer train for Liverpool, thence to sail for the United States. As they walked up and down the long platform together, says a writer who tells the story in Leslie's, Dr. McKenzie said jocularly:

"Let us go to the bookstall and see if any of your immortal works are there. If they are I'll buy one to take across with me. If they are not I'll tell all your friends on the other side that your supposed British reputation is a sham."

The two walked to the bookstall and examined it carefully, but nothing with the name of Barr was found.

The novelist was annoyed and would have entered a protest, but the doctor claimed that that was against the rules of the game. Time was short, and Dr. McKenzie took his place in the train. Mr. Barr bade him goodby and then made direct for the bookstall to give the dealer a piece of his mind, but as he glanced casually at the array of books in the most prominent place he saw a row of one of his novels.

The whistle had sounded. The train was in motion. There was no time for paying anything, so Mr. Barr grabbed his book and ran like mad up the long platform. The energetic railway officials thought he was a belated passenger and determined to throw him into the train. Doors in the moving carriages were flung open, and officials yelled frantically, "Jump in, anywhere!"

It took great agility, but Mr. Barr succeeded. Dr. McKenzie was leaning out of his window, thinking from the outcry that some one had been killed, when Mr. Barr came alongside and said politely, if breathlessly, "Mac, allow me to present you with a token of esteem."

Panting, but triumphant, Mr. Barr strolled back to the bookstall.

"Didn't some one steal a book from you a moment ago?" he asked.

"Yes," cried the indignant stallkeeper, "and he's bolted off to America with it!"

"Why don't you telegraph a description of him to Liverpool? It will be hours before the train is there," suggested Mr. Barr sympathetically.

"Description! I didn't see anything but his back and his legs."

"Oh, well, let it go!" said Mr. Barr airily. "It was a good book, for I wrote it myself, so I'll pay for it." And he laid down the money.

Tong Gun Men.

The accuracy of aim among the gun men of the Chinese tongs was remarked on recently by a visitor to Chinatown, says a New York letter. "Yes," replied a man who knows his Chinatown, "there was a time when the Chinese gunner shut his eyes tight and blazed away. Likely as not he hit a bystander. But practice has changed that. If you were to walk over to the neutral territory of the Bowery you would find on almost any good day a Chinese or two practicing in the little shooting galleries over there. The chances are ten to one that they would be tong gunners keeping their hands in. A Chinese who is not gun shy will almost invariably develop into a skilled marksman."

Brain of Humans and of Animals.

Professor Ranke some time ago brought out a new fact concerning the brain of a man as compared with that of other animals. It has long been known that the brain of a man does not weigh as much as that of a whale or an elephant and that there are birds and apes whose brains are heavier than a man's in proportion to the weight of their bodies. But Professor Ranke showed that the way to reveal the actual superiority of the human brain is to compare its weight with that of the spinal cord. Measured in this way, man's brain is proportionately far heavier than that of any of the lower animals.—Harper's Weekly.

Some Maine Names.

If the youngsters of today succeed in mastering the spelling of some of the lakes and rivers of the state they will be fitted for any task. A recent lesson given by the principal of Bar Harbor high school included the following names: Androscoggin, Umbagog, Sagadahoc, Mooselookmeguntic, Mattawamkeag, Passadumkeag, Piscataquis, Katahdin, Chesuncook, Mattamiscontis, Pemadumcook, Sourdnahunk, Sisladobsis, Baskahegan, Molechunkemunk, Cobosseecontee, Pecomsoonshine, Meddybemps, Norridgewock and Nahmakanta. Anything ought to be possible after that.—Kennebec Journal.

Grape Growing.

Growing of grapes in graperies furnishes an important source of revenue in some countries, notably Belgium and the channel islands, where large quantities are annually grown and exported. The United States is a good customer for them. Grape growing in pots is much practiced in parts of Europe and especially in France, where the vines are largely used for decorative purposes on festive occasions.

Patents Too Expensive.

"Patents cost too much," said an inventor. "It should be as cheap to patent an invention as to copyright a book. Many a man hits on a good invention and then is afraid to risk his money patenting it.

"Do you know what it costs to protect an invention—to protect it all over the world? It costs $2,200, and it requires the taking out of no less than sixty seven different patents."

WALKED IN HIS SLEEP

Son of Ed O'Hara Took a Midnight Walk in His Sleep Last Week.

Traveled About Twenty Blocks in Weather Far Below Zero.

Barefoot and clad only in a nightshirt, Raymond O'Hara, the thirteen year old son of Ed O'Hara, the drayman, walked over a mile between the hours of one and two last Friday morning, when the thermometer stood about 15 degrees below zero.

The young boy had a dream that his father had asked him to go for a doctor to attend his mother, who was sick, and he arose from his bed while asleep and started upon the journey. The O'Hara's live over near the Knox school and the boy went north to the Red Lake river, a distance of about nine blocks. When he reached the river he awoke, but being somewhat bewildred he did not make a straight path home and traveled a distance of about eleven blocks while making the return trip. When he arrived home his feet were quite badly frozen and he was thoroughly chilled. He will suffer no bad effects from his midnight journey, however.

Returned from the West.

O. M. Evenson returned last week from his trip to the Pacific coast country. There were parts of the west that he liked, but property is so high out there that he did not believe a man with moderate means could do much. He saw many former residents of this section in the west and most of them were prosperous. Mons Bothun who formerly conducted a store here, but now lives at Turlock, Cal., has done better than any of the others. He went to California and purchased considerable land when it was cheap, and the increase in value has made him wealthy. At Seattle he saw John E. Burke, who is now engaged in the maufacture of iron beds and is doing a prosperous business.

GOVERNMENT EXPERIMENT

Allowing Part of the Saloons to Operate in the Indian Territory on Experiment.

Indian Commissioner and Special Officer Write Concerning Matter.

There has been considerable complaint, in the territory which was recently declared "Indian country" through the operation of the Indian department, and some are inclined to score Special Officer Johnson and the officials of the department for their apparantly partial actions in closing some of the saloons and allowing others in the same district to continue to sell liquor.

The special officer and the commissioner of Indian affairs have explained their position, in letters to a resident of Detroit, Minn., which are printed in the Detroit Record as follows:

Salt Lake City, Utah,
January 17, 1910.

Mr. Dave Hage,
Detroit, Minn.

Dear Sir: I note your letter of December 17 requesting that no saloons be permitted to violate the treaty provision in your city. Your suggestion will receive consideration.

Your attention, however, is called to the fact that we are not attempting a strict enforcement of the treaty, theory being to make use of it only so far as may be necessary to protect the interests of the Indians. I am not charged with the enforcement of any law. These treaties cover a large part of the state of Minnesota. We have left these four saloons at Detroit largely as an experiment.—If the experiment is successful, they will not be disturbed. If, however, either Indians or bootleggers continue to secure supplies of liquor at Detroit, we shall not hesitate to close up these four saloons that are left.

I would appreciate it if you would provide me with all the specific information that you can, from time to time, as to how this experiment is working.

Respectfully,
William E. Johnson,
Chief Special Officer.

Department of the Interior,
Office of Indian Affairs,
Washington, Feb. 4, 1910.

Hon. Knute Nelson,
United States Senate.

Sir: Replying further to your letter of December 20, enclosing a letter addressed to you by Mr. Dave Hage, of Detroit, Minnesota, with reference to the recent notice of Chief Special Officer Johnson that on and after December 27, Article 7 of the Treaty with the Chippewas of February 22, 1855, would be enforced in certain districts, including Detroit, Minnesota, I have the honor to advise you that I am in receipt of a support from the Chief Special Officer regarding this matter.

Mr. Johnson reports that his action of permitting some saloons to remain open was largely an experiment. The policy under which he is operating is to enforce the provisions of this Treaty only so far as may be necessary to protect the interest of the Indians, and that if the plan is not successful in any town, it is his intention to close up whatever saloons have been left in that town.

Mr. Johnson is of the opinion that eventually it may be necessary to close up all the saloons, which have been left in the selected towns. His idea was to follow as conservative a policy as possible, and avoid the appearance on behalf of the government of carrying things with a high hand.

I trust that no harm will result from the action of the Chief Special Officer, and if you will inform me of any wrong being done by reasons of the exceptions made, I shall be pleased to direct Mr. Johnson to close all the saloons, where the experiment is not a success.

Very Respectfully,
R. U. Valentine,
Commissioner.

WHAT ARE THE TIES FOR?

Great Northern Hauling Enough Ties Here to Construct 100 Miles of Railroad.

What is the Great Northern railway company going to do? That is what a whole lot of people living in this vicinity would like to know. This week train crews commenced hauling ties to the material yards near the location of the old depot, and before the work is completed in the neighborhood of 150,000 ties will be piled up there—enough to build 100 miles of road. Great Northern officials announce that these ties are to be used to replace old ties on this branch, but that hardly seems possible. All of the ties on this branch, with the exception from Thief River Falls to Red Lake Falls, are practically new, and then again this city would not be the most convenient place to pile up the ties, if they were to be used for this purpose.

For sometime past there have been rumors in circulation to the effect that the Great Northern was going to build a line from this city to Bagley and run a through passenger train from Warroad to the twin cities over this line instead of going by way of Crookston. And then of course the ties may be used for constructing a road northeast of here. There is no question, but that the country northeast will soon be occupied by a railroad, and while it has generally been believed that the Soo would be the road that would construct this line, it is possible that the Great Northern is not going to take a back seat in this section any longer.

Tobacco Seed Furnished Free.

Tobacco seed will be furnished free this year by the experiment station at St. Anthony Park to Minnesota farmers who wish to experiment with that crop. This seed is of the Connecticut Havana variety, grown in Wisconsin and raised in Sherburne county, Minn., for the past two years. Circulars giving instructions for care of seed bed transplanting, cultivating, etc., are also available for those wishing them.

Big Deal in Lumber.

A deal was closed recently whereby the H. C. Selden Lumber company, of Minneapolis, sold to the Bertram—Wright Lumber company, of this same city, all of the lumber yards of the former company in this vicinity. Among the yards disposed of were those at Plummer, Brooks, Strandquist, Karlstad, Newfolden, Halma and Viking.

Fishing Regulations on Lake of Woods.

The international fisheries regulations for the protection and preservation of food fishes in international boundary waters of the United States and Canada has been prepared by the joint commissioners, Prof. E. E. Prince and David Starr Jordan, under the authority of a treaty agreed upon in April, 1908. They will come into force by simultaneous proclamation at Washington and Ottawa on a date to be agreed upon. This will probably be January 1st, next.

The regulations applying to the Lake of the Woods, Rainy lake and Rainy river are as follows: The weight limit for whitefish shall be two pounds, for lake trout two pounds and the size limit for yellow pike shall be thirteen inches in length. No nets shall be used for commercial fishing in Rainy river. No nets shall be used within a radius of one half mile from the mouth of any river flowing into Rainy lake or Lake of the Woods and no nets shall extend more than one-third the distance across any bay or channel constituting a part of such waters. Trap nets are prohibited. After January 1st next, no gill nets of less than five inches mesh shall be used for whitefish or lake trout and no gill of less than four inches mesh for other fish. No gill net shall be set within one fourth of a mile from any pond net. There shall be closed a season on the Lake of the Woods and Rainy lake for all commercial fishing from October 16th to November 30th.

It is recommended that in the early future Canada and the United States shall adopt a concurrent and uniform system of licenses for fishing in treaty waters.—Warroad Plaindealer.

Didn't Like the West.

Herb Sterreker, of Fram, who about a month ago left here for the coast with the view of locating out there, returned last Thursday. He reports that he did not like Washington at all and would not give 10 acres of Marshall county land for a section out there. He did not like the cloudy, rainy winter weather and was glad to get back to Minnesota's bright sunshine.—Middle River Pioneer.

MAN BURNS TO DEATH

Was Employed in Construction Work on New Soo Line.

Gave His Name as Roy Motts and Said This City Was His Home.

Plummer Pioneer:—A young man about 18 or 19 years of age burned to death on Wednesday night of last week in an empty railroad camp about twelve miles southwest of Plummer on the New Soo Line now under construction. Such details of the happening as the Pioneer has been able to gather are rather meagre. The young man it seems showed up at Higgins camp in Gully about ten days before and wanted to take a job at station work. Not being able to do the work he was given a job around the headquarters camp as a kind of office boy. He gave his name as Roy Motts, and his residence as Thief River Falls, altho he had shipped out of Duluth.

He evidently thought that it was too slow a job gathering the filthy lucre by toil, so Wednesday, when there was nobody else around the camp, he helped himself to about $7 in change among which there was quite a bunch of pennies which later helped to indentify him, and struck out afoot evidently intending to walk to Plummer. About dusk he inquired from a farmer living there about the camp. The farmer told him where the camp was, but told him that there was no body there then. He evidently had started a hot fire and rolling himself up in some blankets had gone to sleep. The shack took fire from the over heated stove and he was very likely smothered without regaining consciousness. The body was not discovered until a couple of days later, when some of the men were sent over to see if the fire had left anything of value. Further particulars are not forthcoming at the present time and it is not sure that Thief River Falls is the young man's home. The body was burned beyond any hope of indentification the only means left being the pennies and a small piece of his clothing. There is no doubt tho that it is the young man that left camp that day.

NEW FAST MAIL TRAIN

Reported that Soo Is to Run a Fast Train on the Main Line.

Wheatline from This City to Kenmare to be Graveled for Fast Traffic.

It is reported in railroad circles that the Soo line is to put on a new fast mail train between St. Paul and Winnipeg. The train is to leave St. Paul between 10 and 11 o'clock in the evening and would arrive in Thief River Falls between six and seven o'clock in the morning. It is probable that one or two passenger coaches are to be attached to this train, but only a few stops are to be made and of course few towns would secure the benefit of the service. The new mail train is to be put on for the purpose of securing the mail hauling contract to Canadian northwest points and also the Pacific coast country.

It is further announced that the Wheatline from Thief River Falls is to be graveled the entire distance for fast traffic. This undoubtedly means that the Canadian Pacific will in short time run its through trains over the Wheatline to Thief River Falls and from here to Duluth over the new line and then over the Duluth and South Shore to Eastern Canadian points. This would shorten the distance between Vancouver and Montreal several hundred miles.

Why Cost of Living Is High.

While many are advancing theories to account for the high cost of living, Secretary Wilson, of the Department of Agriculture, is striking at the root of the trouble with his investigation and searching inquiry into the reasons underlying the unreasonable difference between the wholesale and retail price of food products. "Too many persons are engaged in the business of distribution," says Mr. Wilson. "What we need is more farming. Too many persons are rushing to town and city and trying to make a living there and not enough are stopping in the country. Too many persons are trying to get along without work and not enough of them are in the business of producing something. One man could do the business of distribution where twenty are now engaged in it. That is the reason that the cost of living is high and the people are complaining."

ARPIN GETS BIGCONTRACT

Will Build the Big Grygla Ditch in Next—Three Years.

Ditch When Completed Will Cost Nearly Three-Quarters of a Million.

A. M. Arpin secured the contract for building the big Grygla ditch Tuesday, his bid being 10.30 cents per yard. This is one of the biggest ditching contracts ever let in the United States, and the digging alone will amount to over $520,000. Other expenses, such as building roads, culverts and bridges will make the total cost in the neighborhood of $700,000.

Mr. Arpin agrees to complete the work inside of three years and will put two large dredges at work this spring. He has ordered over 1500 tons of coal and will have over 50 teams hauling this out from Holt inside of a week. This summer the ditch will be built through Mud and Elm lakes and these bodies of water will be drained entirely dry. Next summer there will be ten or twelve ditching machines at work on this job and by the fall of 1911 the work will be practically completed.

Mr. Arpin now has in the neighborhood of over a million dollars worth of ditch work in this vicinity at the present time—and he is looking for more.

Could Do For Herself.

She was a very delightful but a very aged lady—over ninety—and her friends and relatives and even chance acquaintances, drawn by her exquisite personality, all did her homage and, as the saying is, "waited on her hand and foot."

She accepted it all very graciously, but with some inward rebellion, for to a very old and close mouthed friend she once said, with a quaint pucker of lips and brows:

"I am reminded sometimes of the old lines:

"Twa were blowin' at her nose,
And three were bucklin' at her shoon."

THE NEWS

BY JOHN W. EASTMAN

ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

There are quite a number of candidates for the office of lieutenant governor. This is an important office and we hope to see the best man win.

Funny thing about the high price of food stuff is that in 1897 you could buy anything you wanted at about your own price and in the cities you could get a very good meal for ten cents, and yet there were more people went hungry in those days than now. They did not have the ten cents. —Roseau Times.

The Sunbeam informs the public that John A. Duffy, of Red Lake Falls, will not be a candidate for the legislature this year. Mr. Duffy is contented in being a candidate for this office in off years, serving Red Lake Falls as mayor, and governing the board of county commissioners.

Never since Alexander the Great entered Babylon, with the one exception of Julius Caesar's return from his campaign in Gaul, has the continent of Europe been so stirred up by the prospect of a visitor as it is now in arranging for the reception of Theodore Roosevelt, says William E. Curtis in an article in the Chicago Record Herald. Kings and Emperors, college professors and scientists, soldiers and statesmen, learned societies and legislative assemblies are preparing to give him a triumphant welcome. He has received invitations from nearly every city of prominence in the United Kingdom and the principal countries of Europe. He has been asked to lecture at universities. He has been invited to banquets and to balls. He will be the guest of the Khedive of Egypt, the King of Greece, the King of Italy, the Emperor of Austria, the Emperor of Germany, the President of France, the King of England and various other potentates of lesser importance. Theodore Roosevelt is today the best known and undoubtly the most popular man in the world, and his triumphal invasion of Europe has no parallel in history. No private citizen of any country has ever been offered the honors and attentions he will receive, and he will bear them off as gallantly and as gracefully as any human being could do. General Grant received a great many honors, and he left a permanent impression upon every class of society wherever he went by his simple dignity, his reticence and the prestige of his military renown but Roosevelt represents the other extreme of American individuality and his reception and entertainment will correspond.

THIS COUNTRY'S HEAD MAN.

At New Haven, Conn., the other day an applicant for citizenship was asked:

"Who is the head man of this country?"

"Mr. Taft," he replied, "is the head man, but Mr. Roosevelt is coming back."

Our dispatch does not explain whether the applicant received his citizenship papers or not, but we take it for granted that they were issued. Certainly he could not have been denied the right of citizenship on the ground that he exhibited a lack of intelligence or unfamiliarity with political conditions as they exist or are in the near future to be pictured.—Chicago Record-Herald

Test Your Seed Corn.

Minnesota farmers are in danger of losing millions of dollars on their corn crop this year. Tests, which have been made on southern Minnesota seed corn prove that the corn is worthless as seed, as the result of a light frost, which occurred early last fall and was practically unnoticed at the time. Over how much of Minnesota's area this frost extended is not known. An effort will be made to discover this and the farmers will be warned.

HaveYou a Friend Afflicted With Asthma?

Frank S. Archibald, of West Swanzey, N. H., writes: "For the past five years I have suffered with Asthma almost constantly. I was so nervous at times I could hardly remain in my school. This disease coupled with the nervous strain to which teachers are always subjected made life almost unbearable. During a visit to my home in Hinsdale, Mr. Stern, a local druggist, called my attention to your White Wine of Tar Syrup. At first I was skeptical as I had tried almost everything with no permanent help. Finally I took home a bottle and the cure it effected seems almost miraculous to me after my former repeated disappointments.

I want to recommend your remedy to everyone who has been afflicted as I was for five years and I shall be glad to reply to inquiries regarding my case." Peoples Drug Store.

New Bank for Holt.

A meeting was held last Friday evening at the Peoples State Bank in this city, at which time a new financial institution to be known as the State Bank of Holt, was organized. Those present at the meeting were S. S. Kolden, C. H. Gunheim, John Sorum, R. Roierson, and A. Carlson, of Holt, H. P. Sponheim Oscar Sponheim, H. Loken, E. O. Gullingsrud and D. B. Bakke, of this city.

It was decided to erect a bank building and start doing business on the 1st day of June, S. S. Kolden, John Sorum and H. P. Sponheim to have charge of the building. The following officers of the bank were elected:

President—Oscar Sponheim.

Vice President—D. B. Bakke.

Cashier—S. S. Kolden.

Directors—H. P. Sponheim, H. Loken and C. H. Gunheim.

Contractor James Brady, of Red Lake Falls, was in the city Tuesday attending to some business matters.

A Big Farm Land Deal.

Warren Register: The big Woodward farm, or, as it is also known, the Snake River Farm, located in the town of Warrenton, was sold last week by the heirs of the late F. W. Woodward and E. S. Pratt, of New York, to Andrew Melgaard, of this city, for a consideration of $115,000. The number of acres transferred is 3,600, eleven quarter sections having been previously sold to neighboring farmers. All the personal property on the farm is included in the purchase, and this of itself is no small item, as the farm is one of the best equiped bonanza farms in the valley. The extensive farm buildings and other permanent improvements are also valuable. Included in the purchase is also the big grain elevator in this city. Considering the improvements, the value of the personal property, and the further fact that the land is the cream of the valley, the price is certainly very low. Since the death of Mr. Woodward, who was a practical farmer and an efficient manager, none of the owners have had any inclination to give personal attention to the farm, hence were anxious to dispose of it. Mr. Melgaard has acquired a very good property. It is his intention to subdivide the farm and dispose of it in small tracts to actual settlers, but until that can be done he will operate it himself.

Capt. Bogardus again hits the Bull's Eye

This world famous rifle shot who holds the championship record of 100 pigeons in 100 consecutive shots is living at Lincoln, Ill. Recently interviewed, he says: —"I have suffered a long time with kidney and bladder trouble and have used several well known kidney medicines all of which gave me no relief until I started taking Foley's Kidney Pills. Before I used Foley's Kidney Pills I was subjected to severe backache and pains in my kidneys with suppression and often-times a cloudy voiding. While upon arising in the morning I would get dull headaches. Now I have taken three bottles of Foley's Kidney Pills and feel 100 per cent better. I am never bothered with my kidneys or bladder and once more feel like my own self. All this I owe solely to Foley's Kidney Pills and always recommend them to my fellow sufferers". FARM ORCHARD AND GARDEN
REGISTER, ROCKFORD, IA.
CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED

[This matter must not be reprinted without special permission.]

TO PREVENT APPLE SCAB.

There may be some readers of these notes who have orchards which have been neglected for some time past and in which scab and other fungous pests hold sway, not only reducing the size of the fruit produced, but greatly injuring its quality. To right these ills one must spray the trees within the two or three weeks before the blossom buds open with the bordeaux mixture. This is made of blue vitriol (copper sulphate), lime and water and is prepared as follows: Slack five pounds of fresh stone lime in a tight box or small barrel, using care that it does not burn in the process, for the finer and more creamy its texture the better the mixture therefrom will be. When thoroughly slacked, dilute to twenty-five gallons, preferably in the small barrel in which the slacking has been done. Next dissolve five pounds of the copper sulphate in two or three gallons of water and dilute to twenty-five gallons. This may be done in a fifty-five gallon vinegar barrel and the diluted lime mixture added, the contents being stirred thoroughly as each pailful is poured in. When all of the lime-water has been added and the contents have been thoroughly stirred the mixture should be tested by taking a little of it in a small dish and adding a few drops of prussiate of potash, a deadly poison. If a chocolate brown precipitate results it means that there is not enough lime in the mixture, and enough should be added so that the portion tested will not turn the reddish brown. However, in making many tests of this kind the writer has never got the brown precipitate when the above amount of lime was used. For small operations the barrel spray outfit will likely be used, and the solution should be strained through a twenty mesh copper strainer or two thicknesses of gunny sacking. Where the operations are on a large scale the above "5-5-50" receipt, as it is called, may be multiplied as occasion may require. In this case a saturated stock solution of the copper sulphate may be kept on hand, made by suspending in a sack in a keg of water more of the chemical than will dissolve. A gallon and two-thirds of this solution will give the necessary five pounds of the copper sulphate, while enough of the lime solution should be added so that the chocolate precipitate will not result when a few drops of the prussiate of potash are added. The solution should be kept agitated while it is being used and should be applied to the trees under heavy pressure. Where orchards are badly infested with scab, sooty blotch and other fungous pests a second and even a third treatment should be given with the bordeaux, it being well to add paris green to that applied just after the blossoms fall, in order to kill the larvae of the codling moth. Spraying treatment of this kind will do wonders for the fruit of a neglected orchard, and the showing on the books will be changed from loss to profit.

A NEW APPLE CLASSIFICATION.

At the recent national apple show held at Spokane, Wash., various resolutions were adopted tending to foster the development of the apple industry, and among the most important were those outlining a new and what it is hoped will be uniformly adopted as the country's apple classification. The resolutions were as follows: "First, that our apples be packed in three grades. Second, that the said grades be named 'extra fancy,' 'choice' and 'orchard run.' Third, that where the words 'extra fancy' are stamped on a box it shall signify that the apples when packed were sound, uniformly graded as to size in each box, smooth, practically free from bruises, worms, worm stings or disease and have reasonably proper shape for the variety, fully matured; all red varieties in this grade shall be at least 50 per cent red, except Spitzenburgs, Winesaps, Jonathans and Arkansas Blacks, which shall be at least 70 per cent red; Yellow Newtons, White Winter Pearmains, Grimes' Goldens, Belleflowers, Ortleys, Winter Bananas and Red Cheek pippins will be allowed in this grade. Fourth, that the 'choice' grade shall consist of apples sound, uniformly graded as to size in each box, free from any breaks in the skin or black bruises, also free from worms or any disease which materially injures the quality of the apple. Fifth, that where for any reason the grower or packer does not care to use the 'extra fancy' or 'choice' grades we recommend the varieties be packed in one grade, termed 'orchard run,' which shall apply to apples free from worms or any disease which materially injures the quality of the apple and these not smaller than five tier nor less than two inches in diameter."

A piece of alum placed in the drinking water of the flock of poultry every three or four weeks will serve as a preventive of lung and throat diseases.

There are a good many pretty unprofitable propositions, but about the most no account thing is a good for nothing cur. He has no excuse for being on top of the ground.

Preliminary surveys are being made for an irrigation project in the Big Bend district in the state of Washington which, when completed, will water 500,000 acres of very rich land. The system will require several years to complete and will cost many millions of dollars.

One should never buy from unknown parties so far away from home that he cannot reach them with a club in way of recourse in case the stuff he gets is not satisfactory. Many who bite on the low price bait forget this fact sometimes and can only grind their teeth when disappointed.

Nebraska is going through the usual change from a grain raising to a stock and dairy state, as shown by her output last year of 30,000,000 pounds of butter. This is not a large output of butter as compared with some other states, but it is a very creditable showing and indicates a move in the right direction.

The hired man employed on the place should not only be able to do the work assigned him creditably, but should be clean of mind and mouth if he is not to be a source of contamination to the young folks in the home, who are really of much more importance than any of the fine stock raised on the premises.

We know of more than one instance where the man of the house has been too poor to subscribe for a journal for his wife costing 2 cents a week when he does not bat an eyelid at handing from $1 to $2 a week over the counter for chewing and smoking tobacco. This is a mighty one sided proposition, if there ever was one.

Many folks reach middle life or past without seeming to realize the very simple fact that the laying by of a sum for a rainy day or for future business operations depends on having receipts exceed expenditures by a modest margin each year. Circumstances may arise which make it impossible to carry out such a plan uninterruptedly, but it will prove helpful if such a purpose is kept always in mind.

It need hardly be said that the orchards in the favored valleys of the west, which have been known to yield a net revenue of as high as $1,500 per acre in a single season, are not also used as hog lots and calf pastures. While one hears of dual purpose cows and dual purpose hens, there is no such thing in the famous apple sections referred to as a dual purpose fruit ranch. It is to this fact largely that the success achieved is due.

In addition to agricultural resources which are shown in the production of 90,000,000 bushels of wheat in 1909, the state of North Dakota is rated by those who have investigated the matter to contain 31,240 square miles of lignite coal, a carboniferous deposit that is geologically about halfway in process of formation between peat and soft coal. This enormous deposit of fuel, which is bound to prove a potent factor in the industrial development of the state, is worth 90 cents a ton at the mine and is put in the bin of the consumer at $2.75 per ton.

When a home seeker has not positive knowledge beforehand of the character of the subsoil in the new country in which he plans to locate he will do well to postpone closing any deal on a piece of land until such time as he can bore down from four to six feet and find out what lies beneath. Not infrequently have land purchases been made in winter when the ground was frozen hard and covered with snow, which on the coming of warmer weather developed into bogs or stretches of sand and hardpan. Caution in this respect will often avert costly as well as bitter experience.

There is no factor vitally affecting the perpetuity of America as a nation that begins to compare in importance with that having to do with conserving the home life of the nation—through checking the pestilence of divorce, purifying and remolding the home and changing it from the roosting place it so often is to an altar where the fires of home life and love burn with a pure and steady light. We need to develop the conservation policy with reference to the husbanding of our material resources as a nation, but even more are we in need of the beneficent influence of better homes.

The heavy snows and severe weather quite prevalent throughout the northern states and keeping stock from the usual range in stalk fields and meadows are calling attention very forcibly to some method of utilizing the stalk roughage of the farm in such way as will put the handling of it beyond interruption by deep snows or other unfavorable weather conditions. The method that will do this more satisfactorily than any other is the silo, the installation of which on a farm will double the feeding value of every acre of corn. As land prices advance and soil fertility becomes depleted the silo will be viewed as a necessity on every farm in the corn belt, where feeding operations are carried on to an extent worth mentioning.

The Silver Flagon

A Wonderful Treasure It Held For Many Years.

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Great-aunt Hannah squinted horribly, so when with almost her last breath she looked earnestly at her three grandnieces and gasped, "The silver flagon is for you—it has never been opened—you know the legend," not one of us really knew to whom the heirloom rightfully belonged.

In the library the two executors conferred amiably together. In the kitchen the servants discussed the legacies they had received.

In the long parlor Amelia, Fanny and I sat in front of the glowing grate fire. On the white marble mantelpiece above our heads stood a pair of precious Dresden vases, a Wedgwood clock and a Chinese fan. In the center, directly under the painting of Mrs. Dorothy Fabyan, was the silver flagon, flawless in shape and perfect in its chaste design of vine and leaf and clustered fruit. Its polished surface gave back a distorted reflection of our three faces, ruddy in the firelight.

No mention had yet been made of Aunt Hannah's belated disposition of the family heirloom. It was not mentioned in the will, and its ownership must be settled among the three of us.

It was Amelia who broke the long, awkward silence by reaching up a graceful arm and taking the silver flagon from its resting place.

"I am the eldest," she apologized, settling back in her chair, "and I am quite sure that Aunt Hannah meant me to have it. She looked at me." Amelia's tone was coolly defiant.

"She looked at me, too," said Fanny in gentle protest. "I am sure she looked at me, did she not, Esther?"

I shrugged my shoulders helplessly. "I thought she looked at me," I murmured feebly.

"No one could gaze in three different directions at one time," said Amelia impatiently.

"Aunt Hannah could," I announced loyally.

"For shame, Esther Fabyan!" they cried in duet, and then they turned their backs upon me and fell into whispered converse over the probable contents of the bone of contention—of course I mean the silver flagon.

The tall silver stopper fitted snugly to the neck, and around it was a thin stream of red sealing wax.

The silver flagon had once been the property of Mistress Dorothy Fabyan, our sweet ancestress, and tradition had it that within its polished interior the fair Dorothy had secreted the precious jewels which her rich husband had lavished upon her. When she was dying she had given the flagon to her young daughter, saying:

"Guard well the flagon, daughter, and when you have reached years of discretion you may break the seal and learn the contents—rubies and diamonds and pearls. Let no other woman steal it away from you! It contains what all women desire and but few attain. It will be yours."

"And it belonged to you, mother, dear?" the young girl had timidly asked as she stroked the delicate, withered cheek.

Dorothy Fabyan had smiled proudly ere she closed her beautiful eyes forever. "Aye, it was mine for a season," she said.

The young daughter had died in her teens, and the silver flagon, with its seal still unbroken, passed to a distant branch of the family, gay townspeople, who took small notice of Cousin Dorothy's bequest save to thrust it away on the top shelf of a cupboard and forget its existence.

And thus it had come down to us, the last of a long line. At times its history had been forgotten, and for years it would remain merely an ornament on sideboard or mantelpiece. Again some new owner would look longingly at the seal, yet hesitate to break in upon the secret it had concealed.

Aunt Hannah had owned it last, and she was so choice of it that never did vandal finger touch its surface or careless dust cloth even approach its throne on the white marble. No hand save Aunt Hannah's own came in contact with the silver flagon.

And now Amelia and Fanny turned it this way and that and gently tapped the stopper, guessing idly at the contents.

Amelia looked longingly at the red seal. "I believe it contains the old Fabyan jewels—it was never known what became of them after the war. I have heard that Dorothy Fabyan stripped the gems from their settings and concealed them somewhere. It is likely she hid them in this flagon. How strange that no one has cared enough about them to investigate its contents!"

"Suppose we leave the seal unbroken," I suggested.

"Why should we do that?" asked Fanny, with wide open eyes.

"It never has been opened," I said lamely. "So many of the Fabyan women have owned the flagon and respected the seal of its contents, why should we open it?"

"Because its ownership must be decided among us," replied Amelia firmly. "The Fabyan women passed the flagon down from mother to daughter, leaving the secret to be discovered by the one who cared to open it. I confess that the curiosity of all my ancestors seems concentrated within me at this very instant, and open the flagon I must!"

"Me, too," added Fanny.

"I suppose that is the best way," I agreed. "We are the last of the race, and none of us is married. Let us at least satisfy our curiosity."

"Besides that, we must divide the contents or decide upon the ownership of the flagon, since you will not recognize that I have an individual claim," Amelia drew a silver penknife from her pocket and opened a shining blade.

"Or that I have a claim," put in Fanny decidedly.

"Or mine," I added.

"We must compromise." Amelia's voice was growing colder, and involuntarily I drew nearer the grate and poked the fire into greater warmth. "Let us divide the contents into two parts and call the flagon itself a third part, each of us to agree to be entirely satisfied with her share. Do you agree?"

"I do," said Fanny promptly.

"Sight unseen?" I queried.

Amelia nodded emphatically.

"Very well. I agree."

"I am the eldest. I shall take first choice," began Amelia, with a slight flush on her lovely face. "I choose half of the contents of the flagon."

"I am next," cried Fanny eagerly. "I will take the other half of the contents. And you, Esther, what will you choose?" she asked magnanimously.

"I—I will take the silver flagon," I responded humbly, and they seemed very well satisfied.

We gathered about Amelia's chair as she chipped at the sealing wax with her penknife. She flung the crimson bits into the fire, and it made little white hot sheets of flame that darted up the black mouthed chimney like a short life that is quickly burned out or a woman's fragile beauty that flares for a brief period and then dies away, leaving gray ashes.

When the wax was broken and the stopper had been with difficulty loosened from the slender neck of the vessel in turn we peered down the slender orifice and saw nothing. We shook the flagon and heard nothing. We turned it upside down, and nothing happened.

"It is empty," said Amelia, with a white face.

"Perhaps the jewels are stuck fast to the bottom," I suggested. "You know they have been interred for a century."

"Get your curling tongs, Fanny," commanded Amelia, darting a hostile glance in my direction.

I looked into the glowing coals, wondering at the magic of possession that had seized upon us three cousins who had been loving friends from childhood. Here we were wrangling over the possession of a silver flagon to which we had scarcely ever given a thought in our busy lives. Thanks to Great-aunt Hannah, we were rich beyond our wildest dreams, and still we could not be satisfied without prying into Dorothy Fabyan's silver flagon!

Fanny returned with the long silver tongs that were used to wave her straight black hair. "They should reach to the very bottom of the jug!" she cried excitedly.

Once more we bent above the silver flagon while Amelia thrust the tongs carefully down the slender neck and after a painful interval drew forth a folded slip of yellowed paper covered with fine pointed chirography.

Fanny and Amelia leaned back pale and breathless while I spelled out the spidery words that explained how Dorothy Fabyan, that clever housewife of so many decades ago, had discovered a most wonderful complexion wash—"Cleopatra's Balm of Beauty" she called it. To this marvelous face wash she ascribed her own exquisite beauty. The ingredients were almost impossible to obtain in those primitive days, and she had even sold her precious jewels to obtain the necessary elements of the balm. Now, she passed the secret of its making to her own daughter and afterward down to the coming generations of the women of her family, and, as if the mere possession of the recipe sealed within the silver flagon could impart a magic spell upon its owner, the Fabyan women had been famous for their wonderful beauty—all save poor Great-aunt Hannah and myself.

"What greater jewels doth any woman possess," concluded the old, old letter, "than diamond eyes, teeth of pearls, coral cheeks and ruby lips? These jewels you will find sealed within my silver flagon."

I ran my eye over the carefully compiled directions for "Cleopatra's Balm of Beauty," and ere I reached its close Amelia uttered a little angry cry and snatched the bit of paper from my grasp. In an instant it fluttered into the fire, and my exclamation of distress brought both girls to my side.

"You could not care for that silly recipe, Esther," wondered Fanny. "See, you have the beautiful silver flagon, while we have nothing. Yet we hoped for gems."

"Jewels you both have a-plenty," I said mournfully. "Look there!" I turned them about till they faced the tall pier glass set between the long windows, and there they stood regarding their beautiful faces in charming embarrassment while I bent above the silver flagon and stared defiantly at the reflection of my own plain features in its polished surface.

"Great-aunt Hannah never knew either," I marveled, thinking of her homely face and the contrasted beauty of her unselfish life.

"Poor old Esther," comforted the girls, poised on either arm of my chair, and as their kisses fell warmly on my uplifted face I seemed not to care that I had lost a heritage of beauty. My heritage of love was still my own.

VIEWS OF LADY PETERSENS

Swedish Noblewoman Says Americans Are Hard to Understand and That Many Do Not Know Themselves.

SWEDEN.

Lady Hedvig af Petersens, a Swedish noblewoman who is at present on a lecture tour in some of the principal cities of the east and west in the United States, stated in a recent interview that she is very well pleased with America, but claims that the Americans do not know themselves as yet. Says Miss Petersens: "Americans are hard for us to understand and so is their life. It is so complex, you know, and you are developing so that you do not understand yourselves. So how can one expect a foreigner on a brief visit to pass judgment? I know that I am well pleased not only with my own people, but the real Americans. I am glad to see the Swedish immigrants do so well in America. The second generation, I believe, are the finest young people I ever have seen. They will make the best type of American citizens, for they are intelligent, progressive and law abiding. Many of them, however, do not know themselves. They don't understand themselves and the reason I think, is that they have not studied their forefathers. They must know of their ancestry, it seems to me, to know themselves. I don't mean that they should cherish Swedish ideas and Swedish speech so as to neglect in any manner their American patriotism, but they can keep in touch with their own people and at the same time be excellent Americans. College men and others with whom I have talked have made similar observations, and think that some of the second generation are not accomplishing all they can because they do not know themselves."

One of the most important travel books of the season is the story of Dr. Sven Hedin's discoveries and adventures in Tibet, which he has brought out in two volumes under the general title "Trans-Himalaya." Besides being a closely woven, carefully prepared account of the achievements of a scientific explorer, geographer and ethnologist, this work is an entertainingly told story of startling experiences, exciting adventures, and really remarkable achievements in the field of exploration. The expedition of this Swedish explorer started in August, 1906, entering the Forbidden Land from the northwest. He thoroughly explored the country, penetrating with the aid of his thirty-seven Asiatic followers into section in which not only had no western man ever trod, but in which the existence, even, of Europe was unknown. Dr. Hedin's description of his meeting with the Tashi Lama shows that head of the Buddhist church to be "not a divinity in human form, but a man who in kindness of heart, innocence, and purity approaches as near as possible to perfection." These two volumes are almost literally crowded with illustration, largely from photographs, but in many cases reproduced from drawings and water color sketches by the author. There are 388 illustrations and ten maps of the entire work.

A recent number of a Stockholm paper, published the population of 95 towns and cities in Sweden. Of these 68 have had an increase during the year of 1909 from 3 townships of 1,257 and 10 have had a decrease during the same time from 4 townships of 124. Stockholm stands at the head with a population of 340,000 and seems to about have held its own. The second in size is Gothenburg with a population of 163,999, an increase of 1,257. The emigration from Stockholm during the year of 1909 was 15,802 against 7,179 the previous year.

Dr. Sven Hedin, whose new book we have referred to in a previous item, delivered a lecture on his trip into the heart of Asia before a distinguished audience in Rome Jan. 30, consisting among others of King Emmanuel, the ecclesiastic minister and a large number of distinguished scientists and literary men of Italy. The lecturer was greeted with enthusiastic applause and after the lecture was over Dr. Hedin was presented by the gold medal of the Italian Geographical society which was awarded by the king in person.

An ordination service was recently held in the Cathedral church in Stockholm at which two young men were ordained for the ministry. The number is small and the remarkable thing about it is that both of the young men who were ordained were the sons of farmers. In Sweden as in our own country, it seems that the rural districts more and more furnish the preachers.

Dr. von Wirsen, president of the Noble Prize Award committee at Stockholm, promised a deputation of Swedish clergymen to favorably consider the name and person of Professor Warneck, of Halle, for an award next year. A number of missionary societies and universities sent letters of recommendations, hoping that in a Noble prize awarded to Dr. Warneck the great services rendered humanity by foreign missions would be duly recognized.

The Social Democrats of the Second Chamber of the Swedish riksdag, have brought forward a proposition before the riksdag asking for an appropriation of 5,000,000 crowns, which shall constitute a fund to provide for idle workmen. Whether or not the bill will be framed into a law remains to be seen. It will undoubtedly meet with lots of opposition.

The Gustavus Adolphus Society in Germany, whose object is to give assistance to poor Lutheran congregations in Catholic countries, distributed during the last year $460,000. There are now 2,716 branch societies, of which 671 are ladies societies. Six of the latter were organized during the past year.

NORWAY.

The Holmenkollen Ski tournament has attracted thousands of people to Christiania these days. Sportsmen have arrived from Stockholm and Copenhagen and other Swedish and Danish cities. There are also scores of German and English tourists who are on hand to take in the winter sports. The Holmenkollen event is splendid thing for Christiania from a business standpoint and the hotels and cafes are making big money out of it. The winter sports this year in Christiania have been attracting lots of attention and enthusiastic sportsmen have not been slow in taking advantage of their opportunities for following their favorite sport. Skating has also been very popular this winter and the skating parks have been crowded and there has been interesting races.

The church reorganization committee, consisting of twelve members, appointed last year for the purpose of investigation the rights of each congregation, very much dividede when it comes to the point of maintaining a state church. Six are in favor of leaving the congregations under the direct supervision of the government, but the other three are in favor of separating church from state and creating a Free Church in Norway. The people at large seem also rather divided on the subject and an interesting conflict is predicted.

The well known Storfossen estate has recently been purchased by the Ingvald brothers and Birger Peterson for 200,000 crowns. It was one of the largest country estates in Norway and consists of about 8,000 acres of land. About 4,000 are in a state of high cultivation. Four hundred men and women are employed on the estate and there is a splendid creamery which does a big business.

Much is expected of the new cabinet. There are some pretty energetic men appointed and all parties are represented in the newly [illegible] cabinet. A cabinet crisis is not an uncommon thing in Norway and if they do not suit the people a change will not cause any particular [illegible].

There will be a big labor [illegible] in Christiania next week when representatives of labor unions from all over the country will be present [illegible] from Sweden. About [illegible] delegates will be in attendance.

DENMARK.

A letter purporting to have been written by Dr. Cook has has been received by the University of Copenhagen, which seems to be intended for a confession that he did not reach the north pole. This letter is typewritten in the third person, seemingly dictated, bears the post mark of a town in Minnesota and is not signed. The members of the university consistory have been summoned to meet and consider the document.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Miss Mabel Swenson, twenty years of age, daughter of L. S. Swenson of Minneapolis, died of tuberculosis aboard the steamer Amerika, while Mr. Swenson, the newly appointed United States minister to Switzerland, and his family were on their way to Berne.

Fred N. Johnson of Duluth, thirty years old, a Northern Pacific fireman, dropped dead at his post while making the run between Duluth and Aitkin. Heart failure is said to have been the cause of death.

Nils O. Werner, sixty-two years old, president of the Scandinavian-American National bank and of the Minnesota Grain company, is dead at Minneapolis.

Albert W. Pratt, seventy-three years old, prominent for many years in business and social life and a resident of Red Wing since 1856, is dead in that city.

A corn on his toe caused the death at Portland, Ore., of Isaac Landford, eighty years old, a veteran of the Minnesota Indian wars.

MILK TEST LAW IS INVALID

St. Paul Court Declares Statute Is Inoperative.

The law passed by the last legislature requiring operators of milk and cream testing apparatus to carry licenses from the state dairy and food commissioners under penalty of a fine was knocked out by Judge Hallam in the Ramsey county district court at St. Paul.

The decision of Judge Hallam was the outcome of a restraining order asked for by R. E. Cobb, a St. Paul commission man, in an effort to prevent Andrew R. French of the state dairy and food commission from enforcing the provisions of the law.

The trouble with the law lay in the fact that another statute passed at the 1909 session of the legislature provided for the use of the Babcock testing apparatus to determine the amount of butter fat contained in milk and cream. Right on the heels of that was passed the law requiring all operators of testing apparatus "approved by the state dairy and food commissioner" to procure a license from the dairy and food commissioner.

RAILROADS PAY THEIR TAX

Not Likely to Attempt to Reopen Gross Earnings Tax Case.

The Great Northern and the Chicago Great Western railroads apparently will not make any effort to reopen the gross earnings tax case which was decided against them in the federal supreme court at Washington recently, for both roads paid the full 4 per cent tax upon their gross earnings for the year 1909. It is expected that they will also pay the back taxes which were in dispute.

The gross earnings of the railroads in the state show an increase of about 17 per cent over 1908. All the roads have now reported and paid their tax except the Burlington and a couple of switching roads, which will add about $20,000 to the $3,619,107.40 already paid into the state treasury.

These payments leave the state treasury in excellent condition.

POISON TABLET IN CANDY

Minnesota Girl Accused of Attempting to Kill Schoolmate.

Lily Rodeck, a schoolgirl thirteen years of age, was bound over at Isle on a charge of plotting the death of a schoolmate, Effie Carlson, by giving her a wolf tablet poison in candy. The case will be further investigated before the meeting of the grand jury at Princeton, the county seat, in the spring.

Miss Rodeck was not represented by counsel at the hearing. She admitted giving the candy to her little schoolmate, but said she had no knowledge it contained poison. The state was represented by counsel who intimated that jealousy in school work was the motive behind the alleged attempt on the life of Miss Carlson.

BANKER SECURES NEW TRIAL

Minnesota Supreme Court Says Trial Judge Erred.

Banker Arthur Z. Drew's conviction has been reversed by the state supreme court. The court remands the former Hamline banker's case to the Ramsey county district court for a new trial.

Drew was found guilty of accepting a deposit in the Bank of Hamline after it was insolvent and sentenced to two years' imprisonment. The bank failed Jan. 15, 1908.

The upper court holds that the trial court erred in two respects:

First—In instructing the jury that it need not find that Drew actually knew that the bank was insolvent.

Second—In admitting Drew's schedule of bankruptcy.

GIRL IS BURNED TO DEATH

Other Members of the Family Have Narrow Escapes.

At Cohasset, Itasca county, Elnora, the fourteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Coombs, was burned to death in her bed and her uncle, Delancy Duss, was so badly burned that little hope for his recovery is entertained.

Mr. and Mrs. Coombs barely escaped with their lives, and saved their baby by throwing it out of the window into the snow before they climbed through.

Evidence Held Insufficient.

Leo Radtke, bachelor, thirty-five years old, arrested in Meeker county on a charge of sending poisoned candy to Minnie Luthens, twenty years old, who is said to have rejected his attentions, was discharged from custody when his case came before Judge Bacon at Litchfield. County Attorney Sexton said that upon examination of the alleged evidence against Radtke he had concluded there were not sufficient grounds to maintain an action.

Flour Mills Close Down.

Six Minneapolis flour mills have closed down for an indefinite period owing to inability to get their products shipped out, caused by a lack of facilities. It is reported that the flour market will not be affected by the shutdown, as it is practically glutted at present with milling products.

Jury Acquits St. Paul Alderman.

The jury in the case of Frank J. Huber, president of the St. Paul board of aldermen, who has been on trial in the district court for selling liquor on Sunday, returned a verdict of not guilty.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

SEVERAL SUSTAIN INJURIES

Wall Crashes Into Classroom at Minnesota "U."

Professor James E. Moore was painfully hurt, six students were slightly injured and most of the thirty-six members of the junior class in medicine at the state university at Minneapolis bruised and cut when a portion of the wall left standing by the fire in Millard hall last Christmas eve weakened in the strong wind and crashed through the temporary roof over the third floor of the right wing into the classroom.

The injured men were pinned beneath a mass of wreckage when the crash came without warning. With the air filled with powdered plaster and flying brick and splinters a panic resulted and the men struggled and fought for a chance to get out of the room. When once clear of the building and convinced that the rest of the building was not going to collapse they rushed back and franticaly dug out their imprisoned classmates.

Mr. Moore was taken from the debris unconscious, with several painful cuts on the head, and whisked to the university hospital in his own automobile.

CHARGES AGAINST C. A. SMITH

Cases Against Minneapolis Lumberman Set for April 18.

By agreement between United States District Attorney McCourt of Portland, Ore., and John M. Gearin, representing the defendants, all suits against C. A. Smith, Minneapolis millionaire lumberman, and associates, involving the cancellation of title to a large quantity of Linn county timber land, will be taken up in the federal court at Portland on April 18.

The amount of land involved aggregates approximately 8,000 acres, estimated to be worth $600,000. There are fifty-two claims alleged to have been wrongfully secured from the government.

These are cases wherein the late Senator Mitchell is charged with having received from Frederick A. Kribs a fee of $25 for each claim and which Mitchell was to push to patent in the department of the interior.

Kribs is alleged to have been acting for Smith and the government charges that it will prove that Smith not only furnished money to bribe Mitchell, but advanced the amount necessary for "dummy" entrymen to pay for lands when submitting final proofs.

ATTACK VALIDITY OF LAW

Railroads Oppose Minnesota Fire Warden Statute.

The constitutionality of the state fire warden law of 1909 was vigorously attacked in Itasca county district court at Bemidji before Judges McClenahan, Wright and Stanton, sitting jointly to hear arguments of counsel in six cases brought by the state against various railway companies, the latter being charged with having violated certain sections of the fire warden law, more particularly the patrol section, the cases having been decided in the justice or municipal court adversely to the companies and having been appealed to the district court from three counties in the Fifteenth judicial district.

The particular section on which is based the attack as to constitutionality is that which requires railway companies in dry seasons to employ at least one patrolman for each mile of its road through lands liable to be overrun by fire.

The highest price at which hogs sold last week was $9.40 and the market closed last week at $9.35 a hundred. The eight hogs were sold for G. W. Wilkinson of Cottage Grove, Minn.

A load of fifty-nine hogs, averaging 267 pounds apiece, were sold to Armour & Co. by Percy Vittum & Co., at $9.65 a hundred.

The young lady appears not to be greatly surprised and says she has not laid any plans for the future.

Coldest Day of the Season.

The thermometer registered 20 degrees below zero at St. Paul Wednesday, the coldest of the winter. It was the eleventh consecutive day of zero weather St. Paul has had. But even at that the month does not promise to be any colder than the average, for it started with high temperatures, the first registering 46 above.

Why I Love St. Valentine's Day

Because It Helped Me In My Courtship and to Get the Girl I Wanted.

By ARTHUR GRAY.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

A hundred years ago, when there were but a few million people in the United States, our progenitors fell in love in the old fashioned natural way, and, being once in love, married as a matter of course, very few of them considering what they would live on in the married state. One reason for this, or cause, whichever one chooses to consider it, was that they fell in love and married young.

The reason why I appreciate St. Valentine's day is that it had a great deal to do with my present domestic happiness. A valentine began it, a valentine furnished means of keeping it up, and a valentine settled it.

Effie Winston at seventeen was at the exact age her mother married—married for love—married without any provision for the future. But Mrs. Winston married much later than a hundred years ago, when getting a living was easier and not so much was required. Consequently she didn't find married life as charming as it might have been had Effie's father had a fortune or at least an income commensurate with the requirements of an increasing family. Therefore, as might be expected, the lady did not propose that her sons should take wives until they could support them or that her daughters should marry men who were not prosperous.

This was sensible, but when a sensible idea is carried too far it ceases to be sensible. To come to the point, Mrs. Winston determined that her daughter Effie, in whom I came to be interested, should marry none other than a rich man. I wanted Effie, and I hadn't a cent. Ergo, Mrs. Winston was a very stupid and a very obstinate woman. This was my boyhood reasoning, and since I have grown to middle age I have not, in my case, seen any reason to change it. I confess, however, that my daughter Effie shall not marry a pauper.

I made Effie's acquaintance at dancing school. I asked her to dance with me twice in one of our afternoon dancing school meetings. St. Valentine's day came along soon afterward, and she sent me a valentine. This was the beginning of it. Indeed, the pretty little missive was my first intimation that a member of the opposite sex saw in me something more than in the other boys of her acquaintance. I didn't stop to consider that she might have sent one to a dozen other boys. If I had the heavenly flower of love might have been nipped in the bud. I knew Effie had sent me the valentine, for, fearing I might be mistaken with regard to it, she scrawled her name on it. I assumed that the verses printed on it had been laid down there by the printer for the express purpose of letting me know that Effie loved me.

Many a verse, many a letter, has been penned by a woman who intends to tell of the love she bears a man that have not in them a tithe of the pure sentiment that came to me in those lines, which had been slung off in thousands by a pressman in a dirty apron. I dreamed over my valentine, and I dreamed of Effie. She is now very necessary to me, but she is incapable of inspiring me with any of that delicious feeling which welled up within me like waters fitted to be quaffed by angels. I carried it to school with me and at recess stole away from the other children to look at it. I had it with me in my room when I went to bed and studied it till I knew every flower, every vine, every cupid. It was the last thing I thought of before going to sleep and the first after awaking in the morning.

Where was I? I remember—I was abusing my future mother-in-law for being so stupid as to refuse me her daughter's hand. This was long after I had received the valentine, for Effie was nineteen and I was twenty. Effie was as stupid, I thought, as her mother about the matter, for although she declared she would never marry any one but me, she demurred at becoming my wife, I being in possession of an income of nothing a year. At any rate, she told me that, her mother having forbidden her from receiving or communicating with me, she would obey. Indeed, she was forced to obey. I couldn't take care of her as my wife, and I had no right to be dangling about her keeping desirable suitors away.

I accused her of heartlessness and other unattractive traits till I drew tears, then called myself a brute, then kissed her goodby and then went away determined to put myself in a position to earn enough to marry on.

I worked like a Trojan. I did not only my own work, but every one else's in the office where I was employed. While other boys who had no such spur as I had thought only of getting a holiday now and then or of shirking what work they didn't fancy I was thinking only of Effie and a tiny cottage. I worked all day and often at night. Indeed, I worked so hard that my employers noticed it and kept on raising my salary and advancing me till one day I was astonished at a proposition for me to manage the detail of the business at a salary of $6,000 a year.

While I was standing before the members of the firm with a puzzled look on my face I was not thinking of the proposition or the $6,000 a year; I was thinking of how to communicate the good news to Effie. I believed her mother would grow more and more difficult to satisfy in a pecuniary way each year, and I determined not to appeal to her, but to Effie direct. Three years had passed during which I had kept apart from Effie and Effie had kept apart from me. But how could I know whether she was unchanged? I couldn't. Suppose I wrote her to find out and received no reply. I wouldn't know whether my letter had fallen into her mother's hands or whether Effie had received it and did not care to renew our past relations.

And here comes in the second valentine. I was offered my new position the 1st of January, and in six weeks St. Valentine's day came round. I sent Effie, who was now twenty-two years old, a valentine. I was aware that the custom had even at that day fallen largely into the hands of children. I didn't intend to declare my love in verses that had now come to seem cheap to me. I used the valentine as a starter for a clandestine correspondence. I wrote a message on it in lemon juice, then indited in a disguised hand this couplet:

> If to know me you aspire
> Read my name before the fire.

You see letters written in lemon juice, though invisible before, when heated come out a brown color. Effie would apply the necessary heat. I only feared that she would throw the valentine in the wastebasket without reading the couplet.

That all turned out right was apparent in a letter I received from my valentine, for which I had given her an address. Effie was delighted at my success and said that she was very proud of me. She added, however, that, so far as obtaining her mother's consent to our marriage or even an engagement was concerned, it would be more difficult than ever. Her mother's figures for the fortune Effie's husband should possess were rising every day.

Effie and I after this continued to correspond clandestinely, she not knowing exactly what to do. She loved her mother, and she loved me. She had yielded to her mother's wishes so long as I was unable to support her, and, now that I was in a position to do so, she felt that something was due both to me and to herself. Matters were brought to a crisis by Mrs. Winston discovering our correspondence. A letter Effie had written me fell into her mother's hands.

It seems that Mrs. Winston had been on the watch for such a procedure and could not imagine how my first letter could have got into the house without her knowing it. Effie declined to enlighten her. That made the old lady very angry, and there was a great commotion in the Winston family. Of course our correspondence was stopped. Effie was forbidden to write to or receive letters from me under pain of being run off to Europe. In addition to the command Mrs. Winston set spies upon Effie, and she dared not post me a single note.

Matters went on in this way for nearly a year. One day a letter came to the Winston house that excited Effie's suspicions. It was now her turn to pry. The letter bore the business stamp of an agent of a steamship company. Effie steamed the envelope, opened it and read that her mother had engaged passage for two for Genoa, the vessel to sail on the 14th of February, or in about a week.

Here was a revelation. Something must be done. Something was done. And this is the way it was done.

Effie a week before St. Valentine's day went out and bought a supply of valentines for the children. The same evening she addressed a number of them, her mother asking why she was sending them so early, and she replying that they were going to distant places. She addressed and stamped them, managing to retain one, which she addressed to me. This she gave, with the others, to a maid to post, who mailed them without looking at the addresses.

This was the third and last valentine. I received it and read that Effie was ready to walk away with me to church before the sailing of the vessel that was to take her to foreign parts. She appointed a place of meeting and an hour. Indeed, she arranged everything to my satisfaction.

But there was very little time. The steamer was to leave at 1 p. m. on Feb. 14, and the appointment made by Effie to meet me was at dawn the same morning. Before any one in the house was awake she was up and dressed and stealing downstairs. Then she went out by a rear door. I was at the corner with a carriage, and when I saw her scudding toward me I opened the carriage door, we got in and were driven away.

I had arranged my part of the elopement and engaged a clergyman to be up and ready to perform a wedding ceremony when the cocks were crowing. We found him ready, and in a few minutes a knot had been tied that Mrs. Winston could not unloose. From the parson's we drove back to the house. Effie let us in with a night key, and we waited till her mother came downstairs to breakfast. Since she was to sail that day she was up early, and when she entered the room where we were and saw us sitting together her astonishment was unbounded. Effie said to her:

"Mother, I am of an age to think and act for myself. We are married. I have acted without your knowledge to save trouble, for I knew you would oppose me, and I had made up my mind to choose my own husband."

Well, it was made up in time, but not then. Mrs. Winston canceled her passage abroad, and Effie and I went on our wedding trip.

Is it a wonder that we both appreciate St. Valentine's day?

A Word For the Tightwad.

In France they have an expressive phrase, "liquid money." It means that part of the family income which is used for the necessities and luxuries of life. It is quite apart from and kept apart from the more serious, substantial part of the income, which is the saved part. In America the entire income is "liquid, and the man who attempts to make part of it solid is called a "tightwad." A "tightwad" is really a man who creates a principal—a capital, in other words—and he is the living example of what every private business must be and of how the country's resources should be handled.—Argonaut.

GETTING TO THE FRONT

Northern Culvert Company of This City Doing a Large and Increasing Business.

Manufacture the Best Culverts on the Market Today, and Lots of Them.

One of the manufacturing concerns that is doing its share towards making Thief River Falls the largest and most important city in Northwestern Minnesota is the Northern Culvert Company, of which Charles R. Stowell is the general manager. It was about two years ago that this concern located here and engaged in the manufacture of galvanized corrugated metal culverts, and in that time a large business has been built up. While in a measure the hustling qualities of the manager, Mr. Stowell, might be attributed as the cause of the success of the firm, the real cause we are inclined to believe is due to the high quality of the goods manufactured. The culverts manufactured are continuous corrugations having reinforced joints and are guaranteed by the company for twenty five years. They are rust proof, rot proof, easy to lay, will carry any traffic and will not crack or break with expansion from heat or cold. The material used is the best, heavy galvanized steel, and are made in a perfect circle by careful and experienced workmen.

During the past year this company used in the neighborhood of 400 tons of steel in the manufacture of culverts and they expect to do even better the coming year. Rordbuilders everywhere recognzel the value of these culverts and they are being used more and more each year.

Co-Operative Egg Selling.

Several associations have been organized for selling the produce of the farm. Among these is one for disposing of eggs. One association is at Dassel and another at Barnum. The general idea is to produce larger and better eggs and market in a systematic way. They would gather the eggs twice a day, keep them clean, sort them, and throw out all under or over-sized eggs and pack them for market in cartons holding one dozen each. The white eggs and brown ones are packed in separate cartons. All unattractive and dirty eggs are discarded so far as the market is concerned. The eggs are shipped direct from the producer to the city grocer or consumer. A guarantee of the facts is set forth on the carton concerning their quality, with a statement that any egg found defective in any way will be replaced free of charge. Such eggs bring several cents a dozen more than those marketed in the ordinary hit or miss manner.

ASKED TO RETURN CASH

Proceeding Started This Week Against Lindquist and Auditor Letandresse.

Will Have to Return $4,000 to the County Treasurer in Short Time.

Our old friend County Commissioner Lindquist is going to have a duty to perform in the near future which will not be as pleasant a task as that of building new barns and enjoying general prosperity. Legal proceedings have been instituted this week to compel Mr. Lindquist and County Auditor Letandresse to restore to the treasury of Red Lake county the sum of $4,000—with interest—this amount being the sum that the chairman of the county board and auditor signed a county warrant drawn upon the county treasurer for the purchase of the court house site. This transaction has been declared illegal by the courts. Of course a new bill for the purchase of the court house site has been passed by the county commissioners in a "legal" manner, but this too is in the courts and will not be decided until the next term of the supreme court, and before that time Mr. Lindquist and Mr. Letandresse will have to dig up the money.

Part of the money paid out for this court house site is now in the hands of "innocent" persons who made a good sale of their property and will not be inclined to return the same. As it is quite sure that Mr. Lindquist will be out of office in a short time, the Red Lake Falls people will not be under any obligations to stand back of him any longer. In fact, as a Red Lake Falls citizen recently expressed himself, the down river town does not feel that it is under any obligation to Mr. Lindquist.

A new action has also been started in the district court restraining the county commissioners from building a court house.

IDENTITY IS KNOWN

Man Burned to Death in Soo Camp on Feb. 19 Was Jesse Mots.

Parents Reside at Strathcona, North of This City on the G. N.

The identity and previous residence of Jesse Mots, who was burned to death in a camp in Chester Township, Polk county, on the night of February 19, has been positively proven by John Mendell and wife, who were in Bemidji last week, they ascertaining that young Mots was the son of Mrs. Mendell, being a child born to her when married to her first husband.

On Saturday night, February 19, Camp 6, which was practically deserted, was destroyed by fire and the badly charred body of an unknown young man was found in the ruins next morning.

Coroner Stonshoel of Crookston visited the scene of the camp (in Chester township along the line of the new Soo railway right-of-way) and investigated the cause of the fire and the death of the man, whose body was found in the smouldering embers of the fire. Mr. Stonshoel ascertained that a young man named Jesse Mots had been working in a Soo railway company's camp, operated by a man named Thompson, and that he had left the camp. The young fellow was traced to a post-office a few miles from the camp and had inquired the distance to camp 6.

The next morning, February 20, a charred body was found in the destroyed camp. Investigation of circumstances established the belief that young Mots had gone to the camp and started a fire, and while he was asleep the camp had caught fire and the young fellow was smothered before he could make his escape.

Mr. and Mrs. Mendell, who live at Strathcona, some thirty miles north of Thief River Falls, saw an account of the death of young Mots and they went to Bemidji to investigate the affair. As young Mots had stated while working in the railway camp that his home was north of Thief River Falls; and other circumstances surrounding the case tend to firmly establish the identity of the young man.

A message from Crookston states that no inquest was held on the body of Young Mots and that the remains were buried in a cemetery in Chester Township, about four miles from Trail City, a new point on the Soo right-of-way. Young Mots was an inmate of Bemidji hospital prior to his going to work in the railway camp.

He was only 15 years old, although well developed and believed to have been near 20. Mr. and Mrs. Mendell state that they do not believe they will remove the body from its present resting place.

Car Will Put State In List of "Live Ones."

A car loaded with grain, vegetables and fruits will advertise Minnesota through the eastern states next fall and winter.

The state board of immigration meeting Thursday, decided to accept the offer of Louis W. Hill, president, Great Northern railroad, to furnish and exhibit car and provide for its transportation through the country.

The state board, out of its funds, will fit the car with exhibits and literature and furnish men to accompany the demonstrations.

The car will start following the state fair next September, passing through Iowa, Illinois Indiana, Ohio and all along the Atlantic seabcard.

The immigration board in deciding to wait until next fall took into consideration the advantage to be gained in securing the grain, vegetable and fruit exhibits at the next fair. Should the car be started this spring it could be out only six weeks or two months, and the exhibits would naturally be less complete.

Mr. Hill held a conference with George Welsh, immigration agent, relating to the car, and detail were arranged at that time subject to approval by the state board.

Minnesota probably would not have the exhibit car this year but for a speech by Mr. Hill a week or two ago in which he pronounced Minnesota a "dead one" as far as advertising its agricultural resources are concerned. This brot out a protest from Mr. Welsh and the offer of the car by the Great Northeren president, which culminates in the finished plan to put Minnesota in the list of "live ones."

Accident on Wheatline.

The east bound Soo passenger train on the Wheatline went into the ditch slick and clean last Wednesday morning, shortly after leaving Kenmare.

The wreck occured at Norman, a blind siding this side of Kenmare, and happened when the train was hopping along at full speed. Some one had left the switch open and before the engineer could apply the brakes the train was on the siding and then in the ditch. The engine and all three coaches left the track and bumped along for some distance, but the accident was an extremely fortunate one and not a single passenger was injured.

WHAT BONDS ARE FOR

Explanation Given Regarding the Proposed Issue of $25,000 Bonds of the City.

Election to Be Held Tuesday, March 22, and All Should Vote.

On Tuesday, the 22nd day of March, the voters of Thief River Falls will be called upon to vote upon the proposition of issuing bonds to the amount of $25,000. While it is generally understood by many that these bonds are for the purpose of completing the auditorium, this is not the case. The city has now expended—or will have expended by the time the vote is taken—$41,000 in the erection of this building. Of this sum $20,000 was the original bond issue, $11,000 has been taken from the funds of the city and $10,000 has been borrowed from the local banks upon certificates of indebtedness, which are drawing seven per cent interest. This completes the entire building except the basement, and if the bonds carry the basement will be completed at an estimated cost of between $3,000 and $4,000.

The bonds are to draw not to exceed five per cent interest and the proceeds are to be used to take up the certificates of indebtedness to the amount of $10,000, replenish the funds of the city and complete the basement. If the issue does not carry, there can be little or no money expended to extend the water works and electric light system or improve the streets, build sidewalks and make other necessary improvements this summer, and a special tax levy to take up the certificates of indebtedness and make improvements will have to be made. In other words it is more or less a question as to whether the people residing here now desire to pay off this indebtedness in the form of taxes next year or let those, who live here twenty-five years from now have this pleasure.

The auditorium is one of the finest buildings in the Northwest and there does not appear to be any complaint upon the city not getting full value. It is a building that private capital could hardly be induced to erect, and yet one of which the city has been in great need.

Financially, the city of Thief River Falls is in excellent shape, and for every cent of bonded indebtedness, it has property worth much more. In fact the city could today sell its water works and electric light plant for more than the entire debt of the city.

"DRYS" ARE VICTORIOUS

Village Elections Held Tuesday and Many Saloons Are Voted Out.

St. Hilaire for the First Time in Its History Votes for No License.

Nearly every village in this section of the state voted upon the license question Tuesday and the "drys" were victorious in a majority of the cases.

For the first time in its history, St. Hilaire went dry. This was due to a combination between the temperance people and some of the liquor interests. St. Hilaire has four saloons and some of the saloonkeepers wanted the number reduced to two, on the grounds that four was too many for a town of this size and that the business was not profitable. The council refused to reduce the number and the result was that the saloons were voted out. J. C. Dahle was elected president of the council.

Every village in Roseau county voted upon the proposition, but the result in the county remains the same. Warroad and Greenbush remain wet, the latter by only four votes. Roseau, which had been dry voted wet this year, and Badger, which had been wet went dry. At Badger the temperance forces conducted a vigorous campaign and many of the women and school children paraded the streets carrying banners asking the voters to vote out the saloons.

One of the big surprises was at Brooks, south of here on the Soo, located in Poplar River township. This township is entirely French and the saloons were voted out by a large majority.

Middle River again went dry and by a much larger vote, only 12 being in favor of license, while 25 were against.

Other results were as follows:

Karlstad, dry.
Argyle, dry.
Hallock, dry.
Fosston, wet.
McIntosh, dry.
Bagley, wet.
Erskine, dry.
Bronson, wet.
Lancaster, wet.
Plummer, wet.
Ada, dry.

A Rattlesnake Story.

In "Life and Sport on the Pacific Coast" Horace A. Vachell relates one of his narrow escapes from a friend's bullet. "My cousin and I had been camping and hunting for several days in a sort of paradise valley. One day during a long ride on horseback we had seen a great many rattlesnakes and killed a few, an exceptional experience. That night my cousin woke up and saw by the light of the moon a big rattler crawling across my chest. He lay for a moment fascinated, horror struck, watching the sinuous curves of the reptile. Then he quietly reached for his six shooter, but he could not see the reptile's head, and he moved nearer, noiselessly, yet quickly, dreading some movement on my part that should precipitate the very thing he dreaded, and then he saw that it was not a snake at all—only the black and yellow stripe of my blanket, which gently rose and fell as I breathed. Had he fired—well, it might have been bad for me, for he confessed that his hand shook."

And They Didn't Exercise.

William M. Evarts, who lived until he was nearly ninety, said he kept his health by never taking exercise. The celebrated Dr. William George Mead, who lived to the surprising age of 148 years, spent nearly all of his time in the open air and played a little golf. Dr. Mead used to drink two or three quarts of water every day, and perhaps there is a suggestion in that. Old Dubois, who lived in Canada for the better part of 119 years on the north shore of Lake Erie, never worked and never took exercise. He spent seventy-five years of his life fishing with hook and line and ate nothing but baked apples and milk and brown bread and unsalted butter. Perhaps you can live that long if you do nothing but fish and eat what old Dubois did. But take notice that these long livers never exercised.—New York Telegraph.

He Didn't Know It.

"What are you doing here?"

"Waitin' on prosperity."

"Why, prosperity passed this way two months ago!"

"You don't say! That accounts for the twitchin' in my j'ints. I had a idee that somethin' or other had run over me."—Atlanta Constitution.

NOT A LAW CASE.

Just Wanted to Know Her Rights and How to Get Them.

In Washington some years ago there was a colored woman who demanded all that was due her. On one occasion, at a period when less care was given to the water supply than is now the case, the colored woman accosted a man who was just leaving the District government buildings. "Mistuh," she said, "I wants ter state a case."

"I am not a lawyer, aunty."

"'Tain't no law case. I ain't gwine to sue nobody. I jes' wants to know what my rights is an' how to git 'em."

"You see any of the clerks here if it's government business."

"I ain't got no piece o' paper to shove in at de window so's to get noticed. But I's bein' 'scriminated against."

"What's the trouble?" was the kindly inquiry.

"I ain' gittin' proper 'tention. Ev'y once in awhile I hyahs it read out o' de paper dat somebody has got a eel out'n his hydrant."

"Well, an eel is a very cleanly sort of creature. It doesn't do any harm."

"You didn' fink I was a-skyait of 'em, did you? De case I wants to lay befo' de gover'ment is dis: I pays extra rent to kiver de water tax. I's had a hydrant in my back yahd foh fohteen years an' I ain' nebber got no eel yit.

"What I wants to know is how does dey 'stribute dem eels? Is dey prizes or is dey favoritisms or what is dey? If dar's any eels comin' to me I's hyah wif my basket, ready to take dem home right now, 'case we ain't got no money to buy meat, an' we's kin' of hongry foh feesh anyhow."—Youth's Companion.

ENTIRELY TOO CAREFUL.

Fate of the Flowers the Master Placed In Water.

A certain good natured doctor whose doorbell rang late one Saturday night, supposing that the summons was from some one who needed his services, rose from bed, put on his dressing gown and went to the door.

A workingman stood there, holding a huge paper package, from which buds and leaves were protruding.

"Is Miss Caroline Ward in?" he asked.

"She has retired," returned the doctor. Miss Caroline Ward was his cook.

"I'm sorry, sir, to call so late. Something went wrong with the tramcar I was in. I'll leave this for her, sir, if you will kindly give it to her in the morning."

"Certainly," said the doctor. He took the flowers into the kitchen, placed a dishpan in the sink, drew a few inches of water in it, carefully pressed the base of the package into the water and went back to bed, thinking how pleased the cook would be.

The next morning he found the cook holding a dripping bundle. She was angry.

"If I 'ad the pussons 'ere wot did this," said she, "I'd empty the kettle on 'em! I'd let 'em see if they could put the 'at what my young man bought me in a dishpan, I would!"

The doctor left the kitchen somewhat hurriedly.—London Scraps.

Might Change His Mind.

Sir Frank Lockwood was defending a man accused of swindling and in an eloquent peroration talked of his much injured client as an angel of light. When Sir Frank had finished his speech his client whispered that he wanted to shake hands with him. "When first my solicitor told me what he was paying you," said the client, "I grumbled, but since I have been listening to you I have come to the conviction that the money was well spent, and I apologize. That half hour talk of yours about me has done me good. It is many years since I have experienced the luxury of self respect, and it is worth the money."

"Oh, that's all right," said Sir Frank genially, "but you take my advice and go out of court. Sir Edward Clarke, the lawyer on the other side, is just going to speak."

Poorly Paid Toymakers.

The toymakers of Sonneberg are among the worst paid work people in Germany. It often happens that the earnings of a Sonneberg workman and his family, working sixteen hours a day, do not exceed $2.40 a week. About three years ago there was an exhibition of home industries in Berlin where articles from Sonneberg were displayed, the making of which was paid for at the rate of 4 cents an hour. Numerous instances are on record of children after school hours working six hours at a stretch coloring and polishing the heads of dolls for a pittance of 1½ cents an hour.—Chicago News.

The Kings of Denmark.

The dust of the Danish kings is kept in a great cathedral at Roskilde, an old town twenty miles from Copenhagen. Every year the entire royal family always pay a visit to Roskilde in obedience to an ancient custom. On one of the pillars are marks showing the height of Peter the Great, Nicholas the Iron Czar, Alexander III. of Russia, the king of England and many other kings. The cathedral was built in the eleventh century. It has two mighty towers, which can be seen at a long distance. The oldest grave is that of King Harald I., who died in 987.

His Mistake.

Irate Customer—See here! That student lamp you sold me a week ago is no good! It won't work.

Dealer—Beg pardon, sir. I ought to have told you it was a college student lamp.—Puck.

THE WRECK MASTER.

He Does Some Tall Hustling When the Line Is Blocked.

When a wreck blocks the line the wreck master is the biggest man on the railroad. Even the president, if by unhappy chance he happens to be there, steps aside and keeps silent after the wreck train halts with a jerk of grinding brakes and hissing air before the indescribable confusion of shattered wood and twisted steel which clutter the tracks. The wreck master's feet are on the ground before the shrieking wheels have ceased turning. There follow at his heels a half score of men, all experts, but of less degree than their leader.

He shouts an order that seems as unintelligible as a drillmaster's command, then another and another. There is instant action. At one end of the train a locomotive begins to creep cautiously away with the coaches that have stayed on the rails. An express car up toward the forward end of the passenger train is tilted tremblingly on its trucks. It is loaded with bales of silk perhaps or with other costly merchandise. The wreckers do not stop to inquire. To them it is simply an obstruction that has to be removed immediately. There is a heaving chorus, and it plunges down the embankment. A hundred yards away a loaded freight car in the opposite train is hanging over the edge. Fifty crowbars give it a tip that sends it down to the foot of the hill. As it lands there is a crash of discordant, tortured strings, an inharmonious outburst as though half a hundred cats had landed simultaneously on half a hundred keyboards. "Pianos," remarks one of the panting workmen to another standing at his shoulder. They do not pause even to grin. An instant later they are heaving away at something else.—Thaddeus S. Dayton in Harper's Weekly.

CHINA'S GREAT WALL.

It Would Be a Mighty Task to Duplicate It Today.

What man has done, we are told, man can do. But to erect today a great fortification comparable to the Great wall of China would be a heavy tax on both the resources and the resolution of Europe. A score or two of warships are all very well, but the cost of labor and the will involved in building fleets can hardly be compared to those devoted to the building of that great barrier about two centuries before the coming of Christ, when Rome was struggling with Hannibal.

Two thousand five hundred and fifty miles, including spurs, arms and loops, is the length ascribed to it by Dr. W. E. Geil, the only white man, we believe, who has traveled the whole length of it. It has been said that the Great wall is the only object of man's handiwork which could be discerned from the moon, and one calculation has it that if the material of the wall were disposed about the globe at the equator there would be a wall girdle eight feet high and three feet thick around the earth.

One can believe that to this day the name of the Emperor Chin is cursed all along the wall by the posterity of the wretches who were forced to the gigantic task of building it. In the days of its greatest importance, when it was still holding back the Tartar hordes, it is believed to have had on its line 25,000 towers, each capable of holding 100 men, and 15,000 watchtowers. Even today there remains 20,000 towers and 10,000 watchtowers, with some 2,000 miles of wall that could, with moderate repairing, be made into a formidable military work.—London News.

Giants and Dwarfs.

In the seventeenth century all the abnormally large and small folks of Austria were assembled in Vienna in response to a whim of the empress. As circumstances required that all should be housed in one building, there was a fear that the imposing proportions of the giants would terrify the dwarfs. But the dwarfs teased and tormented the giants so that these overgrown mortals complained with tears in their eyes, and as a consequence sentinels had to be placed to protect the giants from their pygmy persecutors, for the smallest men had the biggest brains and the longest tongues.

Corrupted His Style.

"The late Richard Watson Gilder," said a New York poet, "always opposed the reading of light literature. A poet, he said, could not read such literature without corrupting his literary style.

"He once told me that the poet in this respect was like Brown's parrot.

"Brown bought a parrot for $20 from a pet stock dealer and a week or two later returned to the shop and insisted that the bird be taken back.

"'What's the matter with it?' the dealer asked.

"'W-w-why,' said Brown, 'the durned c-c-critter st-stutters.'"

Expert Opinion.

"What do you think made Hamlet so suspicious of the ghost?" asked Mr. Stormington Barnes.

"He probably thought," answered the psychic researcher, "that no well regulated ghost would manifest himself without ringing bells or tipping tables."—Washington Star.

Putting Him Wise.

"I'd like to make you my wife," said the practical young man, "but they tell me you can't keep house."

"Don't you believe all they tell you," rejoined the girl in the case. "You get the house and put it in my name, and I'll prove to you that I can keep it."—Exchange.

School Notes.

A neat program, as given below, was presented by the sophomores last Friday evening at the high school assembly room. President's address, Agnes Wilson; chorus, German song by the girls; piano duet, Theone Walker and Hulda Fossum; burlesque basket ball, the boys; class paper by Irving Carter, Dagny Halseth and Anna Johnson; solo, Maurice Giller; piano solo, Theone Walker; farce, boys and girls.

Hereafter, Mrs. F. Erickson and Mrs. W. Nicolls, former teachers in the city schools, will serve as substitutes in the absence of the regular teachers.

The freshmen will present the last literary program a week from next Friday. The closing months of the school year are rather strenuous ones in class and, aside from this, it is not considered best to permit the assembly room to become so badly crowded as it usually does at these gatherings.

Warren is coming over en masse next Friday evening to play our boys the return game of basketball. Two or three other contests will also take place and all interested in clean athletics should attend and enjoy the fun.

Below is presented an ordinary 40 minute monthly test in the second year high school English class. How many grownups could make 75 per cent on this in the time allotted?

1. What is the plot of the novel? What are the essentials of a good plot? What are the uses of description and conversation therein? 2. What are the steps leading to the English drama? 3. Compare comedy and tragedy. What are climax and catastrophe? What are the unities? Tell what each means. 4. Discuss legend, allegory, and ballad, giving examples of each. 5. Name and define the six kinds of poetic feet. Diagram each.

Here is another test on sugar recently given one of the cooking classes in high school: 1. Name groups of Sugar and divisions into kinds, giving examples of each. 2. Describe the manufacture of cane sugar. 3. What are inversion and commercial glucose? 4. In what form is sugar digested? 5. Why is sugar included in the diet of the United States army.

An important meeting of the Citizens is called for Thursday evening of this week at the high school building. The board of education has collected a mass of information dealing with the school building problem in Thief River Falls which the members wish to present to the public for their consideration. The people at this meeting will announce their dictum as to what further action they desire the board of education to take.

State Truant officer Walz has notified the school authorities that he will visit this city the latter part of the week. A number of children of school age are absent from school without excuses and it is probable that the state will make trouble for the parents of these children. As there is no local truant officer, the state has authority to step in and enforce the compulsory school law.

I. O. O. F.—Young Pine Lodge No. 221, meets every Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock at hall, corner of LaBree avenue and 2nd street. Visiting brothers invited.

The Wise Judge

A Story of How President Lincoln Rectified an Injustice.

By JOHN JOYCE.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

In 1863 I was with the cavalry in the Army of the Potomac. I confess I never made a good soldier. I was too fond of an irregular life. I could never be disciplined. When the command was asleep I would be off on some adventure. There was a southern girl south of us, her home being most of the time within the southern lines, who captivated my youthful fancy, and I was constantly absent without leave visiting her.

On one occasion I would surely have been captured by some Confederates who called at the house had she not put me upstairs in one of the bedrooms. There I found some citizen's clothing and, putting it on, went down and mingled with the soldiers.

I gained some very important information from them about the enemy's movements, for I passed myself off for a redhot Confederate. They belonged to Jubal Early's command and told me that they were the advance of his force, intending to sweep around in our rear.

As soon as they had gone I rode away to my general and told him what I had heard. He sent out orders with a view to defeat their purpose, then said to me:

"I've been wondering for some time where I could get a man like you. I want some one for secret service work. I can get plenty of hired spies, but I dare not trust them. They will take my money to bring me information and take the Confederates' money to bring them information. But from what you have told me you're just the man for secret service work. Most men have a dread of being caught in citizen's clothes, with the penalty of swinging. You don't seem to mind the risk at all. Now, I wish you to go down on our left and find out what the enemy is about down there. I have reports that there is no force in that region at all, and I have reports that the enemy is concentrating there. Can't you go at once?"

"Yes, general," I said. "Shall I report your orders to my captain?"

"You were absent without leave on this little expedition, weren't you?"

"Yes, general."

"Well, you can continue absent without leave. If you report to your captain the men will know that something is up in your case and talk it over. I don't like any talk at all about secret service work. Besides, if you do well I shall make a regular secret service man of you, attaching you to these headquarters."

"Won't my comrades think I have deserted? I've always been in trouble with my captain—my own fault, of course, because, being of a roving disposition, I always objected to regular duties."

"That's just what I wish them to think of you. It will keep them from thinking anything else."

"But, general, if I should come back into our lines and not find you to vouch for me"—

"I'll fix that."

He sat at a table and scratched off an order attaching me to his headquarters and handed it to me.

"There," he said, "do what you like with that. But don't get caught with it on you in the enemy's lines or it will hang you."

I took the paper, put it in the lining of my hat and, with a godspeed from my commander, rode away into the darkness.

The first thing for me to do was to get citizen's clothes. I could do this and see my girl again at the same time. So I rode straight to the house where she lived with her mother, a widow, and a family of younger children. I awakened the household and told the girl that I wanted the clothing I had found upstairs and which she had told me belonged to a brother of her mother's who lived with them, but who was now in General Jackson's army. Both mother and daughter were rebels and wouldn't have given me the clothes had I not told them a cock and bull story about Confederates being after me. As soon as I was rigged out as a Virginia farmer, leaving my horse in their barn and my uniform in the garret of the house, I marched away on foot in a southwesterly direction toward the region I was to look into.

I had no sooner reached it than I saw indications of an important move on the part of the Confederates. The location was swarming with troops. My object was to return at once and report the fact to the general, but there were several things about me to lead them to suspect me. I couldn't talk like a southerner, didn't look or act like a southerner and told contradictory stories about my antecedents. Seeing that they were uncertain about me, I told them that what I most wished for was to fight for Dixie. So they enlisted me, and I thought I was all right. I was so fearful of being accused of desertion on my return that I kept the general's order concealed under the thin leather strip inside and over the sole of my boot, but as soon as I was suspected I hid it under a stone, marking the spot carefully.

I found myself marching with the very force I had come to spy upon against the very general who had sent me. There was a series of battles, with much slaughter on both sides. I watched for a favorable opportunity to regain my own comrades, but none occurred. The truth is my captain was watching me. At last the whole brigade to which I belonged was surrounded and captured.

I realized that I was in a precarious situation. All depended upon my communicating with the general who had sent me on my mission. What was my horror to learn that he had been killed in one of the recent battles.

All now depended on my not being recognized, but this hope failed me, for an enlisted man who knew me was one of our guard. He saw me and informed my captain. The captain came to see me, took me away from the Confederates and preferred charges against me for desertion and fighting against the United States.

The battles were ended for the time being, and a court martial to try me was speedily convened. There could be no greater offense in an army than the double one of desertion and being captured with arms in one's hands on the other side. I told my story, and, as I expected, it was not believed. My captain's testimony against me was very damaging. I spoke of the general's written order, which I had hidden within the enemy's lines, but it was regarded as a clumsy device. I was convicted and sentenced to be shot. I petitioned for a stay of execution of the sentence till I could have opportunity to secure the hidden order, but there had been a great deal of desertion, and I and several others were to be made summary examples for the army.

Whenever I hear people talking about "justice" and the difficulty of punishing crime on account of too much sentimentalism it makes me shudder. I was to be shot for serving my country only too well. And now at the end of half a century I look back with reverence to two people (one of whom was instrumental in saving me and the other saved me) as representatives of that class who would govern by kindliness and mercy rather than on principle. These two were my mother and President Lincoln, himself a martyr struck down by one who madly looked upon him as a tyrant.

Upon inquiry I learned that President Lincoln alone possessed the pardoning power, but that the generals who wished to maintain discipline in the army were doing all they could to prevent his exercising this prerogative in the cases of deserters. So I did not think it worth while to make an application. I wrote my mother of my situation, assuring her of my innocence, but telling her that I had little hope that I would escape a disgraceful death.

The poor old lady was advised by friends of President Lincoln's kind heart, and she left her quiet home to go to Washington to try to force her way, as she was told she would have to do, through officials and doorkeepers, with the hope that she might secure justice—real justice—from the head of the nation.

When she reached the capital she knew not what to do, so she followed a simple method that suggested itself to her. She wrote the president that she had come to Washington to ask him to see justice done to her soldier son, that his life might be spared for his country and for her. In a homely way she wrote the story, embodying the main points that I have given and asking that my execution might be deferred till I could secure the hidden order. When she had finished her letter, not doubting in her innocence that she would be accorded an interview with the president, she mailed it.

Within forty-eight hours a note came from one of the president's private secretaries stating that Mr. Lincoln would see her the next day at 12 noon. Alternating between hope and despair, she went to the White House at the appointed hour. When she was ushered into the president's private room he was sitting at a desk, while his two little boys were climbing all over him. My mother said afterward that they reminded her of the Lilliputians climbing over Gulliver. Mr. Lincoln rose—he was so tall that she thought he would never cease rising—and, taking her by the hand, led her to a seat.

"I have called for the papers in the case of your son," he said, "and had them examined and a report made to me. I have issued an order for a stay of execution until such time as a search can be made of the location where he hid his order. Meanwhile he is to be returned to duty."

My mother looked upon the result as still dependent upon finding evidence that would prove me innocent. But she was soon informed that it was equivalent to dropping the case against me. I was far more delighted with it than I would have been with a pardon. The moment I heard it I made a vow that I would go through fire and smoke to secure that order and would send it to the wisest of human judges, who had given me my life and an opportunity to prove his wisdom.

On being returned to duty I applied to my captain for permission to go on a hunt for my evidence. He told me to put my request in writing and he would forward it. I did so, and my petition came back with the coveted permission indorsed on it. Disguising myself, I again risked my life by going among Confederates and made straight for the stone under which I had hidden my paper. I found it, though dampened and blurred, still legible. Then I made my way safely back to camp.

From having been considered a deserter I was suddenly elevated to the position of a very daring fellow. I sent my order to President Lincoln and received a reply in his own handwriting.

What became of the southern girl? Oh, she's my old woman!

AFTER THE COLLISION.

Effects Upon the Nerves of Wrecks Upon the Rails.

A wreck sometimes upsets even the most iron nerved. Once the wreck master on his arrival noticed a bareheaded man in overalls, covered with coal dust and blood, sitting beside his engine with tears running down his face. He recognized him as the engineer, who had been hauled out a few minutes before from under the mass of twisted, battered steel that had once been a locomotive. Singularly enough, beyond a few cuts and bruises he was unhurt. He was crying because he could not find his cap that he had bought new that day and begged the wreck master to help him hunt for it.

A passenger conductor of a train that was derailed and had plunged down an embankment crawled out of the confusion and rendered cool and efficient help during the half hour before the wreck train arrived. A little later the wreck master chanced to look around and saw the conductor standing beside him holding a matchbox to his ear and shaking it. Presently he put it back in his pocket, but took it out again in a moment and repeated his action.

"What's the matter with you?" asked the wreck master.

"My watch has stopped. I can't get it to going, and I don't know what time it is," answered the conductor, still listening to his matchbox.

The wreck master took the conductor by the shoulders and shook him roughly. Then he "came to."—Thaddeus S. Dayton in Harper's Weekly.

MADE SURE OF IT.

The Gift Was Delayed, but the Groom Got the Bird.

A wealthy patron of the turf in New York told an amusing story of a favorite groom and a turkey.

"I had once promised this groom," he said, "a Christmas turkey, but somehow in the rush and flurry of December I forgot it. It was some days after Christmas when I remembered how I had overlooked my faithful old friend.

"Meeting him in the paddock one morning and intending to make good my forgetfulness, I said to the groom by way of a joke:

"'Well, Jenkins, how did you like that turkey I sent you?'

"'It was a very fine bird, sir,' said the groom. 'I came very near losing it, though.'

"'How so?' said I, astonished.

"'Well, sir,' said Jenkins, 'Christmas morning came, and your turkey hadn't reached me, so I rushed right off to the express company and asked the manager what he meant by not sending the bird up. The manager apologized, sir, very politely, and he took me into a back room, where there were ten or fifteen turkeys hanging, and he said the labels had been lost off them and I'd just better take my choice. So I chose the largest, sir, knowing your generosity, and it was fine. It ate grand. Thank you very much indeed, sir.'"—Washington Star.

Commas.

The French do not, as a rule, employ inverted commas to indicate a dialogue, but they employ the dash to indicate a change of speakers, which is just as bad. Certainly many punctuation marks are sadly misused or overused. Dickens flung unnecessary commas all over his pages—whole battalions of them. Walter Pater also employed them with extraordinary prodigality, frequently before the word "and" where the conjunction rendered them superfluous. Pater was also overfond of the mark of exclamation, so that when he drops a "Yes" into his measured style it must needs appear as "Yes!" But, though the Bible does without inverted commas, there is real art in its punctuation. How admirably it marks the cadence and helps the drama in that great story of the prodigal son!—London Chronicle.

Culpeper's Remedies.

Old time physicians prescribed even more unsavory remedies than rancid butter, which was Emperor Menelik's cure for malarial fever. In "Culpeper's Herbal," published originally in 1656 and reprinted as recently as 1820, are such prescriptions as "oil wherein frogs have been sodden till all the flesh is off from their bones," "horse leeches burned into powder" and "black soap and beaten ginger." Some of Culpeper's remedies are of a more practical nature. "If redhot gold be quenched in wine," he says, "and the wine drunk it cheers the vitals and cures the plague. Outwardly used it takes away spots and leprosis."

Making It Pleasant For Her.

Mrs. Goodsole (removing her wraps)—I've owed you a call for a long time, you know. I hate to be in debt, and I just felt that I couldn't rest easy until I had discharged my obligations by coming to see you. Mrs. Sliptung—Why, my dear Mrs. Goodsole, you shouldn't have felt that way at all.—Chicago Tribune.

Paid Him Back.

The Mean Thing—You're so conceited, Connie, that I believe when you get into heaven the first question you'll ask will be, "Are my wings on straight?" Connie—Yes, dear, and I shall be sorry that you won't be there to tell me.—Illustrated Bits.

Now They Don't Speak.

Belle—How silly men act when they propose! Why, my husband acted like a perfect fool. Nelle—That's what everybody thought when your engagement was announced.—Cleveland Leader.

THE NEWS

BY JOHN W. EASTMAN

ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

James A. Patten announces that he has all the money he wants and will retire from business. This will come as a sad blow to the people, who have been expecting Patten to follow the usual custom of refusing to be satisfied until it was all dropped back, where it came from.

The Republican State convention will probably be held on the 15th of June this year and it will be one of the most interesting conventions held in this state in years. Not only will there be a contest for nearly every office, but the biggest fight will probably be over the platform.

A PECULIAR PEOPLE.

Our neighbor to the northward, —"The Lady of the Snows",— about a decade ago found herself with a most perplexing and peculiar problem on her hands. John Arbuthnotte tells all about it in HUMAN LIFE for March, in an able article on "The Strange Case of the Dukhobor in Canada".

The religious beliefs of this strange sect are profoundly interesting and worthy of respect in many ways. The founder, a mysterious being, wise and gentle it is said, appeared among them about two hundred years ago, and taught them spiritual ideals that are among the purest and loftiest found in any religion in the world. Whence he came none know, and already his history is shrouded in legendary myth. Having no written documents, however, and being densely ignorant and stolid, many strange and wholly inconsistent beliefs have crept in.

Like the Quakers one of their chief doctrines is peace, and the crisis of their prosecution by the Russian government came with the Crimean War. Whole companies of Dukhobors laid down their arms when they found themselves in battle, and instead of firing sang psalms.

The story of their migration in a great body to Canada, the changes that their location on the fat soil of the Northern prairies is working in them, and the manner in which Canada is working out this problem of assimilating an alien people is a most interesting study.

Nature makes the cures after all.

Now and then she gets into a tight place and needs helping out.

Things get started in the wrong direction.

Something is needed to check disease and start the system in the right direction toward health.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with hypophosphites can do just this.

It strengthens the nerves, feeds famished tissues, and makes rich blood.

BILL PASSED IN HOUSE

Settlers Living on Eleven Towns Are Given Another Years' Time.

Will Not Have to Prove Up Until Eight Years After Filing.

Congressman Steenerson on Monday secured the passage of a bill in the house of Representatives extending the time of payment for land on the eleven towns. No interest is to be charged. A few years ago Mr. Steenerson secured an extension of time of one year, so that the total extension is now two years. The extension also extends the time in which final proof has to be made two years. The bill as it passed the house was a part of the Indian appropriation bill, so that it is sure to pass the senate without any further difficulty.

Corn for Northern Minnesota.

The Experiment Station at St. Anthony Park has developed a corn suitable for planting in Northern Minnesota, known as Minnesota No. 23. Two years experience with it has shown good results. The Experiment station is offering this corn to northern Minnesota farmers for 50 cents a peck, and limiting the supply to each farmer to a single peck. This method of distribution will hold good while the supply lasts. The variety is a White Cap Yellow Dent, and in the neighborhood of Crookston, Tenstrike, Grand Rapids, Carleton and Wadena last year yielded from 25 to 30 bushels corn per acre. Write early to the Experiment Station, St. Anthony Park, Minn. This corn is not recommended for southern Minnesota.

A MEETING IS CALLED

School Board Desires to Have Public Meet This Evening at High School.

New School House Will Have to Be Built This Summer.

A mass meeting of citizens has been called to meet at the high school building tonight at 8 o'clock for the purpose of discussing the subject of building a new school building. The meeting is called by the board of education and it is the desire that an attendance as large as possible be present, and ladies are also invited.

The school population of the city has been growing at a rapid rate and today all of the rooms are crowded to their full capacity and store buildings have had to be rented. The school board has had prepared a plan for a new school house to be located upon the northwest corner of the high school grounds and it is the desire to have citizens generally turn out and express their oppinion regarding the matter before a special election is called to vote bonds to erect this building.

A Freak Calf.

Emil Larson, of the town of Bray, was in the city Monday, and brought with him a calf that had been born upon his farm and which will be mounted by K. Runnestrand, the local taxidermist. The calf is a great freak in that it has two well developed heads, two backs and two tails. It has four legs, three of which are hind legs and one foreleg. The calf is an unusually large one and when born was alive. It is a decided curiosity and Mr. Larson intends to sell it.

Postponed Opening.

The date of opening the new auditorium has been postponed until about the 15th of April, as it is not believed the building will be finished much before that date. Just what the opening attraction will be is not known definitely, but the committee has hopes of securing the "Royal Chef," a comic opera.

Germantown Store Organized.

Some fifty-six farmers met at Germantown last Friday and organized the Germantown Co operative store company. This is similar to the co operative store organized in this city, and the company will purchase the business of Vaughan Bros. & Co. The following officers were elected:

President—John Phillips.
Vice President—J. A. Payne.
Secretary—N. Bundhund.
Treasurer—Fred Sole.

Have You a Friend Afflicted With Asthma?

Frank S. Archibald, of West Swansey, N. H., writes:—"For the past five years I have suffered with Asthma almost constantly. I was so nervous at times I could hardly remain in my school. This disease coupled with the nervous strain to which teachers are always subjected made life almost unbearable. During a visit to my home in Hinsdale, Mr. Mann, a local druggist, called my attention to your White Wine of Tar Syrup. At first I was skeptical as I had tried almost everything with no permanent help. Finally I took home a bottle and the cure it effected seems almost miraculous to me after my former repeated disappointments.

Capt. Bogardus again hits the Bull's Eye

This world famous rifle shot who holds the championship record of 100 pigeons in 100 consecutive shots is living at Lincoln, Ill. Recently interviewed, he says: —"I have suffered a long time with kidney and bladder trouble and have used several well known kidney medicines all of which gave me no relief until I started taking Foley's Kidney Pills. Before I used Foley's Kidney Pills I was subjected to severe backache and pains in my kidneys with suppression and often-times a cloudy voiding. While upon arising in the morning I would get dull headaches. Now I have taken three bottles of Foley's Kidney Pills and feel 100 per cent better I am never bothered with my kidneys or bladder and once more feel like my own self. All this I owe solely to Foley's Kidney Pills and always recommend them to my fellow sufferers". Sold by All Druggists.
